CLEOPATRA, ALMOST EMPRESS OF ROME

By EARLE KEZARTEE STANTON, Los Angeles

(A paper submitted to the A. N. A. Convention at Chicago, 1943)

Cleopatra was the first Egyptian queen to exercise the right of coinage in her own behalf, and one of the very few feminine rulers of ancient times to enjoy that important privilege. This fact alone, although perhaps the least important of her royal acts, entitles her to numismatic consideration. However, when we consider that she married the two greatest rulers of her time, namely Julius Caesar and Marc Antony to whom she remained loyal during their respective lifetimes; that she held her throne for some twenty years at a time when thrones were anything but secure, and only by a narrow margin twice escaped being the first empress of the great Roman empire, it will be conceded that she was one of the most interesting characters in all history.

Although the coinage of Cleopatra was actually quite extensive, the coins bearing her portraits are rare and in great demand. She was the seventh of that name in the Egyptian Ptolemaic line and some of these ladies had been numismatically portrayed long before her time, but merely as the wife of a ruler, never in their own right as monarch. Some of them may have been more beautiful than Cleopatra the Great, but in no sense so interesting. A rare gold octodrachm struck by Ptolemy II (285-246 B. C.), pictures on one side himself and his wife Arsinoe II while the other side shows jugate pictures of Ptolemy I and his queen, Berenice I. Ptolemy II and Arsinoe were also brother and sister.

Cleopatra the Great was born in Alexandria in 69 B. C., thus being almost thirty years older than Julius Caesar. She was not an Egyptian but pure Macedonian Greek directly descended from Ptolemy the First who in turn was reputed to be an illegitimate son of Philip II the father of Alexander the Great. Cleopatra's father, Ptolemy XIII, called Auletes, the flute player, had been recognized by Rome as King of Egypt and upon his death in 52 B. C., Cleopatra, then aged seventeen, ascended the throne in association with her brother. It was not until 48 B. C. that Cleopatra was established and recognized as sole Queen of Egypt and this came about through the direct agency of Caesar then personally present in the Egyptian capital. There was apparently an Egyptian marriage between these two outstanding rulers and the next year their son Caesarion was born who was later to be murdered by Augustus. The queen followed Caesar to Rome and had lived there some two years at the time of the dictator's murder in 44 B. C. In the confusion which followed she returned to Egypt and about three years later married Caesar's close friend Marcus Antonius with whom she remained until their deaths by suicide in 30 B. C.

The real Cleopatra seems to have been about as different as possible from the popular concept. Her association with Caesar and the fact that he had placed her statue in the Forum Julii had made the queen exceedingly unpopular at Rome and her later marriage with Antony, who presented her with valuable parts of the Roman Empire, had greatly intensified the Roman hatred. Consequently they did not speak well of her and the so-called "Siren of the Nile" was given a most opprobrious reputation. History does not in the least bear out this reputation.

Cicero spoke of her as "that woman" and complained that she was proud and haughty, but when did the great Cicero ever like anyone except himself? So far as Cleopatra's morals are concerned, history seems to indicate that she was considerably better than average at a time when morals, at least as we understand them, were at a very low ebb. Cleopatra was evidently no more of a siren and enchantress than the good Queen Elizabeth, in fact the comparison may not be such a bad one.

The biographer Emil Ludwig calls Cleopatra "the most beautiful female figure the Mediterranean has produced." The profile portraits on her coins, however, do not indicate excessive facial beauty, but rather bear out the historical evidence that she was a talented and able queen, well qualified to be the consort of such strong-minded dictators as Julius Caesar and Marc Antony. Plutarch probably gives a better description of Cleopatra when he says, "Her actual beauty was not in itself so remarkable that none could be compared with her, or that no one could see her without being struck by it; but the contact of her presence, when one got to know her, was irresistible. The attractions of her person, combined with the charm of her talk, and the distinctive character of all she said and did, was something bewitching. It was a pleasure merely to hear the sound of her voice, especially as she could pass from one language to another, and could speak without an interpreter to Ethiopians, Bedouins, Jews, Arabs, Syrians, Persians, and many others," in addition to speaking Greek, Roman and Egyptian.

The first coins struck by Cleopatra were undoubtedly tetradrachms of the standard Ptolemaic type bearing the portrait of Ptolemy I and the characteristic Egyptian eagle on the reverse. Her name does not appear on these coins but they are marked with her own regnal dates from the year 1 (A) to the year 22 (KB) and inscribed with the name of Ptolemy, which of course was her family name. They also bear certain distinctive symbols such as the head dress of Isis which enable them to be identified as her coins and distinguished from the many earlier coins of similar type struck by her forebears.

Coins bearing the portrait of Queen Cleopatra seem to have first appeared about the year 46 B. C., a drachma being issued from the Egyptian mint together with copper coins in two sizes representing 40 and 80 copper drachmae. The queen was then about twenty-four years old but the profile coin portraits make her look considerably older, with a firm chin and a large nose.

Caesar's untimely end, March 15, 44 B. C., at the bloody hand of Brutus, Cassius and the other senatorial conspirators, undoubtedly prevented Cleopatra from becoming the first Roman empress or queen, but her last chapter in Roman history was still to be written. It will be remembered that under the triumvirate arrangement between Antony, Octavian (Augustus) and Lepidus, Antony at his own request was given absolute imperium over the rich Eastern domains, Octavian assuming control over Italy and the west. Therefore whatever love element may have been present, Antony's marriage with Queen Cleopatra was a shrewd political move on the part of both parties. Antony's military campaigns in the East needed the gold and grain of Egypt, while Cleopatra secured much needed Roman protection for her own throne and for Caesarion, her son by Julius Caesar. There is a rare copper coin from the island of Cyprus which pictures Cleopatra holding the young Caesarion who was known as Ptolemy XVI.

Unpopular as Cleopatra had been before, her union with this second great Roman, Marc Antony, was almost more than the Roman people could bear, particularly in view of the fact that her Antony deserted his Roman wife, Octavia, who was the sister of Augustus. (This would be much like Willkie marrying Roosevelt's sister and then running off with Queen Wilhelmina or Aimee Semple McPherson.) It is therefore not strange that the Cleopatra portrait coins were issued from the Eastern colonies controlled by Antony rather than from Rome.

From Berytus, or Beyrout, the Syrian port, we find an issue of copper coins bearing the head of Cleopatra on the one side and that of Antony on the other side. Similar coins with both of their portraits were also issued from Tripolis in Syria, and rare tetradrachms from Antioch with their pictures. Other portrait coins of Cleopatra emanate from Ascalon and Patrae, and from Damascus there are three types of copper coins, two of them bearing Cleopatra's face and one with the head of Caesarion. The Damascus coins were struck between the years 36 and 32 B. C.

The most popular of all Cleopatra portrait coins is undoubtedly the silver denarius of Roman type, struck about 34 B. C., most probably at Athens or at Ephesus, which bears on either side excellent likenesses of Cleopatra and of Marc Antony. Shortly before this issue Antony had made an unsuccessful attempt to conquer Parthia, and in order not to be obliged to return home empty handed, invaded Armenia and brought back to Egypt as a captive, his former ally, King Artavasdes, whereupon a great triumph was celebrated. Antony then proclaimed Cleopatra the "Queen of Kings" as she is denominated on this denarius, and crowned her children as kings of various countries.

Only four more years of life were left to Antony and Cleopatra and these were to be tempestuous and tragic ones ending with their double suicide in 30 B. C. The history of these years is well known, how at the battle of Actium, Sept. 2, 31 B. C., Augustus and his great general

Marcus Agrippa engaged the superior forces of Antony and Cleopatra; how in the thick of the battle and before its outcome had been decided, Cleopatra sailed out of the bay with her fleet and Antony followed her, a situation which has never been quite adequately explained. Antony and Cleopatra, crushed by this signal defeat on land and sea, retired to Alexandria, to be pursued there by the victorious Augustus.

Presumably the last coins to be struck by either Antony or Cleopatra were the legionary denarii struck not long before the battle of Actium to pay the troops. These are of base silver and were said to contain iron. The names of the various legions appear on these coins, most of which are rather common. They do not however bear the portraits of either Antony or Cleopatra.

Olympus, who was Cleopatra's private physician, has given a somewhat detailed account of the queen's last days, in his diary which is recorded by Tacitus. Her great love for Antony is expressed in her statement made after his death and on the day on which she took her own life, as follows: "O, dearest Antony, it is not long since with these hands I buried you. . . . Nothing could part us while we lived, but death seems to threaten to divide us. . . . Do not allow your living wife to be abandoned; let me not be led in this triumph to your shame, but hide me, hide me, bury me here with you. For among all my bitter misfortunes, nothing has been so terrible as this brief time that I have lived without you."

A LIVE ORGANIZATION

The Albany Numismatic Society has published (November, 1943) a 24-page roster of its membership, which also contains a catalogue of its library, its constitution and by-laws, a list of the formal papers presented to the Society since organization in 1936, and a number of useful "suggestions for beginners."

The membership is now 71, 19 of them being in Albany and immediate vicinity, all but four of the remainder living elsewhere in the State of New York. It is commendable that 25 of its members (over one-third) are also affiliated with the American Numismatic Association.

With each name appears the member's number, date of joining, address, occupation, and numismatic interests. We note the name of a well known sculptor, Gertrude K. Lathrop of Albany, who designed the Albany and New Rochelle commemorative half dollars—1936 and 1938 respectively.

Their library might well be the envy of many older and perhaps larger clubs; well selected, especially strong in works on U. S. coins, but by no means neglecting foreign, both ancient and modern, it must be a source of great satisfaction to the members.

What should be an index of their genuine interest in numismatics is found in the subjects of the papers given during the past seven years. We have no means of judging the quality of their content, but a careful review of the fifty-one titles gives one confidence in their authors' ability to present something of definite merit.

I. BELGIUM

After the Peace of Arras in 1579, modern Belgium, then known as the Spanish Netherlands, was technically independent though ruled by the King of Spain. For a time in the early eighteenth century France controlled the provinces, but by the Treaty of Utrecht their autonomy was reestablished, though now they were handed over to the Austrian Habsburgs and became known as the Austrian Netherlands. Such was their status until 1792 when the French again invaded, and in 1794 Belgium and the Principality of Liège were incorporated into the French Republic. Occupation by the Allies came in 1814, and the Treaty of Vienna united them with the Netherlands in June of 1815.

This was an unhappy union. The two parts of William I's kingdom were given equal representation although there were only two million Dutch and three and a half million Belgians. They spoke different languages. The former were mainly Protestant; the latter largely Catholic. William was obstinate and uncompromising, and the Paris revolution of July, 1830, touched off a revolt against him in his southern provinces. A provisional government was established at Brussels, independence decreed, and the House of Orange excluded from the throne. When William appealed to the great powers, they decided against him and finally guaranteed Belgian independence in January, 1831. William was unreconciled, and not until 1839 was a final settlement made with the partition of Luxembourg between the two contenders.

In the meantime the throne had been offered to and accepted by Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg, who became King Leopold I in July, 1831. The following year he married the Princess Louise Marie, daughter of Louis Philippe, King of France. Leopold was a cultured man, an able administrator, and a ruler with sound judgment. The country prospered. A coinage system was set up in 1832 with the issuance of gold, silver, and copper coins in francs and centimes paralleling the existing French values. The first type of large silver appeared in this year and continued until 1849 when a second type with a better head and the national coat of arms was issued. For the wedding of his elder son, Leopold, the Duke of Brabant, to Marie Henriette, daughter of the Archduke Joseph of Austria, in August, 1853, a coin was issued with the king's portrait on the obverse and the young couple's busts on the reverse. These do not bear their value of 5 francs as they were not authorized by law, Parliament being in recess during the summer of 1853.

Leopold II succeeded his father on Dec. 10, 1865. His 5 franc pieces resemble closely those of the preceding reign. For the fiftieth anniversary of the kingdom commemorative pieces were issued with the heads of the two sovereigns. On the reverse a standing female figure, who bears in her right arm a tablet labeled "Constitution Belge," leans upon the Belgian lion seated at her left. In the background on the left is the Column of Congress erected in Brussels to commemorate the founding of the kingdom; and on the right is the Palace of Justice, also in Brussels. Again the nominal value of five francs is nowhere indicated. Leopold was also king of the Congo Free State and issued five franc coins for use there in 1887, 1891, 1894, and 1896.

Leopold's only son predeceased him by many years, and on the king's death in 1909 he was succeeded by his nephew. Albert issued no large size coins until near the end of his reign. By this time the first World War and several financial panics had completely altered the Belgian coinage system. A 10 franc or 2-belga piece in nickel appeared in 1930 to mark the centennial of the kingdom. This time the heads of Belgium's three kings occupy the obverse, and the reverse bears the value expressed either in French or Flemish. Belgium has always been a bilingual country—the people in the north and west speaking Flemish, a Germanic tongue, and the others French or its Walloon dialect. French had always been the official language until 1914 when Flemish was given equal rights. These coins of Albert recognize this change by being issued in the two languages. The following year there appeared a 20 franc or 4 belga piece also of nickel (par value c. 68c).

Albert was killed while mountain climbing and was succeeded by his son in February, 1934. The first large piece to be minted in Leopold III's reign was a 5 franc coin in silver which commemorates on the obverse the International Exhibition held in Brussels in 1935. The design pictures St. Michael trampling on a prostrate Satan. The reverse celebrates one hundred years of Belgian railways. The economic distress following the separation of Belgium and the Netherlands in 1830 with the consequent loss of the Dutch colonial markets had prompted the building of a network of railroads to aid commerce—among the first on the European continent. The design for this centennial coin portrays the Brussels railway terminal, and again two varieties occur, one with inscriptions in Flemish and the other in French. In 1939 appeared a regular issue of 50 francs in somewhat smaller size than the previous issue. The reverse bears the coats of arms of the various Belgian provinces.

The national coat of arms has a golden lion rampant on a black ground. The lion is similar to but less elaborate than that on the arms of the Netherlands. The national motto appears on many of the coins, "L'union fait la force"—"Union makes strength."

NUMISMATICS AS A HOBBY

The time has never been in the civilized world when men did not follow some particular pursuit or another for the mere pleasure of the following. Wherever the eye perceives beauty, the heart indicates desire of possession, and so spring up what are popularly termed hobbies, on which men ride for a lifetime—some to satiety, some to fruition, some to ruin.

When the desire for the collection of coins first grew to be fashionable is unknown. Probably it has existed to some extent ever since the introduction of coinage as a fine art. The desire to possess specimens of this new and important manufacture must have been strong in the breasts of the early Greeks and Romans.

Numismatics, while, no doubt an expensive hobby, is the most harmless, and the most educating and refining in its influences, that one could pursue.

The numismatist thinks of nothing but rare [?] coins, muses on them, dreams of them. His enjoyment involves all species of pleasure and mental excitement. He is a sportsman, a gamester, an artist, a detective, a critic, an expert. He follows the scent of a rare coin as a hound does that of a rabbit, and is never satisfied till he has traced it to its burrow. The passions excited are ambition, hope, desire, and envy, but never to any extent to be injurious. Your true numismatist is usually a man of gentlemanly instincts and scholarly attainments.

His associations are with men who think, reason, compare, sift evidence and judge. He is little likely to be gulled, being always on the lookout for counterfeits; still less likely to deceive others, having a wholesome contempt for base fabrication. On the whole, this hobby is one which should be encouraged, because it leads the workings of the mind into proper channels, trains the faculties, and educates and encourages a sound, healthful taste for the aesthetic.

MERIT AND PROFICIENCY MEDAL No. 1 WIRELESS SCHOOL BRITISH COMMONWEALTH AIR TRAINING PLAN

By J. DOUGLAS FERGUSON, Past President A. N. A.

(For much of the material contained in this article I am indebted to Squadron Leader K. R. Patrick, Chief Instructor of No. 1 Wireless School, and to Flying Officer A. H. Walls of the No. 3 Training Command of the Royal Canadian Air Force, Montreal. We are also indebted to the No. 3 Training Command for the illustration.)

King George VI has described the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan as "perhaps the most striking feature in the magnificent effort which Canada has made in so many directions toward winning the war."

President Roosevelt has described it as "one of the grand conceptions of the war, grand both in design and execution." In a message to a conference held in Ottawa in May, 1942 and attended by representatives of 14 United Nations, on the subject of Air Training, he referred to Canada as "the airdrome of democracy."

Operation of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan which turns out air crews for the Royal Air Force, the Royal Australian Air Force, the Royal New Zealand Air Force, as well as the Royal Canadian Air Force, is one of the principal responsibilities of the Royal Canadian Air Force. As of early this year (1943) more than 80,000 members of the Royal Canadian Air Force were engaged in the training plan, which is essentially Canadian, being administered by the Royal Canadian Air Force; 60 per cent of the graduates are Canadians.

Under the original agreement, Canada paid two-thirds of the total original cost of $900,000,000. A new agreement was signed in June, 1942. Under this new agreement, the plan was considerably enlarged. It will cost $1,500,000,000, 50 per cent of which will be paid by Canada. The United Kingdom will pay the remaining 50 per cent, less deductions representing payments made by New Zealand and Australia for the cost of training air crews.

The first member of the Royal Australian Air Force to win the Victoria Cross, Flight-Sergeant Rawdon Hume-Middleton, was trained in Canada.

Every single day in Canada men under training fly more than two million miles. More than 10,000 airplanes are in use in the plan. Scattered between stations all across the Dominion, the buildings of the plan are the equivalent of about 110 good sized towns and villages, completely equipped with all facilities for working, living, medical care and entertainment.

No. 1 Wireless School

The term air gunner is probably better known than that of wireless operator so far as aircraft jobs are concerned, yet both of these important positions in an aircrew are performed by the same man. When an air gunner is not squinting down the sights of his guns he performs the duty of operating the wireless equipment. Because of this he spends the bulk of his training period at a wireless school.

Of the training schools now operating under the British Commonwealth, Air Training Plan No. 1 Wireless School, located in Montreal, was one of the first to be opened. This was on February 12, 1940; Flying Officer (now Squadron Leader) K. R. Patrick was in charge of the advance working party, and Squadron Leader (now Wing Commander) H. B. Godwin opened the school and was commanding officer pending the appointment of Wing Commander Dubuc. The school is now commanded by Group Captain F. G. Webber.

At Initial Training School students are chosen for the various roles as members of air crew, and it is from such schools that air gunners come direct to the wireless school. Here training is given wireless operator air gunners, wireless operators ground, and wireless electrical mechanics. The wireless air gunner, or WAG, operates radio equipment in the aircraft besides defending the plane when necessary. On completion of his training at wireless school he goes on to a bombing and gunnery school. Wireless schools are operated directly by the Royal Canadian Air Force, who engage many civilians as instructors and for maintenance and auxiliary services.

As the name implies, wireless operators ground, are ground operators called upon to work complicated and powerful equipment, maintaining communication between air and ground, and between ground and ground station units. The WOG receives his preliminary training at a war emergency training plan school, formerly known as the Provincial Youth Training Plan School, before going on to the course at wireless school.

Chosen because of his particular aptitude toward radio maintenance the wireless electrical mechanic, or WEM, is selected from WOG classes. He receives additional training on the subject. This training compares favorably with fourth year university training. By only the greatest of application is the trainee able to complete the course successfully.

Leaders of classes are so recognized by the award of medals which are of gold, silver or bronze (see illustration), for first, second or third places. Not a service medal, this award is presented by No. 1 Wireless School for outstanding merit and proficiency. One set of medals is awarded to each 200 graduates in each trade. Certificates accompanying the medals are also awarded, outlining reasons for the award, course number, etc. First medals of the school were presented to L. A. C. Perlett of Vinden, Manitoba; L. A. C. North of Edmonton, Alberta, and to L. A. C. Fielding of Malden, Massachusetts, on November 6, 1941, by Air Commodore J. L. E. A. DeNiverville, Air Officer Commanding, No. 3 Training Command, R. C. A. F.

Climaxing the wireless course a full parade of over 1,000 airmen attend the ceremony for the presentation of class medals. More recently the awards have been made by Group Captain P. J. A. Hume-Wright, senior staff officer of No. 3 Training Command, and by Wing Commander R. M. Smith, and Group Captain F. G. Webber, Commanding Officers of No. 1 Wireless School.

Among recent graduates and winners of medals for the Wireless Operator Ground service have included members of the Women's Division of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

THE NEW CANADIAN FIVE CENT PIECE

Our alert District Secretary for Ontario, Norman B. Mason of Toronto, sends a clipping from the Toronto Daily Star of December 22, which will be of much interest. The tombac five cent piece of 1943 was most attractive in design, and while this new coin will evidently resemble it closely, no mention is made of the novel inscription (in code) which appeared around the edge of the field of the reverse of the 1943 issue, translated "We win when we work willingly." It is interesting to note that the Canadian Mint has decided to substitute steel, and the chromium finish should effectively prevent tarnish; the "twelve sided" shape is retained. Here follows the clipping:

"A new Canadian five-cent piece made of steel with 12 sides and a chromium finish will be put into circulation after Jan. 1, an order-in-council made public here today disclosed.

"The King's effigy with the inscription: 'VI D.G: Rex et Ind: Imp:' will be on the face of the new coin. On the reverse side will be the character 'V' and torch conjoined, emblematic of sacrifice and victory, between two maple leaves, and dividing the date of the year. The word 'Canada' will be above and 'cents' below. The V will also indicate the value of the coin.

"The order-in-council said the steel coin shall be accepted as a current five-cent piece in addition to the pure nickel and tombac coins.

"It is the third 12-sided coin to be issued in the last two years. Both the others were five-cent pieces, but of a bronze-copper composition that tarnished easily and made them look like one cent pieces.

"(Montreal banks reported an acute shortage of five-cent pieces, and said new supplies were difficult to get.)

"In using steel for coinage, Canada is following the example of the U. S. which issued steel one-cent pieces earlier this year. They, however, have caused difficulty because of their resemblance to 10-cent pices, particularly in Canada."

THE OLD CARSON CITY MINT IN A NEW GUISE

A few months ago the Editor received from Melvin O. Carmichael (A. N. A. 7605) of Klamath Falls, Oregon, an interesting letter telling of a visit just paid to the old Carson City Branch Mint building, now the Nevada State Museum. This was the fortunate beginning of a further investigation, and through the courtesy of Mrs. Percy Train, Curator of the Museum, we are able to present a half tone cut of the building, and to give a brief summary of its history.

On December 27, 1865, the Secretary of the Treasury (Hugh McCulloch) appointed Abe Curry (founder of Carson City), F. Rice, and John Mills as commissioners to establish a Mint at Carson City. Curry, who later was the first Superintendent of the Mint, promptly donated a city block as a building site; in July of 1866 official authorization was received and ground was broken, and in September the corner stone was laid by the Grand Lodge of Nevada, A. F. & A. M. Rock from the Nevada State Prison quarry was used in the construction, and on November 1, 1869, machinery was installed.

The first coins issued bear the date of 1870; in that year the face value of the various denominations struck is as follows: (gold) double eagles, $75,780; eagles, $59,080; half eagles, $38,375; (silver) dollars, $12,462; halves, $27,308.50; quarters, $2,085. Trade dollars were struck in 1873 to 1878, inclusive; 20 cent pieces in 1875 and 1876 only; dimes, 1871 to 1878, inclusive. Coinage was wholly suspended in 1886-7-8. In the 21 years of actual operation, the total mintage was: gold, $23,829,425; silver, $25,445,009.30.

Coinage was discontinued in 1893 and a Federal assay office remained in operation until the end of the fiscal year in 1933. In March of 1939 the Nevada Museum and Art Institute was organized in accordance with an Act of the Legislature, and in December of the same year the Mint building was purchased of the Government by the State of Nevada, to become the home of the new Museum. This was officially dedicated and opened to the public Nevada's Admission Day, October 31, 1941. Its original title was changed early in 1943 to Nevada State Museum. The extensive remodeling which was of course necessary has been completed, and from the illustrations in the printed biennial report of the Directors one must conclude the present arrangement is admirably suited to its purpose.

In the mineral room there are on display large replicas of the coins struck at the various Branch Mints, coins struck here in the Carson City Mint, a mould used for shaping the gold bullion bars, and the small iron wheeled truck used in hauling these from the melting to the weighing room is also here.

Among the notable exhibits is that installed in the Dr. S. L. Lee Room, a fitting memorial to an honored pioneer of Carson City. Successful in the practice of medicine, his great hobby was collecting, and on a broad scale. Minerals, semiprecious stones, ceramics from all over the world, fossils, firearms, Indian relics—and coins—all told, a remarkably fine and extensive collection, assembled over a long period of years and chosen with discrimination.

Mrs. Train writes that during this winter she hopes to place on exhibit at least a portion of the coins, which have been examined and attributed by Dr. Belote of the U. S. National Museum. Included are examples of Ancient Greek and Roman, medieval, modern, and U. S. coins and tokens.

Dr. Lee's death occurred in 1927, in his 83rd year. Seven years later his widow presented the collection to the state as a memorial to her husband; it was housed in the State Capitol until transferred to the Museum in 1941.

Five other large rooms are provided thus far, and a catalogue of their exhibits—all of them important as related to the state—is convincing evidence of intelligent planning and selection, and of a carefully charted course for the future. Public spirited citizens have had no small part in establishing this fine institution, and even in these, its early years, it is definitely a credit to the state whose history, resources and progress it is so ably recording.

FURTHER RESEARCH PROPOSED IN EARLY AMERICAN COINAGE

An intensive study of the coinages of several of the States, issued during the period following the Revolutionary War, is being made under the auspices of the American Numismatic Society, with a view to the ultimate publication of the results. It is common knowledge that many of these pieces have used the flans of earlier issues, and a thorough study of such over-striking has never been made. A collector who is interested in pieces in fine condition will have nothing to do with these over-strikes, for obvious reasons. Sometimes, however, the fact that the flan has been used a second time is not immediately apparent. This appeal, therefore, is directed to any interested in the colonial field, and is a request that they carefully examine their cents of New Jersey, Connecticut, New York, Vermont; Fugios, etc., and communicate their findings to the American Numismatic Society with an indication as to whether they would be willing to lend their specimens for a limited time for photographic or other recording. Only by making a cooperative effort can the necessary material and information be obtained. The aid of our readers is earnestly requested.

MORE QUESTIONS ON THE MARIA THERESA (LEVANT) THALER

By J. HUNT DEACON, Adelaide, South Australia

These further questions are raised in a hope that someone will be able to provide the answers, or submit theories, whereby more can be learned about this most interesting coin.

In the "Numismatic Circular" (Nov. 1934, Col. 407, No. 37199) there is described and illustrated a gold piece designated a 10 souverains d'or of Maria Theresa of 1780. It is an exact copy of the Levantine Thaler (variety A of my previous article), and said to have been struck on a polished flan and to be in brilliant condition. The piece is listed as a gold strike of the well-known Levant Thaler which circulated extensively in Abyssinia. The questions which one is prompted to raise about this piece are: Upon what authority can it be said to be a 10 souverains d'or? (A-1); has any other specimen been discovered, or is it unique? (A-2); what is its pedigree? (A-3); what is its weight? (A-4); what is its fineness? (A-5); can it be a trial piece (although it would be strange for a trial piece of a silver coin to be issued in gold)? (A-6); can it be regarded as a restrike (the fact of its being in brilliant condition on a polished flan rather suggests this)? (A-7); if a restrike, is it an official or unofficial issue? (A-8); what were the chief gold coins current in Austria at the time of Maria Theresa? (A-9); how does it compare with them in weight and fineness? (A-10); how many silver Levant Thalers were computed to be equal to the 10 souverains d'or? (A-11); and can it be regarded as purely a pattern coin? (A-12).

In Coin Topics (Jan.-May 1937, Issue Six, page 14) it is stated under the heading "Maria Theresa Thaler in Uncirculated Condition," "Two years ago the Italian government bought the dies and coinage privilege from Austria, and since when the thalers have been made at the Rome Mint . . . and in 1780 was introduced as a trade coin in the Eastern money mart."

The questions arising from these extracts are: What is the authority for the statement that the Italian government purchased the dies and privilege from Austria? (A-13); if "since then, approximately 1935 thalers have been issued from the Roman Mint," how is it that the Royal Mint Reports of 1934, 1935, 1936 and 1937 make no mention of the issue by the Italian government? (A-14); and how is it if the coining rights were procured by Italy that thalers were being issued from the mints of France, Belgium and England (see Mint Report 1938)? (A-15). I have already questioned whether the thalers were first issued in 1780.

In "Numismatique des Colonies Francoise" (Paris 1931, Sale Cat., issued by Alfred Page, page 26) it is stated, "In 1788 Gaillard, Director of the Marseilles Mint, was authorised by letters patent to make silver pieces for the Levant. The striking of these pieces was continued up to the end of the 19th century; they were used principally in commerce on the East Coast of Africa, but equally were current in Abyssinia, or Ethiopia, and Zanzibar." During what years were the Maria Theresa thalers issued from Marseilles? (A-16); how many were issued each year? (A-17); and were they issued from any other French mint? (A-18).

In the "Stephanik Cabinet" (Sale F. Muller et Cie, page 163, No. 5781) under Soumanap, there is mentioned a thaler tyrolien de Maria Theresa de 1780 (Schultesz 502), countermarked with an incuse oval, on which in Arabic is "Soumanap." Was this one of the Levantine thalers? (A-19); and were they known to have been countermarked in any other way? (A-20).

In "Numismatic Circular" (1930, Col. 29, No. 93140) it is suggested that thalers struck in 1780 did not have the letters S. F. under the bust. What is the authority for this statement? (A-21).

In the Numismatic Collection of the Melbourne Branch of the Royal Mint there is a Maria Theresa thaler (Levantine) countermarked with P. M. crowned. It is some time since I saw this specimen and I am hoping to obtain a rubbing of it and to be able to describe it in more detail at a later date.

We cannot pass over the exhibit of The U. S. Secret Service of especial interest to all paper money collectors; nor must we omit the exhibit from one of our boys at the front: David Bullowa.

An added feature to the exhibition was the get-together days. Through publicity and otherwise, the people from the different localities where our clubs were situated were invited to attend our show. For example, those from New Jersey and Westchester County were invited to attend on Saturday, October 23rd; those from the Bronx and Brooklyn to attend on Sunday, October 24th, and from New York on the 30th.

The attendance on these weekends was very gratifying to the Committee.

Special interest in the paper money was shown by many from the Federal Reserve Bank, Chase National Bank and the Guaranty Trust Company. In addition, the Invasion money brought out several interested in this field. One gentleman was a Columbia College professor who intended to speak on this subject to his classes of Special Service Army Men.

Our attendance during the Exhibition was about 500. This would have been greatly augmented if the weather had not been so inclement on our New York Day, October 30th. I am told that the Society gained two new members during the exhibition.

The New York Numismatic Club Sghia medal was given out on the opening day.

I must thank all exhibitors, and the American Numismatic Society and their entire staff for their splendid cooperation in helping to make our exhibition a success.

OUR 50-YEAR INDEX IS STILL AVAILABLE

DEATH OF JOHN M. OLIVER, A FORMER GENERAL SECRETARY OF THE A. N. A.

John M. Oliver of 30 Rochelle Street, Springfield, Mass., for nearly 40 years connected with Haynes & Co., widely known as a coin collector and possessor of one of the finest currency and presidential medal collections in the country, died November 11 in Springfield Hospital. He was 70 years old.

He founded the Springfield Coin Club in 1920 and four years earlier had been elected secretary of the American Numismatic Association, an office which he held until 1919 when he was chosen vice-president.

Born in Huntington, July 17, 1873, he was a son of John and Jane (Ferns) Oliver. His family moved to Salem, N. Y., when he was six. He was educated in Salem schools and Washington Academy in Salem and married Ruth Merritt of Amherst, December 3, 1896.

He was engaged in the clothing business in Amherst for a few years and in 1900 became associated with Haynes & Co. in Springfield, as chief fitter and superintendent of the tailor shop, retiring in 1939. He was a member of Hope Congregational Church, Hampden Lodge of Masons, Morning Star Chapter, Connecticut Valley Consistory and Mel-ha Temple Shrine.

The interesting "decoration" at the left is one provided by Hitler for distribution among his troops following an anticipated victory in North Africa; the victory was eventually achieved, but the disconcerting fact was that said victory was on the other side, and two truck loads of these souvenirs of a crushing defeat were found in the desert sands by Allied forces. The one illustrated was sent by Cpl. Andrew Nugent, R. C. A. S. C., of Toronto to his wife some weeks ago, and The Toronto Star, from whom the photograph was secured, told the brief story in a recent issue. It was through the courtesy of Norman B. Mason of Toronto, our District Secretary for Ontario, that our attention was called to the account.

NOTES ON FRACTIONAL CURRENCY SHIELDS

By TED R. HAMMER, Librarian-Curator A. N. A.
Burlington, Iowa

This is the story of the fractional currency shield invented by the Treasury Department in 1866 as a challenge to counterfeiters of fractional currency notes. The shield became a collector's item very early in its history.

Surprisingly little information is available today about the shields. The most amazing thing about them, however, is the low price they bring when available and too infrequently, in view of the rare notes found on them. Although a search of auction catalogues and dealers' price lists shows few offered during the past ten years (perhaps fewer were offered than almost any other United States item), they usually bring $30 to $40, despite the fact the notes they contain may catalogue at more than twice that amount, with a few reverses and obverses left over.

The shields, prepared by the Treasury Department primarily for use of banks for comparison with notes taken in contain 39 specimens, 20 obverses and 19 reverses. All are of the first, second and third issues, the shields having been made after the 15-cent Grant and Sherman notes appeared in 1866, and before the fourth issue which came out in 1869.

The shields contain two obverses of the three-cent note, showing both the light and dark curtain, and the one reverse which was the same on both varieties. They frequently contain four obverses of the third issue 50-cent note, Justice seated and Spinner bust, with only the two reverses—red and green. All shields contain two of the 15-cent essay notes, one printed and one autographed, as well as both autographed—and showing one green reverse and one of red. The remaining shields probably were destroyed by the Treasury Department in 1869, about the time the fourth issue appeared.

The Treasury Department had the shields printed, with 39 spaces for the notes. It was from the process of pasting on the notes by girls employed in the Department that the greatest number of varieties probably resulted, since several different arrangements are found.

Banks and other purchasers paid face value of the notes plus a small charge for the shield or frame. The obverses are redeemable at face, while the reverses are not.

No one can be certain now of how many shields were made or of the number in collections. The Treasury Department prepared far more shields than were needed, storing them in a small frame building, and many of these were damaged by rain which leaked in, and today bear the resulting stains.

An excellent description of the shield itself is available in the book, "Fractional Currency of the United States," by D. W. Valentine. The work was published by F. C. C. Boyd in 1924. Mr. Valentine's description of the fractional currency shield follows:

"A shield is an assortment of 39 closely trimmed specimens that the government mounted on a mat of heavy paper on which was engraved a large shield, surmounted by an eagle; at the right is number of arrows, and at the left is an olive branch with leaves and berries on it and a streamer on which is 'E Pluribus Unum.' Above the eagle are 13 stars in two curved rows, nine in the upper and four in the lower. The engraved shield seems to have been spaced as for stars and bars; in the space where the stars would have been are 13 specimens in three rows, four in each of the upper two and five in the third row; in the space where the bars would have been are 26 specimens arranged in six rows of four in each row, and below these under the second and third columns are the other two to fill out the space under the first and fourth columns is the Treasury seal. The assortment of 39 specimens was not all the same on each shield though the arrangement of denominations probably did not vary."

It is not unusual to find specimens which have been steamed off shields. Several owners told of paying $25 to $30 for shields containing notes with a catalog value of $70 to $90. Removal of rarities no doubt accounts for the scarcity of shields today.

About the time the shields were being made up the argument arose over the use of the Grant and Sherman likenesses on the notes. As a result of this argument, the use of portraits of living persons on paper money was prohibited. While it is probable that the shields may have been made and distributed before this argument came up, it is a fact that they still were being offered and sold by the Treasury after it was known the 15-cent Grant and Sherman notes were not to be circulated.

No study of the shields is complete without consideration of the 15-cent essay notes. Use of perforated first issue notes also must be considered, although it is quite possible many perforations were cut off by girls trimming the notes to fit the printed spaces. The perforated notes probably still were in circulation, although always scarce. Many bankers who remember quite well the first issues as well as other notes, cannot recall seeing the perforated 5-cent, 10-cent, 25-cent and 50-cent postage currency notes at all.

In replying to our request for information on shields, Mr. D. W. Bell, Under-Secretary of the Treasury, wrote in part:

"In response to similar inquiries, a search of such of the old records of the Department as were available was made, but detailed information regarding the shields was not disclosed. In a letter written by the treasurer of the United States on May 28, 1868, he stated:

"The shields of fractional currency . . . consist of the 34 pieces as stated on accompanying card, and in addition the 15-cent note with engraved and autographed signatures, and red and green backs, sent free of express charges for $4.50 each."

"In a letter dated February 15, 1919, the Director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing stated:

"In reply I beg to state that the shields to which you refer were made about the year 1867. The fractional currency notes were printed separately on the face of the shield, and comprised all the issues of fractional currency up to the time of preparing the shield. These shields were sold, as I understand it, by the Treasurer of the United States, but have not been sold for a great many years. In fact, in 1869, the Treasurer of the United States reported that he had destroyed the balance of the shields then in his possession."

The Treasurer apparently erred in using the term "34 pieces," since there are 39, including the four (two fronts and two backs) 15-cent notes. In his letter, the Director of the Bureau made what some may term a misleading statement when he wrote . . . "The fractional currency notes were printed separately on the face of the shield." The notes were printed separately and on one side only, and not by plates made for printing several notes. And the shields were printed uniformly, but the arrangement on all shields is not uniform. Not only other notes of the first, second and third issues were trimmed to fit the spaces on the shields, but the Grant and Sherman notes were cut likewise where necessary!

While numismatic journals these days carry numerous notes on current numismatic subjects, such apparently was not the case in the 1860's and 1870's. At least, it wasn't true so far as paper money and fractional currency in particular were concerned. This may have been due to a lack of "rag pickers" in that era, however. There is a surprising lack of printed information on this subject in magazines and catalogs of the period.

Mason's Monthly Coin and Stamp Collectors Magazine carried several advertisements of the publisher in 1867, offering the shields at $6 each. "The supply is not great," the editor said in one ad, and stated the 15-cent essay notes were not available "except on shields."

The American Journal of Numismatics (July, 1871) said: "Those of our friends who desire to obtain complete sets of the varieties and denominations of this [fractional] currency, as originally issued by the Treasury Department, can do so by remitting $8.65 to the Currency Bureau, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C. A full set consists of 32 pieces." This of course referred to crisp notes and not to shields.

Of the notes on the shields, all but those of the first issue bear the word "Specimen" on the blank side, and the printing sometimes may be seen even on notes mounted on the shields.

There were 9,016 of the 15-cent essay notes issued, according to George H. Blake, Jersey City, N. J., Treasurer of the A. N. A., author of the book "United States Paper Money" (1908) and a leading collector of and authority on the subject of paper money. Thus the 15-cent notes had a face value of $1,452.40. "Presumably most of them were used on shields," said Mr. Blake in a recent letter. If all were used on shields, it would mean 4,508 were made, since two specimens were used on each, so that two different signatures and a red and green reverse could be shown. There is no way of knowing how many of these notes were autographed and how many printed, but on the shields, the printed signatures appear more scarce than the signed notes.

Mr. Blake believes all the notes used on shields were printed on small sheets of paper, singly, although stating he cannot confirm this, pointing out that in some instances notes with wide margins were sold in sets. From Mr. Blake and other sources, we have definite knowledge the notes were pasted on the shields by girls, with the notes being trimmed to fit the uniform spaces.

One of the greatest differences in the shields studied was in the variation of autographed specimens. "I have owned at various times about three of these sets with wide margins . . . the single specimens come up at auction once in awhile," wrote Mr. Blake. We found no owners of shields with the 15-cent wide margin notes.

Mr. Blake reported the kind of paper used for these early notes was not always uniform. Some of the third issue notes were made on Confederate States of America watermarked paper, of which the A. N. A. treasurer lent me a sample. The watermark "CSA" frequently can be seen when these notes are held to the light. A ship carrying a supply of this paper from England failed to run the blockade, being captured by the North, which appropriated the CSA bank note paper for its own use. The Treasury Department used the paper in various ways—for currency, labels, envelopes and so on. Mr. Blake's collection includes labels with red printing: "FRACTIONAL CURRENCY. NO. —. 800 V's.—$400." The CSA watermark is plain on one of these. His collection also includes small envelopes used by the Department in mailing out fractional currency notes, and he has some of the wrappers with which small bundles were held together.

The shields were usually printed in grayish black ink, but Albert A. Grinnell of Detroit and others have them printed in light red or pink.

Only information that the remaining shields were destroyed by the Treasury Department was that contained in the 1919 letter which is probably authentic. Several authorities state that proof of destruction is not available.

In his book on paper money, Mr. Blake says 504 of the 15-cent essay notes had been redeemed and that many more must have been turned in since then, although detailed reports as to denominations redeemed are no longer made.

Philip H. Chase of Philadelphia, the noted authority on Confederate notes, wrote: "The history of these shields certainly has been interesting, and unfortunately there seems to be a number of conflicting ideas and legends about them." He has three shields, one with the specimen notes pasted on the shield, printed in black; the second printed in green, and the third in red. "The latter two are very scarce and have the rarer autograph signatures on some of the notes."

Paul E. Draper of Detroit has seen shields with three different backgrounds: "The shield proper on which was printed the stars, eagle and the Treasury seals. The commoner shields have a gray background, but I know of three with pink and one with a blue-green color. There are a number of varieties of the different signatures." He has two shields, which are not duplicates.

IF YOUR NUMISMATIST IS LATE

The demands of war have sharply reduced the normal force of postal employees, and many of the replacements are without experience; added to this is the abnormally heavy holiday mail—a combination that inevitably slows up delivery of second class matter. Disappointment and impatience naturally result, but after a month's issue is delivered to the Post Office as usual, we know of no way to speed up its distribution.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established.* The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Editor. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

DESIRABLE PUBLICITY

An interesting suggestion has recently come from W. H. Veit (A. N. A. 7943) of Visalia, California, to the effect that our members might secure the reprinting in their local papers of certain articles that appear from time to time in THE NUMISMATIST; and in this connection he asked permission to furnish A. T. Duffield's "The Nickel" (November issue) to his home newspaper, the inference being that its editor had consented to publish if no objection were offered.

Since neither the magazine as a whole nor any specific articles are copyrighted it would seem that no legal barrier stands in the way of republishing whatever may seem desirable. However, we have stated that the author's permission should be secured in advance, and when granted, both he and the magazine should be given full credit.

Reflecting on this suggestion, it appeals to us as having possibilities which have been unfortunately neglected in the past. An organization such as ours, more than a half century old, and international in scope (regardless of its corporate title), deserves far more legitimate publicity than it receives. Our membership numbers have just passed the 10,000 mark, and yet we have at present less than 4,000. We might well ask, What has become of the other 6,000? Death has taken its toll over the years, inevitably; but the loss of a great part of that 6,000 is yet to be explained. We need consider only those who still retain their interest in collecting, but have allowed their membership in the Association to lapse. The rest may be regarded as transients, a class common to all organizations.

The only benefit to be gained at this late date from the solution (if one can be found) is through avoidance, so far as possible, of everything which may have contributed to this lack of persistency. A member who is worth getting is surely worth keeping.

Why should we not set the goal at 10,000, to be reached in the course of another ten years? Efficient publicity—attractive, well directed, sustained, and shared in by all our members—would achieve this result. Our Director of Publicity, Mr. Lewis M. Reagan, is doing exceptionally fine work; but more team work from all of us is needed. We submit that one effective channel is that indicated in our first two paragraphs. There is hardly an issue of THE NUMISMATIST that could not be drawn upon or some article that would have a popular appeal if republished in the press. Editors as a rule welcome features out of the ordinary, and it is more than likely that thousands of readers could be reached every year by this means who would not otherwise have known of the existence of the Association—and among them some, at least, might eventually join the ranks of collectors and of the A. N. A. Persistency of existing membership—steadily increasing net gain—especial encouragement to the individual collector and to the smaller coin clubs, either actual or potential—and a continuing development in the official magazine as funds will allow: these are some of the fundamentals of success, and team work will make them possible.

ALLIED MILITARY CURRENCY

Major Joseph Moss, J. A. G. D., now in Washington, sends in the following circular issued recently by the War Department:

CURRENCY.—1. Army disbursing officers are authorized to exchange for authorized personnel within the provisions of Circular No. 130, War Department, 1943, as amended, Allied military currency notes, bearing the inscription "Issued in Italy," and regular Italian currency notes and coins. The approved rate of exchange for use in connection with such exchange transactions is 100 lire to the United States dollar.

2. Control measures have been established to restrict the circulation of Allied military lira currency and regular Italian lira currency to the areas of issue. Disbursing officers outside the areas of issue will limit exchange transactions to reasonable amounts and will ascertain the validity of the source of such currency notes and coins prior to acceptance for exchange.

3. The following information will be of assistance in identifying Allied military currency notes issued in Italy:

a. Allied military currency notes have been issued in denominations of 1, 2, 5, 10, 50, 100, 500, and 1,000 lire.

b. Notes in denominations of 50 lire to 1,000 lire are the same size as regular United States dollar currency notes, whereas notes in denominations of 1 lira to 10 lire are exactly one-half the size of the larger denominational notes.

c. The face of each note bears the legend "Allied Military Currency." The legend "Issued in Italy" appears in black type, and the denominational figure is similarly printed in the center and each corner. The serial number is printed in red type. Subsequent issues will also bear the denomination in English and Italian words.

d. The reverse face of each note bears the legends "Allied Military Currency," "Freedom of Speech," "Freedom of Religion," "Freedom from Want," and "Freedom from Fear."

e. Borders on the face of the notes are in the following colors:

1 lira, blue	50 lire, blue
2 lire, light purple	100 lire, violet
5 lire, green	500 lire, green
10-lire, black	1,000 lire, black

4. The following information will be of assistance in identifying regular Italian lira currency notes and coins:

a. State notes (biglietti di Stato) in denominations of 1, 2, 5 and 10 lire, are issued by the Italian Ministry of Finance. The notes carry two serial numbers on each half of the reverse face. Numbers on each half are identical with those on the other half. If any part of any of the four numbers are missing, the note will not be redeemed. The inscription "Regno d'Italia Biglietto de Stato a Corso Legale" must be complete on the face of the note.

b. Bank notes (biglietti di banca) in denominations of 50, 100, 500, and 1,000 lire are issued by the Bank of Italy. The notes have an arrangement of serial numbers similar to the State notes and are watermarked in white unprinted spaces. In addition, the notes carry a colored seal which coincides on both sides, and the seal must be complete. The legend "Banca d'Italia" must be complete on the face of the note.

c. (1) Italian coins in denominations of 5, 10, 20, and 50 centesimi are issued by the Italian Ministry of Finance.

(2) 100 centesimi equal 1 lira.

TO A. N. A. MEMBERS

About this time of year it occasionally happens that members send their annual dues to the Editor, when they should instead be sent to the General Secretary, M. Vernon Sheldon, 565 West Washington Blvd., Chicago 6, Illinois. We are, of course, glad to forward them, but it will expedite matters if the General Secretary receives them direct from the members in every case.

PRESIDENT MARTIN F. KORTJOHN

and his elective and appointive official family extend a warm handclasp to our three thousand seven hundred members at the threshold of the New Year. This handclasp will need to reach great distances in many cases—as far as England and continental Europe, as North Africa, India, China, Australia, New Zealand—and still other parts of the world, all remote from us in miles, but close, as never before, in a common cause. For them this New Year's greeting carries a hope that they may have a safe return from the crucible of a victorious war; and for the rest of us, may 1944 be a year of clear, realistic thinking, of genuine unselfishness, and of profound loyalty to the principles upon which our country was founded and upon which it has grown great.

CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

AKRON (OHIO) COIN CLUB—The Club held an open house meeting at the Portage Hotel, Akron, Nov. 13th, afternoon and evening.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The regular monthly meeting of the Society was held Monday evening, November 29, at the Hotel Avery, Boston, with President Pond in the chair and 14 members and one guest being present.

The question of the Society's cabinet located at the Boston City Club, and having been ordered out by the members at a previous meeting, was brought by the President. The delay in taking out the cabinet was caused by some of the members who were unable to attend the previous meeting not having had a chance to vote on the subject. As no further objection was raised the cabinet was ordered removed and placed in Mr. Chell-Frost's store, as previously voted.

Mr. Katen then spoke for several minutes on the coming meeting and dinner of the Milford (Conn.) Coin

Club, which is to take place the 3rd Thursday in December at Milford, Conn., expressing regret that Mr. Pond, who was to have been the speaker, could not attend owing to a previous engagement; and again cordially invited all members of the BNS to attend if possible, saying that if train was used he would personally see that auto service from New Haven would be supplied.

He also exhibited birthday gems and told the history of each one. The various gems mounted in gold and silver rings are used in the Orient as a medium of exchange and in many instances take the place of coins. Mr. Benton was introduced by Oce Curtis. Following the talk there was an interesting discussion period led by O. J. Turner, President of the club.

The following officers were recently elected to serve for the coming year: President, O. J. Turner, Minneapolis; Vice-President, E. J. Edwards, St. Paul;

Secretary, Julius A. Kurtz, Minneapolis; Treasurer, Hjalmar Carlson, St. Paul; Historian, Oce Curtis, Minneapolis.

—OCE CURTIS, Publicity Chairman.

NUMISMATIC AND ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY OF PHILADELPHIA—A stated meeting of the Society was held by invitation of Mr. Haslam, Mr. Henry and Dr. James Wister at the Franklin Inn Club on Nov. 29th at six o'clock. After a delicious dinner the meeting was called to order by Vice President Garrison in the absence of the President.

Mr. Norton, Curator of Numismatics, reported that our collection of coins at Memorial Hall is not properly guarded and should be moved to a safer location. He also reported on new acquisitions recently received from Mr. Haines, Mr. Garrison and Mrs. Woodhouse. These items are being kept in the vaults of Hornblower & Weeks. Mr. Norton spoke of the helpful activity of Mr. Norris in keeping our collection up to date. No inventory has been made of these coins since the death of Mr. Langenheim.

A general discussion then ensued in regard to our collection. The Committee appointed at the last meeting had no report. The members seem to feel that some better arrangement than the present one was highly desirable, but any change for the better would involve expenses beyond our means.

Mr. Haslam reported for the Programme Committee that there would be no December meeting. The Committee requests suggestions for the January and February programs.

During the summer Mr. Castor has been working on the proposed publication of papers recently presented to the Society. The Publication Committee is still in need of funds to complete this project. The Secretary also reported that the Society now has its full 75 members and therefore the Membership Committee need not report at the present time.

A recess was then taken to listen to an interesting illustrated lecture by Mr. Hooper, President of the Philadelphia Coin Club. His subject was "DENARII OF THE 12 CAESARS" and included portraits of the emperors in full color, as well as photographs of the coins. It was moved, seconded and unanimously carried that the Society express its sincere thanks to Mr. Hooper for his interesting and enlightening address.

Before returning to their homes the gentlemen present had an opportunity not only to inspect the coins which Mr. Hooper had been discussing, but they also were greatly interested in a splendid collection of half-cent pieces which he had brought with him. Twenty-two members and six guests were present.

—M. WISTAR WOOD, Secretary.

OMAHA COIN CLUB—103rd regular meeting; 11 members and two guests present, with President Blaufuss presiding.

A talk by Major Hosler on ancient Greek coinage was very interesting. He said the first knowledge of ancient coins dates back to about 700 B. C. Major Hosler mounts his ancient coins on small coin blocks so the description of each coin can be printed beneath the coin, which is sealed within a cellophane envelope. Then they are arranged by countries and alphabetically.

Exhibits:

Mr. Wilson: Complete set of unc. buffalo nickels and several unc. Jefferson nickels.

Mr. Johnson: An 1859 pattern small cent—a freak struck on a planchet too large, which left it in cup shape. 1797 English large two penny piece. Also several ancient coins.

—RAYMOND MOULTON, Secretary.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The 79th meeting of the Society was held on Monday evening, December 13, at the Benson Hotel in Portland. 19 members and 8 guests attended this, our last meeting of the year.

An interesting discussion took place in which President Bibler tried to clarify several terms used by collectors, to describe the condition of coins and their metal content. Several members also told how proof and uncirculated coins were obtained.

On display at this meeting was one of the "best known rarities" in the whole U. S. series, namely, a 1913 Liberty nickel in brilliant uncirculated condition. This coin was sent to our President for display at this meeting by Mr. J. V. McDermott of South Milwaukee, Wisconsin. It is one of the six known, and came from the late Col. Greene's collection.

Mrs. Effie Eltinge gave us a most interesting account of how Hetty Greene accumulated her immense fortune. It would seem that she was an eccentric of the first water and shrewd to the nth degree when it came to obtaining and holding money. Mrs. Eltinge further related how Hetty's son, the late Col. Greene, became a cripple for life, because his mother would not part with the money to give him proper medical attention. Col. Greene managed to obtain many rare coins for his collection and he did not hesitate to offer generous amounts of the money his mother so painstakingly accumulated, for the coins or objects of art that he desired. Even Col. Greene's money couldn't buy some of the coins he wanted—their owners would not sell.

Other interesting coins were exhibited by: Hugh Davenport who displayed some freak and off center small cents; Leonard Trythall, a 1932 gold eagle which one lucky collector will receive on Christmas; Henry Perry brought a fine set of Trade dollars and a general display of scarce U. S. coins; Howard Hughes brought two Leshar dollars, and there were others.

The following officers were elected for the year 1944: Felix Baronovich, President; Hugh Davenport, Vice President; Stephen Bibler, Secretary; Verl S. Bonebrake, Treasurer.

A lively auction, conducted by Leonard Trythall and assisted by John Wetzler, brought the meeting to a close.

—JOHN R. SLUSHER, Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—

The 102nd regular meeting was called to order at 8 p. m. by President Hooper on December 9th, in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, with 34 members and guests present.

Mr. Ballard presented a medal to the club, an engraved 10 franc Tunisian coin, sent to him by Corporal George Magee who is somewhere in North Africa. He also sent us a large Christmas greeting and three 10 centimes.

Mr. Ballard also reported in detail about a proposed medal of the Phila. Coin Club to be presented to men in the service and to anyone extending outstanding service to the Club.

The following men received a beautifully designed certificate of award, arranged by Mr. Davidson, for the most worthy display during each of the past three years: R. F. Ballard, 1941; Ira S. Reed, 1942; Mr. J. M. Enburg, 1943.

The Club appreciated the plate for the above certificates, donated by The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Exhibits:

Mr. Enburg—A framed certificate on the formation of the American Coat of Arms, 1776.

Mr. Hooper—A complete set of brilliant uncirculated standing Liberty quarters.

Mr. Reed—A 1933 Philadelphia Clearing House script; one each of the first $1.00 and $5.00 notes issued dated 1863.

Mr. Snyder—Fifty different specimens of British tokens and merchants cards dated 1793 to 1799.

Dr. Talens—An assortment of various pieces, in fine condition, of Colonials, gold, standing Liberty quarters, etc.

Mr. Hooper's exhibit won the vote of the evening.

Mr. Edward Rhoads, from the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, spoke very informatively about the flow of new money through the banks, and the procedure used in recalling worn currency. He also emphasized the appeal which is now being made to the public to put into circulation all cents which are being saved in piggy banks, etc.

Mr. Schick conducted an extensive auction at the close of the meeting, consisting of over 200 items including crisp large and small U. S. notes of various denominations, tokens, large U. S. cents, rolls of Lincoln cents, etc.

—ARTHUR SIPE, Secretary.

RACINE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The sixty-ninth monthly meeting was held Friday, December 10, at the Y. M. C. A. Thirteen members and one guest were present.

The following officers were elected for the 1944 term: President, Joseph H. Martin; Vice President, Rev. A. G. Weiler; Secretary, Alfred Gross; Treasurer, Gene Arneson; Librarian, R. S. Yeoman; Sergeant-at-Arms, Paul J. Magnusson.

Albert J. Tanck gave a talk on "Paper Money of Wisconsin Banks," and displayed many fine specimens, as well as bills of general interest from other sources. Other displays included some beautiful gold pieces by Karl Borseth among which were a denomination set of gold proofs $1 to $20 including the $4 Stella (flowing hair); a brilliant proof gold set of 1900; and a complete set of U. S. gold Commemoratives including the octagonal and round Panama-Pacific $50 pieces.

—R. S. YEOMAN, Secretary.

RICHMOND COIN CLUB—

The 32nd regular meeting of the Club was held at 8 P. M. on Wednesday, December 8, at the Byrd Park Club House, with President, Mr. Howe, in the chair.

There were eight members and two visitors present.

Mr. Stevenson, Chairman of the Nominating Committee, presented the report of said Committee, nominating the following officers for the year 1944: President, Mr. O. L. Lewis; Vice President, Mr. R. E. Stevenson; Secretary, Mrs. Helen G. Lewis; Treasurer, Mr. Russell Mansfield. All were unanimously elected.

Mr. Howe turned the meeting over to Mr. Lewis who gave a quiz on American coinage.

—HELEN G. LEWIS, Secretary.

SYRACUSE NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—Regular monthly meeting held at the home of our president, Paul S. Burns, Friday, December 3. Four members and two visitors attending.

A general discussion was had on United States coins and Commemorative stamps.

About 11:00 P. M. we all retired to the dining room where our hostess served a delicious lunch.

An invitation was received to hold our next meeting on the first Friday in January, at the home of Stanley Gifford.

—FRANK O. WEBSTER, Secretary.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular monthly meeting was held on Dec. 7 at the Carnegie Museum, with Mr. Earl Coatsworth, President, in the Chair; seven members present.

Mr. Hall presented a report on the Annual Dinner.

Dr. Gillis talked on "The Society of Medalists."

Exhibits:

Mr. Marlier: 19th Century Spanish silver coins; ancient coins of Egypt and Syracuse.

Mr. Hall: 12 Lincoln daguerreotypes.

Dr. Hepting: Platinum 10 escudos of Isabella II of Spain, 1868.

Mr. Stoneking: Foreign crowns.

Dr. Gillis: Medals issued by the Society of Medalists.

—RALPH J. BUTERBAUGH,
Secretary.

"THE MARCH OF MONEY"

Supplementing a brief paragraph in a recent issue, further particulars of a unique educational project will be of interest. This is a plan which uses a very special form of amazingly accurate reproduction, developed after years of practical coin research, by the HISTORICAL COININGS SOCIETY, according to Weston Settlemyer, its Executive Secretary.

Needless to say the original coins are scarce and costly. The silver, gold or bronze originals may be seen only at the British Museum of London and other leading collections during normal times.

The reproductions made by the HISTORICAL COININGS SOCIETY group might actually be called "COIN-STAMPS." They have the color, size and details of the rare costly originals. Yet they paste down as easily as stamps, as they are gummed on the back. Both obverse and reverse of the coins are shown . . . and facing upwards for simultaneous inspection. The coinings are "embossed" or "raised-up" as a minted coin is. Not only do they have the color and size of the original coins, and the embossed appearance, but they even have the "feel" of original coins, as they were embossed on a thickened and specially made metallic foil stock.

For over 5 years the HISTORICAL COININGS SOCIETY operated as a non-profit Society, donating coin material and information to students or schools and teachers of history, art, languages and numismatics. The Society has been instrumental in placing a number of valuable numismatic displays in the hands of teachers and educators. Those who have received and used with success the Society's material range from grade school and high school teachers to the faculty of the University of California and Stanford University.

Accompanying the SOCIETY'S reproductions of the 48 obverses and reverses of the 24 greatest coins of history, is a completely illustrated "OUTLINE OF HISTORY" type of coin album. The album is called when taken together with the reproductions, "THE MARCH OF MONEY." The album gives the coin-picture story of civilization. It treats coins as pearls on the thread of history.

There is a coin for every great civilization, ruler, political or religious movement since the 8th century B. C. down to the present. The album is therefore a mine of useful information. It gives the condensed story of Mankind's progress through the Ages. The MARCH OF MONEY album contains over 375 pertinent historical and coin illustrations drawn by Nadine Hammond, the distinguished artist, sculptor and teacher, who is President of the HISTORICAL COININGS SOCIETY. Further particulars may be found in the advertising section of this issue.

Great News For The “CENT COLLECTOR”

THE WORK OF A LIFETIME FINALLY REALIZED

Mr. Howard R. Newcomb's Re-Classification of the Cents from 1816 to 1857

We hereby quote a letter written to Mr. Newcomb which is self explanatory, nothing more we can add that will help to influence the sale of this masterpiece.

October.

Collectors of the United States Cents of the years 1816 to 1857 are to be congratulated on receiving Howard R. Newcomb's revision of the 1883 work of Frank D. Andrews.

Mr. Andrews worked at a time when cent collectors were not as active as they have been in the past twenty to twenty-five years. In his day many of the largest collections contained good series of the earlier dates but after 1814 they seemed to be satisfied with "one of a date," with the result that the series as a whole was sadly neglected. He did not have large and complete collections to study, with the help of the men who made them, so it is not surprising that he failed to find many of the varieties we now know.

For years collectors have been handicapped by the lack of an authoritative work on these years, and new discoveries were put in their collections as "Not in Andrews;" now Mr. Newcomb has gathered together all of these "unknowns," described and added to them so that the present list of varieties is nearly double that of Andrews.

By his serious study of the subject, Mr. Newcomb has been able to correct some typographical errors in Andrews which have long bothered collectors and, in addition, has been able to eliminate varieties that no one, in recent years, at least, has been able to find.

All honor to Mr. Newcomb for a great piece of work which has been entirely a "labor of love."

GEORGE H. CLAPP,
Sewickley, Pennsylvania

Announce the Publication of Chinese Imperial Names

By Howard D. Gibbs

A Finding List of Era and Personal Names on Chinese Imperial Coins.

This compendium, containing the names and titles of all Chinese rulers from the 7th to the 20th century, as found on the coins, gives an alphabetical arrangement of the era names, starting with the top character as identifying mark. Once this character is found, the rest of the legend is easily read and a number refers the reader to the second part of the work, where a chronological list of rulers is to be found, which completes the identification of the coin in question.

The text is a reproduction of the author's manuscript, with the characters in handwriting, as copied from the coins.

This imposing work is beyond doubt the most practical yet to be published as it provides the collectors with a quick reference handbook, which is handy and accessible, whereas some of the older works, while containing the correct information, are almost inaccessible and not arranged for immediate and ready use, as Mr. Gibbs' book is.

No collector, student or amateur of Chinese and Oriental numismatics will want to be left without this work, which is being published solely for their benefit, and in a very limited edition only.

Pre-publication Price $3.75

COMMEMORATIVE HALF DOLLARS WANTED

Am now paying the highest prices in years for uncirculated Commemorative Half Dollars. What have you to sell me? I can use complete or incomplete sets, small or large quantities, one to one hundred or more of a kind. Send me a list today of what you have, for my offer by return mail.

Also, I want to buy nice collections of other U. S. coins, such as Cents, Nickels, Quarters, Half Dollars, Silver Dollars, most everything from Half Cents to Gold, preferably in uncirculated or proof.

It pays to get my offer before selling, and if you really plan to sell, then we most likely will do business.

Attention Please

On the 1943 "D" Unc. Nickels I have found several types with different die breaks. When writing these types up for this ad

I DISCOVERED A MAJOR VARIETY

So far, I can produce four different coins. Which types are the rare ones we do not know. Maybe the Denver mint made an equal number of each type—who knows? But if you had rather be sure and get all FOUR coins send $2.00 (ten sets for $15.00). Of one type I have only a very few—nuff said. A printed description of these diebreaks and varieties FREE with each order. Otherwise, send 25 cents.

FIFTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

COMPARISON CHART LARGE CENTS—1793-1814 INCLUSIVE

By EDWARD B. HADEN, Haddonfield, New Jersey

November 18th, 1943.

To the Editor:

Soon after I started collecting coins, I decided to specialize on United States Large Cents. Bidding by mail on various varieties soon became very confusing as the many dealers holding bid sales do not attribute their coins the same; for example some attribute their coins to Doughty on all years 1793 to 1814 inclusive, others to various authors, which causes the mixup. I may possess a 1794 cent (Doughty 18) and another cent is offered in a sale as 1794 (Hays 1). If I have no means of comparison I may bid on a duplicate coin, which most collectors wish to avoid unless they are trying for a better specimen of the same date and variety.

In reading the many books on the subject of large cents I developed the enclosed comparison chart. It is simply information copied and tabulated from the various works on cents. After completing it, it proved to be very helpful, so I am enclosing it with the thought that you may deem it worthy of space in The Numismatist, so that other members may benefit as well as myself.

Very truly yours,

EDWARD B. HADEN, A. N. A. 9209.

When Doughty published Prosky's work in 1890 on the U. S. Large Cents it was probably the best and most nearly complete work on the subject. However, many flaws and omissions existed and various authors have presented, at later dates, more nearly complete and accurate information concerning certain years. Today the accepted standard for attributing coins is, I believe, as follows:

1793—Crosby	1796—Gilbert	1801-02-03—Newcomb
1794—Hayes	1797—Doughty	1804-14 incl.—Clapp
1795—Doughty	1798-99—Clapp	1816-57—Andrews
	1800—Doughty

In writing their new works these men all made comparisons to Doughty so that collectors could readily check the lists, with the exception of Gilbert on 1796. To date no one to my knowledge has been able to reconcile Gilbert to Doughty, and although repetitions and errors occur in Gilbert's descriptions his work is still preferred to Doughty's.

All known corrections and additions have been entered in the Comparison Chart for the convenience of the collector. The Chart is cross indexed, so to speak; listed first according to accepted standards, then according to Doughty. It is unfortunate, but 1795, 1796, 1797, 1800, and 1816-1857 inclusive have been omitted as no comparisons are available; the comparisons have been made and the work completed, but the authors of these new works feel it impractical to publish them for the duration of the war at least.

OUR 50-YEAR INDEX IS STILL AVAILABLE

A CIVIL WAR ITEM

Contributed by LOYD B. GETTYS, Davenport, Iowa

There has recently turned up an interesting Civil War item relating to the redemption of United States Notes and Fractional Currency. This memorandum was issued by the Treasury, Washington, D. C., and signed by Mr. F. E. Spinner, Treasurer of the United States.

The directive was as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, May 18, 1862.

To guard against frauds upon the Government, and to secure the just rights of holders, the following rules, for the redemption of mutilated United States notes, are hereby established:

First: Mutilated notes, which have been torn, no matter how much, but of which it is evident that all the fragments are returned—or defaced, no matter how badly, but certainly satisfactorily genuine—will be redeemed at their full face value on presentation.

Second: Fragments of notes will be redeemed in full only when accompanied by an affidavit, stating the cause and manner of the mutilation, and that the missing part of the note is TOTALLY DESTROYED. The good character of the affiant must, also, be fully vouched by the officer before whom the affidavit is taken.

Third: In the absence of such affidavit, fragments of notes will not be paid in full, but the parts presented will be redeemed in their proportion to the whole note; reckoning, as a general rule, by twentieths.

Fourth: Less than half of a note will not be redeemed except by payment of the full value of the note under the second rule; or by the payment of the proportional value of the missing part, when presented under the fifth rule.

Fifth: Fragments of notes, for which less than the full face value has been paid, will be retained for a year, to the end that the owners, who have received less than the value of a full note, may have opportunity to return the missing part and receive the amount previously withheld.

Sixth: Until further order, mutilated notes and fragments will be redeemed only at the Treasury of the United States at Washington; whither they can be sent, addressed to the "Treasurer of the United States." A draft on the Assistant Treasurer, at New York, for the amount allowed, will be returned, by mail, to the address of the person remitting the same.

Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., October 9, 1862.

The Rules promulgated on the 18th of May last, for the redemption of mutilated United States Notes, are not intended to apply to such notes of which the abrasion or loss of substance from the corners or edges does not exceed one-twentieth of their original proportions. Such are not understood to be mutilated notes within those Rules. They are regarded as entire notes, and when of the issue known as Demand Notes, are receivable for Customs duties.

No United States Notes, which have lost more than one-twentieth part of their original proportions have ever been received for Customs duties. They can only be paid, therefore, as ordinary claims in ordinary notes, under the Rules heretofore established.

S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Washington, D. C., March 7, 1862.

REDEMPTION OF UNITED STATES TREASURY NOTES.

The same rules in force for the redemption of mutilated United States Notes that are embodied in circulars of the Department dated May 18, 1862, and October 9, 1862, are applied to mutilated one and two years five per cent United States Treasury Notes.

Separation of a coupon from a two years five per cent United States Treasury Note, renders such note no longer a legal tender until interest commences on the next succeeding coupon attached to the note; and the separation is such a mutilation of the note as to make it redeemable only at its face value without interest, at this office.

Coupons of two years five per cent United States Treasury Notes, that have been separated from the notes of which they constitute a part, are of no value, and will not be redeemed. Coupons must not be detached from the notes to which they belong, except by a Government officer authorized to redeem them at maturity.

RULES FOR REDEMPTION OF FRACTIONAL CURRENCY.

1. All Fractional Currency, not mutilated, when presented to an Assistant Treasurer or Designated Depository of the United States, or a National Bank designated as a Depository of the United States, for redemption, must have been assorted by the holder, according to denominations, with the faces and upper sides in corresponding order in the packages.

2. When presented in sufficient numbers, each package must contain one hundred pieces; it must be securely pinned, with a paper strap at least one inch wide, and on the strap must be written, in ink, the number of pieces, denomination, date of deposit, and the name of the owner.

3. The entire deposit must be securely done up in one package, and upon the wrapper, endorsed with ink, the date of the deposit, the amount contained, and the name and residence of the owner.

4. No less sum than three dollars will be redeemed, and packages will be paid for in lawful money of the United States in the order as to time in which they shall have been received, as soon as the currency can be counted and passed upon.

RULES FOR REDEMPTION OF MUTILATED FRACTIONAL CURRENCY.

Fractional notes can be exchanged, if not mutilated, with any Assistant Treasurer or Designated Depository of the United States, or a National Bank designated as a Depository of the United States, in sums not less than three dollars. Defaced notes, if whole, are not considered as mutilated; nor is an evidently accidental injury, not reducing the note by more than one-tenth its original size, regarded as a mutilation. Mutilated fractional notes will be redeemed at the Treasury of the United States, at the city of Washington, under the following regulations, established as necessary guards against fraud:

I. Fragments of a note will not be redeemed unless it shall be clearly evident that they constitute one-half or more of one original note; in which case, notes, however mutilated, will be redeemed in proportion to the whole note, reckoning by fifths.

II. Mutilation less than one-tenth will be disregarded, unless fraudulent; but any mutilation which destroys more than one-tenth the original note, will reduce the redemption value of the note by one-fifth the face value.

III. Mutilated notes, presented for redemption, must be in sums not less than three dollars of the original full face value.

All Government Officers will receive for public dues all United States Notes of the several kinds, and on account for which they are respectively receivable, as per Treasury Circular of October 9, 1862, in explanation of the Rules promulgated May 18, 1862; no matter how badly defaced or torn they may be, so long as their genuineness can be clearly ascertained, and so that it is certain that not one-twentieth part thereof is missing. But all such notes as are unfit for re-issue, so received, should be kept separate and distinct, and as occasion may require, be returned to the Treasury of the United States to be retired from circulation. Fractional currency, from which not one-tenth part is missing, will be received in the same manner.

F. E. SPINNER,
Treasurer U. S.

Along with the rules for the redemption of mutilated United States notes and fractional currency there were furnished diagrams for guidance in the re-purchase of mutilated notes by the United States Treasurer.

When less than one of these spaces is missing it will not be considered a mutilation and the note will be received for its full face value by all Public Officers for Government dues, except for Customs duties.

ALLIED MILITARY CURRENCY NOT TO BE ILLUSTRATED

Opportunities have recently been presented to illustrate various pieces of Allied Military currency; but, being doubtful of its legality, we wrote the Treasury Department for a ruling, and from D. W. Bell, Under Secretary of the Treasury, we have the following:

“The printing, photographing, etc., of Allied Military currency, unless specially authorized, is prohibited by section 275, title 18 of the U. S. Code. For the present, this Department is not authorizing the reproduction of Allied Military currency issued in Italy.”

It is to be regretted that these interesting and attractive notes must go unpublished; however, a detailed description of the eight denominations already issued was given on page 32 of the January issue.

A NEW CLUB IS BORN

The eagle is undoubtedly the most popular bird in numismatic symbolism, but occasionally it must give place for a brief interlude to another of even wider popularity outside the realm of coinage—the stork.

In this instance the monotony of the latter's routine duties was relieved by a brief appearance at Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, on December 2nd, and the new arrival was promptly named the Wilkes-Barre Numismatic Club—and doing well, from first report, with a roster of twenty-five charter members.

George P. Williams of Kingston is President, Alfred F. Grotz, veteran collector and long time member of the A. N. A., is Vice President, and John G. Phillips, Secretary.

THE NUMISMATIST brings hearty congratulations on their initiative, and wishes the newly born Club a long and robust life.

THE EAGLE ON OUR COINS

By DAMON G. DOUGLAS, Caldwell, New Jersey

(A paper read at the Jersey City Coin Club.)

To Americans in 1944, the splendid likeness of our great first President, which has appeared for the past twelve years on our quarter dollars, seems a fitting tribute to a great man. Thus it may be a bit difficult for us to appreciate the contrary feelings of the citizenry of 1792.

As originally introduced in Congress that year, the coinage bill directed that the obverses of the forthcoming first Mint issues should bear the portrait of George Washington. Protests followed thick and fast. The House of Representatives consumed the bulk of its session of March 25, 1792, in spirited debate over this controversial feature of the bill. Toward the close of the session an amendment was carried to substitute "an emblematical figure of Liberty," and thus the final bill was enacted.

So thoroughly settled was the matter that seventy-one years passed before it was again brought forward, this time in connection with the bronze two cent piece. The mint prepared patterns (A-W 403 to 410) dated 1863, bearing the bust of Washington, but the final decision was in favor of the shield design. In 1866 similar patterns were advanced for the new nickel five cent piece (A-W 541 to 557, and 584 to 590) but they also were discarded for the less attractive but safer shield.

Not until 1900 did Washington finally appear on an official coin of our Mint, and then he shared the honor with Lafayette on the Commemorative dollar. Seemingly the echoes of the 1792 argumentation were more than a century in subsiding.

The "figure of an Eagle," proposed in the original bill as the device for the reverses of the silver and gold coins, fared better in the Congressional debate. A motion by Mr. Thatcher to strike out the word "Eagle" and to insert the words "a Hen or a Goose" was defeated without recorded discussion, and "Eagle" it has been throughout save only on the dime and half dime from 1837, the three cent silver, and a number of the Commemoratives.

But the eagle's character as a bird of prey was too much for the Anti-Federalist State's Rights section of the contemporary press to let pass without comment. The following appeared in the April 5, 1792 issue of Wood's Newark Gazette, Newark, N. J.:

"Much time was spent in the House of Representatives on Saturday before they could agree on a proper device for the Federal coins. But instead of the emblematical figure of Liberty which they have adopted, how simple and apropos it would have been, since they have retained the Eagle on one side, to have placed fifteen emblematical pigeons on the other—a device which perhaps (all things considered) would be much more in character.

"The Eagle, the arms of the U. States is a device of the old Congress; the symbol of office borne by the Serjeant at arms of the Present Congress has an Eagle on the top—so that it appears both old and new Congress had a latent design against the pigeons."

The suspicion with which the writer viewed the growing strength of the new central government is similarly expressed in the Gazette's next issue, April 12, 1792:

"It is strange that our legislators have so far forgotten the rock from whence they were hewn, as well as the first line of the Federal Constitution, as not to have thought of stamping upon our money the following words—"The People of the United States."

In 1798 the inscription E PLURIBUS UNUM was placed upon the silver and gold coinage above a triumphant eagle. Whether or not Mr. Wood considered the "From many, one" a fulfillment of his 1792 prophesy about the eagle's designs against the pigeons must remain his secret. His Gazette ceased publication in 1797.

Many of us in this year of 1944 view with all of Mr. Wood's suspicion and alarm any permanent grant of power or authority to a United Nations of the World. America's century and a half of progress, proving Mr. Wood's distrust unwarranted, should give us confidence to believe that the unfolding future will prove our present fears to be equally groundless.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Knoxville, Tennessee

II. THE NETHERLANDS

The history of the Netherlands as an independent nation really begins with the Union of Utrecht in 1579, when the seven northern provinces of the Low Countries bound themselves together and cast off the yoke of their Spanish sovereign, Philip II. The seventeenth century is the story of the rise of the House of Orange under William the Silent, who was murdered in 1584, his sons, grandson, and great-grandson in their prolonged struggle against France. They became stadholder in more and more provinces, a position which finally became hereditary in the family. During one interlude, 1650-1672, the government reverted to the Regents of the several provinces, really to Jan de Witt, who was responsible for building up the powerful Dutch navy. This period ended in 1702 with the death of William III, who had ruled England as well as the United Provinces.

The eighteenth century pictures a long, slow decline. With the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713 the Republic substituted a peace policy for its former warlike one and faded from the European scene as a first class power. A collateral branch of the House of Orange came into full control of the seven provinces in 1747, but William IV and William V were not the men their cousins had been, and an English princess and a German duke governed much of the time. The American Revolution brought the Dutch into war with the English, resulting in a humiliating peace in 1785. Commerce had declined, the army and navy were gone, finances were in a dreadful state, the hereditary stadholder was in disgrace. England had triumphed abroad and on the sea. The Prussians invaded the Provinces in 1787 and the French in 1793, and two years later the Republic collapsed.

William fled to England and the Batavian Republic came into existence for an inglorious career of ten years. Its leaders were earnest but unskillful men. The Dutch colonies vanished; trade was completely stagnant. France, treating the new Republic as a province, bled it of men and money. A ludicrous succession of constitutions attempted to keep pace with the political changes in France. At last Napoleon brought the whole sorry show to an end in May of 1806.

The Dutch monetary system had been organized on a sound basis as far back as 1690. The guilder was the unit and a rixdollar of $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 3 guilders had been coined on a uniform basis by most of the provinces during the eighteenth century. The Republic continued to coin and use the dollar of Utrecht as its regular medium of exchange.

The Conqueror of Europe erected the provinces into the Kingdom of Holland in 1806 and placed his brother Louis Napoleon on the throne. For four years the sincere and well-meaning French king ruled his Dutch subjects with their welfare in mind, too often neglecting his imperial brother's demands. At last neither could endure the situation any longer. Napoleon brought pressure to bear, and Louis, putting an end to a bad dream, abdicated in favor of his son. Napoleon promptly annexed the erstwhile kingdom to his empire on July 9, 1810. Louis issued several dollar pieces, all with his head and a variety of arms on the reverse. Under Napoleon the regular French pieces were coined at the Utrecht mint.

The results of the battle of Leipzig produced a general revolt in the Netherlands in 1813, which Napoleon was too shaken to resist. The Prince of Orange, son of the last stadholder, William V, was recalled from his German exile and entered The Hague in December of 1813. He was recognized by the Great Powers in 1814, and on March 15, 1815, after Napoleon's downfall, was created king of the Netherlands—consisting of the United Provinces, Belgium, the Bishopric of Liege, and the Duchy of Bouillon. The ancestral possessions of the House in Nassau were exchanged for Luxembourg, and William was crowned king in Brussels on September 27, 1815.

The old Utrecht dollar was coined in 1816, and two years later came a three gulden piece with the king's portrait. In the last year of his reign, after seven years of minor coinage only, a $2\frac{1}{2}$ gulden was issued. This was to be the largest silver piece throughout subsequent reigns. From 1819 to 1830 a mint was operated in Brussels, which was lost to the Dutch, of course, when the Belgians seceded in the latter year.

William I had had difficulties with his Belgian subjects from the beginning, and they finally established their independence in 1831. William abdicated in 1840 in favor of his son William II, who ruled from 1840 to 1849. His son, William III, had a long reign, during which time Dutch resources and power were gradually built up. His two sons predeceased him, but by a second marriage he had a daughter, Wilhelmina, who came to the throne at the age of ten on her father's death in 1890. The first type of her $2\frac{1}{2}$ gulden coins appeared on her majority in 1898; the second more than thirty years later. The initials G. H. V. L. (Grand Duke of Luxembourg) are omitted from the obverse legend as Wilhelmina did not inherit the duchy because of the application of the Salic law.

The Dutch coat of arms, shown on the reverse of most of these pieces, is the lion of ancient origin. Officially the arms consist of a blue ground dotted with golden billets, with a crowned golden lion rampant, who bears in one front paw a naked sword and in the other a cluster of arrows. The arms on the obverses of the rixdollars 1800-1816 are those of the Province of Utrecht, while the arms of the City of Utrecht appear in miniature at the top of the reverse. Louis Napoleon quartered the arms, adding the Imperial French eagles to the Dutch lions.

Part of the 1823 and all of the 1826 issue were from the Brussels mint, with a palmbranch and a B as the mintmark. The G. H. V. L. part of the inscription on the obverse indicates that the king was also Grand Duke of Luxembourg.

Edge: GOD * ZY * MET * ONS *

263 2½ gulden 1840.

With a fleur-de-lis for the mintmaster P. C. G. Poelman. The engraver's name, J. P. Schouberg, is on the bust. William abdicated in this year.

Edge: same as 262.

265 2½ gulden 1850-1874.

This, the only date of issue, was coined the year the Queen became of age.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

The Coin Collector's Journal (Raymond) for November-December. "A mad Queen on the throne of Spain; mountains of gold and silver in a New World; sea-rovers, savages, conquistadors, priests and paupers, struggling to subdue, convert and colonize; and a new coinage is born." This is the arresting first paragraph of an illustrated article by R. I. Nesmith, entitled "The Coinage of Charles and Johanna for Spanish Colonial America—1536-1556," dealing with the first coins struck in North America. Paul S. Szego writes on "Numismatic Echoes of Our Sicilian Campaign" (illustrated), and the first of a series, "Portrait and Design on Modern Coins," is inaugurated.

The Numismatic Scrapbook (Hewitt Bros.) for December. The leading article is by Ted R. Hammer, Librarian-Curator of the A. N. A., on "Types of U. S. Nickel Coins." Raymond J. Walker writes on "Singulariae on the Coins of Rome" (second instalment).

Numismatic Review (Stacks) for December (quarterly). From those collectors interested in ancient Roman coins, the author of the leading article will receive a hearty welcome. Harold Mattingly, President of the Royal Numismatic Society, and Assistant Keeper of the Coins in the British Museum, is a well known authority on the coins of the Roman Empire, and his ability to invest the results of wide research with literary as well as factual values is easily recognized. His present subject is "The Man in the Roman Street," an attempt, as he says, to interest us "in an excursion into the past;" a past which is revitalized as never before in our history by the fact that Italy is now, in large measure, our own battleground.

Thomas Ollive Mabbot, Editor, presents an article, well illustrated, on the subject, "New Light on the Earliest Currency of Rome."

William A. Dewey, grandson of the famous Admiral, writes of "The Admiral Dewey Plaque by Gorham"—a contribution of value to those interested in medallist art.

"Election Medals of the Campaign of 1844." By Doyle DeWitt. A 32-page pamphlet in which is assembled the complete series by this author published in June to November, 1943, in THE NUMISMATIST. In connection with this, we call attention to a communication from Mr. DeWitt appearing elsewhere in this issue.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established.* The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Editor. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A WORD TO NON-MEMBER SUBSCRIBERS

A peculiar situation—by no means a new one—exists in what we may call the paid circulation of THE NUMISMATIST. It is made up of two groups: members of the Association, and non-member subscribers. The former number approximately 3,800, and the latter somewhat in excess of 500.

Let us designate the member as A, and the non-member subscriber as B.

The annual dues of A and the yearly subscription of B are exactly the same: three dollars. But while a large part of the tangible return to A for his outlay is in the magazine, there are other values besides: one, the privilege of borrowing, without expense other than the necessary postage, from the A. N. A. Library—a genuinely important collection of specialized literature, rich in reference material on almost every conceivable phase of numismatics; and we submit that a coin worth collecting is worth studying.

Another privilege possessed by A is that of attending the annual convention of the Association, taking part in its deliberations, hearing such papers as may be read, participating in the discussions, viewing the notable exhibits invariably present, and displaying portions of his own collection if he so desires.

Moreover, unless one is an incurable hermit, he must find a deep enjoyment in the associations made possible on these occasions—few of which might have been discovered otherwise—and from which some enduring friendships are created.

As a member, he has the satisfaction of helping to support a national organization, the sole object of which, as stated in our Constitution, is “ . . . to encourage and promote the science of numismatics by the acquirement and study of coins, paper money, medals, and media of exchange; to cultivate fraternal relations among collectors and students; to encourage and assist new collectors and to foster the interest of youth in the subject; to stimulate and advance affiliations between collectors and kindred organizations in the United States and foreign countries; to acquire and disperse numismatic knowledge by means of its official magazine and other publications; to form and maintain a cabinet of numismatic specimens, and a library of numismatic literature for the use and benefit of its members, and to demonstrate the fact that numismatics is an educational, serious and entertaining pursuit. . . ”

It has taken over half a century to bring the A. N. A. to its present stature, and the member should not forget that he inherits far more than he purchases. In a spirit of unselfishness he should be willing to do his part to maintain its standards and to transmit to those who come after, an Association strong in members, sound in administration, and steadily faithful to its avowed purpose.

Very well. Should not all this appeal to B, whose yearly outlay for the magazine alone equals that of A, but to whom the privileges that accompany membership are not available? Let it be said that there is no discrimination here, for he is not excluded by any rules of the Association; on the contrary his application would be welcome; if the customary investigation reveals no bar to acceptance he is granted full rights of membership, and at no greater outlay than before.

It is clear that a certain proportion of subscribers have no interest beyond that of the magazine; the Association as such makes no strong appeal. Others have subscribed through news agencies with the sole idea of reading a publication devoted to coin collecting, and some of these may give their exclusive attention to the advertising section. But judging from the number each year who voluntarily apply for membership, we are convinced that many more would be glad to do so if the matter were definitely called to their attention, the benefits emphasized, and an urgent suggestion made to take advantage of the additional dividends on their investment which may be had at no additional cost.

That is exactly what we are attempting to do, and why we have addressed this editorial especially to non-member subscribers. An adjustment can be made at any time, regardless of the expiration date of subscription.

The General Secretary (see page 114) will be glad to give your inquiry immediate attention.

AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Bloomfield, Conn.
January 7, 1944.

To the Editor:

I wish to take this opportunity to thank the many collectors and fellow-members of the Association for their kind and interesting communications about the series of articles "Election Medals of the Campaign of 1844," published in THE NUMISMATIST in the issues of June to November, 1943. All of your comments and suggestions were very greatly appreciated. As a number of you have suggested, I am now engaged in a further effort to assemble corresponding data and as complete a check list as possible encompassing all presidential campaigns. Hence I would very much appreciate a complete description and rubbing, if possible, of any rare, unusual or unique campaign medal or token issued in connection with any of the presidential campaigns.

Yours very truly,

DOYLE DEWITT, A. N. A. No. 6895.

WANTED: THE NUMISMATIST FOR JANUARY, 1911

Can anyone supply the Massachusetts Historical Society with a copy of The Numismatist for January, 1911? Mr. Shepard Pond, a former member of our Board of Governors, 2 Salisbury Street, Winchester, Mass., would be glad to hear of an available copy.

DEATHS

CHRIS H. REMBOLD

The long service of Chris H. Rembold with the Times-Star of Cincinnati came to an end on December 19, his death caused by pneumonia. He was born in Cincinnati in 1855, starting work with the old Evening Star at the age of 20, and remained after its merger in 1880 with the Times, eventually becoming business manager, a position he held up to the time of his death—over 50 years.

For 20 years he had been a keenly interested coin collector and a member of the A. N. A. (No. 2007) until his resignation of last year, attending many of our annual conventions; a member also of the Cincinnati Numismatic Association. His connection with the Masonic fraternity extended over a long period, receiving the Thirty-third Degree in 1927.

NELSON S. HOPKINS

Nelson S. Hopkins, 73, of Williamsville, N. Y., was struck by an automobile and fatally injured on December 23, dying shortly afterward in a local hospital. He was a retired electrical engineer and pioneer aircraft manufacturer.

He was an enthusiastic collector, possessing some 3,500 or more Civil War and Hard Times Tokens, aviation medals and war decorations, the latter having been on display for some years with the Buffalo Historical Society. His membership number in the A. N. A. was 3495, dating back many years. A member also of the Buffalo Numismatic Association from 1928, past President and Treasurer, he missed only one meeting up to 1941; his ill health thereafter prevented active participation.

Interment was at Forest Grove cemetery in Lynn, Massachusetts.

CHARLES E. BRIGGS

On January 8th, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, occurred the death of one of the oldest A. N. A. members, Charles E. Briggs. Had he lived until the 1st day of February he would have reached his 86th birthday. He was born near Cleveland, Ohio, coming west some years afterward, finally locating in Lisbon, Iowa, where from 1884 to 1925 he was a monument dealer. After his retirement from active business he moved to Cedar Rapids, his home for the last fifteen years.

Mr. Briggs' membership number in the Association was 307, which indicates his affiliation over fifty years ago. Only a very small group of members living today have numbers lower than his. His interest in coins was largely limited to those of the United States, and long familiarity with these had given him an unusually close knowledge of the entire series. For the last two or three years his health had not permitted him to attend the conventions of the Iowa Numismatic Association nor the meetings of the Cedar Rapids Coin Club, in both of which he held membership. His passing is sincerely regretted by his many friends and fellow collectors.

WITH THE DEALERS

Catalogues of some interesting sales the latter part of January were received too late for notice last month; if the priced lists are available in time for the March issue some report of them will be given. A number were held in December for which no priced lists have been received.

Stack's sale of November 27 contained largely U. S., among which colonial and gold predominated. A very fine Pine Tree shilling, small planchet, sold for $21; another, good, $15.75; an Oak Tree shilling, very good, $10; a Woods penny, 1723, planchet defect but uncir., $10; a Mark Newby half pence, fine, $6.75; a 1776 Fugio pewter dollar, uncir., $43; another, still finer, $44; 1787 Fugio cent, rosette on rev. in high relief, very fine, $18; the usual variety, but uncir., $8; two Washington cents, 1792, Lots 597-8, $49 and $55 respectively. Many other colonials sold very well. Lot 832 listed a "1794" silver dollar, which brought $22.50—a fair price perhaps, when M. A. Stickney began collecting; but no doubt this was a 1795. Other early dollars sold well, but not at inflated values. That seldom seen little gem, the 1849 gold dollar, open wreath, small head variety, wire edge, uncir., brought $23.

The New Netherlands sale of December 7 was strong in U. S. general, foreign gold and silver, the latter mostly dollar size. The sale opened with a complete set of the A. N. S. Numismatic Notes and Monographs, nos. 1 to 100—an unusual offering. Each item constituted a lot, and as a whole averaged well: ranging from 35 cents to $4.60—few lower than $1.00. Of the foreign gold, the highest price, $47.50, was realized by 96 lire, 1801, of the Ligurian Republic. The top price in the foreign crown size silver was reached in Lot 908, a superb rouble of Catherine II of Russia, 1771, from the Hermitage collection; $55. Victor D. Brenner's bronze plaque of Lincoln, 43 x 57, brought $27.50. Washington cent, 1791, small eagle, bronze proof, $12.25; Vermont cent, 1786, "baby head" type, very fine, rarity, $15.50.

Mehl has in preparation the Belden Roach sale, and the Numismatic Gallery will about April 15th publish a fixed price plate catalogue of the notable collection of U. S. large cents formed by Oscar J. Pearl, of New York City.

"BLESSED ARE THE WARMAKERS"

Nietzsche (1864)—The world must be ruled by German supermen. No free personality can become a true Christian. The infliction of forcible subjugation is not a wrong. The fight is not for life but for power. There is delight in exercising power upon the powerless. Ideals of equality and peace are impossible. The good war sanctifies every cause. War has achieved more great things than love of thy neighbor.

Treitschke (1871)—Everything is permissible. The ideal of eternal peace is unjust. Only the spiritless play with the dream of perpetual peace. Blessed are the warmakers. Earth mastery must be won by the might of German militarism.

ARE THESE NEW?

Member Charles G. Sonnen, Capt. C. E., of Little Rock, reports finding a 1909S-VDB Lincoln cent with what appears to be a die break across the upper portion of the artist's initials, sloping to the left across the letters to such an extent that less than a third of the V is visible, while the lower half of the B can be seen. The coin shows little wear. He also reports slanting mint marks on two 1941 half dollars, San Francisco Mint. Has anyone else discovered such varieties?

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

BROOKLYN COIN CLUB—The 127th meeting was held on January 5, 1944 at 174 Montague St., Brooklyn, Vice-President Charles P. Knoth presiding. Past-President A. BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The regular monthly meeting of the Society was held at Hotel Avery on Monday evening, December 27th, with 11 members and one guest present. Owing to the illness of President Pond, Mr. Lowenstam was appointed President pro-tem.

The Secretary informed the members that the cabinet which had been in the Boston City Club had already been removed and was now on display at Mr. Chell-Frost's store on Cornhill. It contains a rather large display of current U. S. bills used in Hawaii; also Mr. Chell-Frost's unique collection of Lincoln campaign buttons.

The next meeting, which is also the annual meeting was named as January 31.

Several members gave short numismatic talks, those especially enjoyed were from Mr. Grant, Mr. Appleton and Mr. Hoffman, who showed his large and famous collection of Connecticut money, including several rare items.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—The lights shone over "fair women and brave men," at the 16th annual banquet, which took place on January 4 at the Park Manor, with sixty-three present. A large delegation from the Orange County Coin Club were present, and as a part of the program, Pres. Larson conducted a joint installation of the officers of both Clubs. The occasion being of a strictly social nature, no other business was transacted. The music of the evening was furnished, as in past years, by Miss Betty Lou McComas, who performed most artistically upon the accordin, and by Mr. Charles Newell Soule, who presented several vocal solos including "Invictus," "Beautiful Dreamer," and "My Own United States," for which Pres. Larson played the accompaniment. Those present joined in singing "America" and "Odes to Numismatology," the latter from the pen of Mr. Larson.

Certain matters pertaining to the consumption of food having been most satisfactorily taken care of in time honored fashion, the occasion was enlivened by various addresses, short and otherwise, and of a serio-comic-tragic nature. Mr. Holger Jorgensen addressed the guests on the subject, "Why is Denmark so Called," and Herbert Bergen, President of the Orange County Coin Club, amused the audience by reading various fictitious telegrams and cables from remote parts of the world congratulating him on his election to office. Short addresses were also given by Vice President Robert G. Efker of the Orange County club, Wallace Todd, Vice President of the California Coin Club, Earle K. Stanton and Dr. C. Glen Curtis, Secretaries respectively of the California and Orange County organizations, and by C. L. Hawley, Treasurer of the local Club. These speakers spoke freely and without reserve, often slandering their fellow members but adding mirth to the occasion, which was made a memorable one.

In addition to the programmed addresses, several others present were called upon and responded with appropriate remarks, President Larson acting as master of ceremonies. The accordinist, Miss McComas, was the recipient of a bracelet presented by the club. A most enjoyable evening closed with the singing of another Larson composition entitled, "I'm Forever Coin Collecting."

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

On Monday evening, January 10, the 80th meeting of the Society was held at the Benson Hotel in Portland. There were in attendance 21 members and one guest, President Baronovich presiding.

There was a general discussion on the feasibility of sponsoring a junior coin club. Most of those present seemed to think it a good idea; no definite action was taken because of the absence of Mr. Bibler, who had previously agreed to look further into the matter.

At our next meeting coins and medals bearing the portrait of Washington or Lincoln will be featured, and the members were urged to bring out specimens from their collections.

It was with regret that those present at our 80th meeting learned of the passing of a fellow member, Chas. Braun, Jr. of Milwaukie, Oregon. The members stood for a minute, with heads bowed in silence in deference to his memory. Mrs. Braun is to be written a letter of condolence by our Secretary.

Our displays for the evening included: A nice collection of large and small U. S. cents mounted in neat green holders which displayed the unc. copper to good advantage: exhibited by Hugh Davenport. An 1839 U. S. dollar, a Bryan dollar, and several pieces of choice foreign gold: exhibited by Howard Hughes. A nice display of various sized coins of the world, featuring the dollar size: exhibited by Henry Perry. A collection of U. S. silver dollars: exhibited by Stan Sebolt. The main event of the evening was again a talk by Major Hosler. His talk on "Paper Money" was very interesting and educational. His definition for Numismatics is: the science of the media of exchange. Promissory notes of exchange were first used before the coinage system was adopted. Babylonian tablets tell us this type of exchange was used in 2340 B. C. The first currency used in America was Playing Card money used in Canada. The first currency used in the U. S. was in Massachusetts in 1690. During the period that banks issued currency, 2,000 banks issued 14,000 different varieties of bank bills. In the state of Nebraska eight chartered banks and eight non-chartered banks issued a total of 90 different bank notes during this period.

Major Hosler had an album of currency of various states and banks, most of them uncirculated, on exhibit. Ray Moulton exhibited a set of U. S. Large cents.

gratulated on his very fine talk and excellent exhibition.

The Secretary reported the receipt of a communication addressed to Mr. W. Ray Carpenter, as Chairman of the Coin Exposition Committee, by Mrs. Edward T. Newell, congratulating Mr. Carpenter and his Committee on the wonderful exhibition which was made at the American Numismatic Society. Mrs. Newell requested Mr. Carpenter to convey to the various Clubs her congratulations and stated that the whole affair would have been the greatest gratification to Mr. Newell.

The Executive Committee suggested as the topic for the February meeting: A talk by Mr. Homer Stevens on Condor Tokens; Coins of Caracalla, Flautilla and Geta; United States $3 and $4 Gold Pieces; Political Medals of Zachary Taylor.

Mr. Farran Zerbe of the Publication Committee read from various clippings in the New York papers. Mr. Deas also read from clippings from newspapers and magazines.

It was regularly moved, seconded and carried that the following topics suggested by the Executive Committee be the topics for the February meeting: A talk by Mr. Homer Stevens on Condor Tokens; Coins of Caracalla, Plantilla and Geta; United States $3 and $4 Gold Pieces; Political Medals of Zachary Taylor.

—F. C. C. BOYD, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 89th meeting of the Club was held December 16 at the Y. M. C. A. Club Rooms, with President Worth in the chair. There were 13 members and four visitors present. Among the visitors was Lieut. Anderson, U. S. Navy, who was for many years District Secretary of A. N. A. in Venezuela. He gave an interesting talk on Spanish coins, of which he has over 5,000 in his collection.

The meeting was interrupted by refreshments being served, a procedure somewhat unusual of late. As type sets and coins were featured, many really fine sets were displayed. Two really choice and practically complete sets were those owned by Mr. Wagner and Mr. Glickert, followed closely by those exhibited by Mr. Saemon, Mr. Worth, Mr. Fouts, Mr. Mills and Mr. Talmadge. Each member gave a short talk on his particular set on display. Type sets and coins have proven to be of the most interest to the majority of the Club members.

The new State of Washington tax token was shown, in vivid green plastic. The January meeting will feature Spanish coins, and Lieut. Anderson will be the speaker if he is still in Seattle. The meeting closed with a coin auction.

—HENRY H. ZECKSER, Secretary.

SYRACUSE NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—Regular monthly meeting Friday, January 7, 8:00 P. M., held at the home of Stanley Gifford, 946 Euclid Avenue. Eight members and guests in attendance. President Paul S. Burns presiding.

Items displayed included several choice Indian relics and a collection of War posters. Discussion of the Indian relics introduced the topic of life in Arizona. Mr. Gifford and Prof. Tilford were in a position to give us some interesting information about Ancient Indian findings, caverns, mining, etc. in central and southern Arizona. They both had received their information first hand, having lived there.

During the evening refreshments were served by our host and hostess. James Cassidy requested that our next meeting, the first Friday in February, be held at their home on Clifton Place.

Meeting adjourned about 12:00 P. M.
—FRANK O. WEBSTER, Secretary.

NUMISMATIC

Our exceptionally fine offerings of numismatic literature during the past few years have resulted in many requests for various books.

By far the greatest number have sought the Crosby, Hays, and Chapman works on large cents. Unfortunately, these books are very difficult to obtain even at $10.00 per copy.

In conjunction with our marketing of the outstanding collection of large cents formed by

MR. OSCAR J. PEARL NEW YORK CITY

We are preparing a catalogue which will include the following:

1. Complete listing of Mr. Pearl's coins which will be offered at fixed prices.
2. About 16 fine plates showing many of the coins in the Pearl Collection.
3. A complete description of the 1793 cents as listed by Crosby.
4. A complete description of the 1794 cents as listed by Hays.
5. A tie-in of Chapman's work on 1794 cents.
6. Many listings of other dates as described by Doughty, Gilbert, Newcomb and Andrews.
7. Charts giving cross reference for easy checking of different attributions: i.e. Chapman numbers and their equivalent in Hays numbers.

42 EAST 50th STREET

A few dealers have requested that we set aside 50 copies for each of them. Paper shortage and a limited printing may prevent us from obliging them. Their enthusiasm, however, reflects the value of the publication. Orders pouring in since our recent announcement, indicate that the collector, too, is aware of a bargain offering.

The regular edition is priced at the ridiculously low figure of $2.00. A limited number of bound volumes will be available at $5.00. No money necessary with your order, except for bound volumes.

Here is information which would cost you $25.00 to obtain—no, you couldn't get it even for $25.00. The Pearl Catalogue will have it—and it's yours for $2.00. We respectfully suggest that you order your copy now.

DELUXE COIN CABINETS FOR DISCRIMINATING COLLECTORS

Nearly all coin cabinets are now off the market for the duration, as government priorities prohibit the manufacture, due to the hardware, and other materials needed for defense. Fortunately, we have been able to obtain a contract to purchase a LIMITED NUMBER of cabinets, as specifications below, just what every collector is looking for, and unable to locate. Most cabinets that hold 1,000 coins or more usually sell for $20 or upward, and these are priced at practically pre-war prices. If you are in need of a nice cabinet, you will not delay your order, for these will sell very quickly.

JOSEPH B. STACK PUBLISHERS MORTON M. STACK

Special Announcement

We have just been informed by our printers that due to war time restrictions, the proposed issue of

"UNITED STATES CENTS FROM 1816 TO 1857,"

a compedium of the first order and vital to all Cent collectors, will have to be cut $\frac{1}{3}$ and that therefore a substantially smaller number of copies than first anticipated will be available to the collecting public.

It is with this inevitable restriction in mind, that we urge those that have not as yet taken advantage of our pre-publication offer, to avail themselves of possibly the last chance to obtain this work.

The book is being readied NOW for immediate distribution. 293 pp. of text, profusely illustrated, and 11 additional plates; size $9\frac{1}{2}$ by $12\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

PRE-PUBLICATION PRICE:

Cloth, $5.00

De Luxe, $15.00

We regret we cannot guarantee delivery, but will try our best to fill your order—and the sooner you send in your order, the better your chances!

COMMEMORATIVE HALF DOLLARS WANTED

Am now paying the highest prices in years for uncirculated Commemorative Half Dollars. What have you to sell me? I can use complete or incomplete sets, small or large quantities, one to one hundred or more of a kind. Send me a list today of what you have, for my offer by return mail.

Also, I want to buy nice collections of other U. S. coins, such as Cents, Nickels, Quarters, Half Dollars, Silver Dollars, most everything from Half Cents to Gold, preferably in uncirculated or proof.

It pays to get my offer before selling, and if you really plan to sell, then we most likely will do business.

THE PAUL MANSHIP MEDAL OF DIONYSUS

By E. GALLO-RUIZ, Department of Romance Languages
University of Michigan, Ann Arbor

THE ARTIST

By the time Paul Manship issued his medal of Dionysus for the Society of Medalists (1930), the purity of his newly recreated classical spirit in a series of brilliant sculptures was perfectly understood and admired among many lovers of art. But with the birth of this medal he gave an epitome of his personality as a man and artist, a sample of his rare talent in reading contemporary events in the language of classical forms, and a proof of his ability to use the docility of bronze to produce an object of beauty. All these three aspects need comment and elaboration to arrive at a full understanding of this interesting medal, called soon after its appearance "a bone of contention"¹ by the "Wets" and "Drys," the warriors of the age of Prohibition. Now that the battle is decided we can look upon it with impartial judgment.

To dwell extensively upon the personality of Manship is beyond the scope of this paper, because critics of well known reputation, such as Taft, Casson, Gallatin, Post, and Vitry have discussed, to a certain extent, the essence of his art. Nevertheless a few additional remarks would help to clarify the meaning of the medal of Dionysus. Furthermore we justify the nature of this discussion on the ground that numismatics, and more particularly so medals, brings us in close contact with some of the best artists, one of the noblest ends of coin and medal collecting.

In the years to come, when the last traces of Puritanism have been erased from the pages of our history, Manship will rank high among the champions of Hellenism, as one who gave a slice of grace and beauty to a society absorbed in the pursuit of the ethical and instrumental values. In a plastic embodiment of considerable merit, the utopian ideal of Matthew Arnold's "Culture and Anarchy," the desire to supplement the sturdy virtues of Puritanic Hebraism with the Greek ideal of beauty and harmony, is realized. Although not exactly an iconoclast or a radical critic of our tradition, Manship appears at first sight removed from our civilization. His appearance, contrary to the insipid eclecticism of the academic imitators of the antique, brought up a genuine adaptation of "archaic traits skilfully coupled with intense modern feeling."² He assimilated the lessons of the past, yet his freshness and power of invention, at times lacking the "more decided note of modernity"³ of Mestrovic, Brancusi and Epstein, are a sincere contribution to the history of American sculpture and to medallic art. Manship, following the media via in art and avoiding extremes, as Maritain and other modern thinkers do in philosophy, writes in his medals and sculptures, with the alphabet of Praxiteles, the poetry of graceful forms in a perfectly modern setting.

This classical orientation, which in Manship is the very core of his personality, is also his creative force. Work after work, the sculptures of Manship reveal a common inspiration and a similar production—some old or new themes handled in the fashion recommended by Sir Reynolds: "The more extensive . . . your acquaintance is with the works of those who have excelled, the more extensive will be your powers of invention; and what may appear still more like a paradox, the more original will be your conceptions."⁴

THE TIME

If the aesthetic personality of Manship was directed toward the collectivism of form of classical antiquity, the interpretation of contemporary characters and events is cast in a similar mould. The medal of Dionysus offers an inevitable example of this way of conceiving and creating.

The form of this medal, as we shall soon indicate, is the resultant of two classical periods, the Greek and the Italian Renaissance. The content which moved the artist to its creation is in a similar classical vein, but brought out by the battle of Prohibition.

A modern sculptor of the individualistic type would have handled the same theme, the age of "Wet" and Dry," in a more subjective way, and perhaps closer to the spirit of the time, but by so doing he would have neglected the element of tradition. Manship did not see the problem of "Dry" and "Wet" as an issue of the fleeting moment, but in the light of something more lasting, originated in a remote Greek mythology which has been and continues being the perennial fountain of occidental imagination. Dionysus does not wave the flag of the "Wets," he stands for the solution of an issue by appealing to the ideal Greek sense of proportion, as the Greeks handled such matters, never losing sight of the many sidedness of human nature and the constant striving after the harmonious balance of the various potentialities of man.

The dialectic of extremes or polarities which since the time of Hegel has become the dominant frame of social and political ideologies in the western world, and which in more popular words is known as capitalism versus proletariat, communism versus democracy, or "dry" versus "wet" was repugnant to the Hellenic mind, saturated in its highest expression with a healthy humanism of simplicity and order, idealism and loveliness. Man, being conceived by the Greeks as being filled with potential harmony, from which a skilful hand, or an orderly life, could bring exquisite music, waking up the dormant rhythms to pleasing melody. The Greeks, within a naturalistic level, had a complete view of human nature, which ranged between the two extremes, between the Appollonian and the Dionysian, yet the Hellenic goal cared not for extremes, and least of all for the narrow intensity of Puritanism. The ideal was a healthy versatility of a life striving at balance in fulness. What some critics call "eclecticism" in Manship is an attempt to arrive at this ideal. His "Dancer and Gazelles," his "Centaur and Dryad," his medal of Dionysus and the rest of his works are after a full humanism, healthy and normal in any great civilization. Prohibition is not, therefore, represented in this medal of Dionysus as a conflict of mutually exclusive forces, but as a somewhat futile and naive struggle for which the Greeks had a solution—moderation.

THE MEDAL

Any good medal involves the entire personality of the artist (without losing objectivity) as it bears upon the interpretation of the character or event represented and the way of conceiving and executing the object as a work of art. We have seen how the classical temperament of Manship carried him naturally to the ancients in search of content to give lasting value to his work. The same is true of his artistic form. Classical and Renaissance forms were here assimilated and reinterpreted to convey a modern idea, not in a pastiche but in an original creation.

To begin, the dominant figure of Dionysus (the Roman Bacchus) is an archaic Greek figure with splendid decorative hair and beard, done, again, in the archaistic fashion Manship has used in the "Dancer and Gazelles" and other works. This predilection for ancient decorative motifs is ever present in Manship. The splendid kylix and the comic satyrs are executed in the same classical tradition.

But in the field of numismatics, antiquity never went beyond the splendid coins of Greece and Rome. Not until the time of Pisanello, in the fifteenth century, if we except some previous attempts, do we have the first real appearance of the artistic medal. In these early medals of Pisanello, Manship found many suggestions in design and form to conceive his medal of Dionysus.

Even the superficial observer can notice a striking similarity between the arrangement of the obverse of Manship's medal and that of the great humanist Vittorino da Feltre from the hand of Pisanello. The type of lettering is almost identical in both medals, which is the medallistic writing of the early fifteenth century, introduced by Pisanello and continued with some slight modifications by Pasti and others. The rosette device in the medal of Dionysus to separate the words was used by Pisanello, although he preferred dots. Manship uses the rosettes at the same time for the decorative value they add to the field, creating a spring-like atmosphere around the head of the god. The first inscription of the Dionysus medal surrounds in a circle the head of the divinity; the inner inscription is completed in both medals with a circular form, a kylix in Manship and a nest of pelicans in Vittorino da Feltre. Both artists arrange the main type inside the double inscription.

The reverse of Dionysus suggests the lower part of another medal of Pisanello, dedicated to Piccinino, in which two youthful nudes are nourished by a griffon. Manship adapted it, rather humoristically, for an alcoholic nourishment, to the nourishment of the grape, or the wine so loved by Omar and other poets. For the race of men has grown up and demands wine:

"Fetch me wine! For the Fast-month is o'er,
Name and fame are in season no more.
Dost thou hear? On this bench soon and late
For a drop of thy liquid I wait."⁵

By Pisanello. Rev., Vittorino da Faltre

By Pisanello. Rev., Piccinino

Perhaps this is the "lighter and gayer touch" of which Manship himself wrote in characterizing his medal. However we are not convinced that Manship took Dionysus only as the "god of revelry," considered so by the "Wet" when the medal was "a bone of contention." The satyrs, indeed, are dominated by lower instincts, but not sufficiently to prevent the sublimation of impulse into art, the dance in this case, marked beautifully by the arabesque of the vine and the motion of the satyrs. It was Dionysus that gave wine, and the wine dance, and the dance drama, and the rest of the arts. The vision of this medal, we claim, represents the birth of the arts. The Puritans had no feeling for music, no dance, no arts, and by imagining an evil in the beautiful they rejected Dionysus and became "Dry." Manship wants to restore Bacchus on aesthetic grounds, to add the pleasure of beauty to the Puritanic virtues.

Now, putting these elements together, the final aesthetic appeal of the medal may be described as follows;

In the obverse, the high relief of Dionysus catches forcefully our attention. The head dressing of the god introduces for the first time the dominant motif—the grape. The eyes and lips show the "magic of the grape." But Dionysus shares his divine magic with us mortals allowing through his wavy beard a flow of the precious liquid to fill up the kylix. The sparkling wine radiates from the life giver of the symposia a halo which adds majesty to the divinity. We offer a libation, followed by the prayer: "Hail to Dionysus who first discovered the magic of the grape," all in a field of rosettes, of nature adorned in her summer dress. The artist, by diminishing the height of the relief from the god to his halo and from it to the field of the inscription has shown very well the pyramid of subordination, from the top of the Olympus down to the levels of humanity. This subtle gradation, however, must be seen in the original medal.

Once familiar with the divine origin of wine, the reverse of the medal continues in the lower human plane to show the manufacturing of wine and its possible use and misuse. The youthful human race, represented in the satyrs, not yet fully dominated by reason, therefore part human and part animal, is striving for the better, for play and fellowship indicated by the cooperation in work and dance, and above all in the trinity of hands. Thus out of the making of wine, in a mythical antiquity, man not yet having fully emerged to the sphere of reason, the birth of art took place, and for the first time the cosmic rhythm was caught by man, imitating in his very body the mysterious periodicity of nature. This was the origin of the dance, beautifully worked out by Manship in the arabesque of the vine. Soon followed a more refined civilization, and the "stupid faces, pointed ears, goat legs, and tails," to use the words of the sculptor, were relegated as atavic traits to an archaic past, and art grew, and beauty was realized, and reason sprung seeking measure, simplicity and balance—which the Puritans neglected—which Manship seeks to restore in his art and more particularly in the medal of Dionysus.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Knoxville, Tennessee

III. NORWAY

Norway's history as an independent nation began again in 1906 after a lapse of nearly six centuries. The first union with Sweden occurred in 1319, and a triple union with Sweden and Denmark lasted from 1397 to 1450. After that until 1814 Norway was associated with Denmark, sometimes as an integral part of the kingdom, sometimes as a province. A strong nationalistic movement arose in the eighteenth century encouraged by improved trade conditions with England, a religious movement led by Hauge, and a literary renaissance under Holberg. The Napoleonic wars made Norway a pawn, and her immediate aspirations for independence were crushed.

Denmark had provided and continued to issue up to the time of separation a distinctive coinage for Norway with the Norwegian coat of arms and usually from the mint at Kongsberg. But no dalers had been issued in the nineteenth century.

Over the protests of the Norwegian people the nation was transferred from Denmark to Sweden by the Treaty of Kiel in January 1814, to punish the former for her adherence to Napoleon and to reward the latter for her aid to the Allies. Nevertheless, the Norwegians drew up a liberal constitution and chose Prince Christian Frederick of Denmark as king. The Swedes under their Crown Prince-elect, Napoleon's former Marshal Bernadotte, invaded and the Norwegians capitulated. A semblance of independence, however, was maintained, and the union with Sweden was to be one of two separate nations under one king.

The years following were not happy. Trade came to a standstill with the end of the wars. The settlement of Norway's share in the Danish national debt proved troublesome. The struggle between the country and the new king, who took the title of Charles XIV John when he came to the throne in 1818, grew bitter. The Norwegians wanted their own flag; they wanted to abolish all nobility, most of which was Danish; they wanted their own diplomatic representatives. Norway had gained a separate currency with the readjustment of 1815, and her large silver coins in the century were to show the ruler's portrait on the obverse and the national arms on the reverse. The portraits are generally similar to those on the contemporary Swedish coins and the inscriptions the same except that each nation placed its own name first—thus in Norway "Charles XIV John, King of Norway, Sweden, Gottland, and Vandalia."

After 1844 under the new king, Oscar I, relations with Sweden improved, but trouble with Russia over the Lapps extended through the 1850's. The single type of daler in this reign adopts the Swedish custom of having the king's motto on his coins—here "Justice and Truth."

Charles XV, who came to the throne in 1859, made a sincere effort to mollify the Norwegians. For fifteen years negotiations went on over proposals to cement a closer union with very few results. It was not until the succeeding reign under the last of the Swedish kings that the triumphant liberal party wrested concessions and finally a peaceful separation in 1906. The two types of Charles XV dalers bear his motto, "The country shall be built by law." With the change of currency in 1873 the dollar size silver pieces were dropped, the two kroner coins being the largest in subsequent reigns.

The value of the coins is indicated on the reverse and the inscription "9¼ ST. 1 MK. FS." meaning 9¼ to the fine mark. The mintmark of the Kongsberg mint is the crossed hammers between the figures of the date. The Norwegian coat of arms, portrayed in a crowned shield also on the reverse, is a golden lion crowned with the battle axe of St. Olaf held aloft. Originally all four paws held the axe, but later the lion carried it only in his forepaws.

FALSE RARE COINS

By FARRAN ZERBE, Past President A. N. A., New York

(A paper read before the New York Numismatic Club January 14, 1944)

False coins imply counterfeits. Our talk will not include counterfeits as made for circulation to deceive the public. Counterfeit money of any kind has no place in numismatics and should not be in private possession.

This talk will be on false rarities made for or to impose on the collector, mostly genuine coins with alterations to simulate rare varieties, and once legal electrotypes made for museum and private space fillers for display purposes.

The products of forgers of ancient Greek coins are deceptive products and made in great variety and quantity—so nearly perfect that sometimes "the doctors disagreed." Our late Mr. Newell, whom we all greatly miss, has told us about them. He was our great authority on ancient coins. The numismatic world is much the poorer for his passing on.

In the display here is a copy in silver of the beautiful and rare decadrachm of Syracuse, one of many false Greek coins I have used for display purposes.

The early Roman series has had many grotesque imitations as well as fine copies for display use. Among the several exhibited here are some weighty bronze pieces that do not conform to accepted originals, and a large bronze of Otho of which none genuine of the size are known.

Modern reproduction of the odd form bronze coins of old China are numerous, mostly made to sell to tourists. They are particularly common among curio collectors in this country, due to a large quantity of varieties, mounted in sets on cards that came for sale purposes at the St. Louis exposition of 1904. They were never taken out of bond by the consignee and later were marketed at small price per set. They serve well to illustrate the types. These copies should be readily identified. They are "too good" to be genuine and the green paint "patination" is a tell-tale. A specimen here is a crude attempt to reproduce the rare open handle spade piece.

Copies of coins of the Bible shown are common. They were legitimately made and sold as part of a small book on the subject. They have served a purpose with ministers and Bible students.

The modern world is well represented by false pieces; shown here are some multiple crowns, a half crown of Cromwell, 1656, a cast copy in silver of a rare variety of the earliest dated "dollar" 1486, and, unusual among false pieces, a countermark head of George III on a "piece of eight," a false doubloon and a copper counterfeit of a Mexican peso that did not get to silvering. Counterfeits in base metal have often been misrepresented as legal "patterns" or "die trials." There is also shown a false peso of 1818 inscribed Carolus IIII, ten years after that ruler died.

Copies of American colonial copper coins were numerous years ago, electrotypes made for collector information. There were also some later years' counterfeits of which a Pine Tree shilling shown here is one. The 1776 Continental dollar being best known in pewter, was an easy subject for the reproducer. Even the Brasher doubloon and the unobtainable 500 and 1000 mills, 1783, have copies in struck pieces in silver.

The bearer of regrets for new collectors is altered dates, king of which is the 1856 eagle cent altered from 1858, easy work for any engraver. As a kid news boy I paid $4 for one, and thought I got it cheap as dealers then priced them at $6 to $8. "No such animal" as an 1815 cent abounds: a 4 doctored to a 1 on an 1845. The engraver crook has also been busy making 1853 no arrow quarters and halves out of 1858s, or removing the arrows and rays on common '53s. We have deceptive 1796 halves made from 1795s. Forgers, particularly those abroad, will place any date on a type. We have 1838 with FIFTY CENTS on reverse, discontinued in 1837. A banker collector friend had me guessing when he showed me an 1816 half dollar; my magnifier went on that 6, it was right. I did not study the 1. It had been part of the 2 in 1826.

Beware of patterns intended for gold coinage. Most all exist in copper and gold plating is easy. I have had my fingers burned. Weight is the best test.

Forged mintmarks have made some "rarities" of common coins, particularly a forged O under Liberty head on the common no mintmark half dollar of 1838. An O altered to a D, or vice versa, or mark entirely removed, have simulated false rarities.

The gem product of coin surgeons has been earlier dated dollars to place them in the high society class groomed like 1804s. The last figure in the date is successfully amputated and the grafting of a 4 to replace the removed member is so clever you cannot tell the difference. The operation is quite a success. It is pedigree, not date, that determines status.

Well altered "1804" dollars have a market among horse and card jugglers as flash pieces. Sold for what they are, I have known up to $100 to be paid. I have paid $50 to have one for a display piece. Two specimens shown here.

The notable false "rarity" is the "1805" dollar. It was "discovered" in Europe, noted as the only one known, and was cable news to the U. S. It is rarer than that; none is known. On show here.

Copies of California slugs made for souvenirs have been show pieces. Counterfeits of private gold issues are uncommon. Here is a Bechtler dollar in brass.

All copies of rarities are not counterfeits in the sense that they were made for imposition. They were made for cabinet fill-ins and openly sold as such. The harm has come in their later misrepresentation.

The producer of false Bryan money pieces was discovered and collectors warned. Beware of all alleged Bryan money in any lead composition that is not in the catalogue. More than fifteen years has not developed a new variety of the "dollar" size pieces.

The making of anything in similitude to U. S. money has long been prohibited. Our efficient chief of the Secret Service, Frank J. Wilson, proclaims, "Know your money." The seasoned numismatist admonishes "Know your dealer."

Ethical dealers strive to destroy false pieces, or present them to public collections for purposes of comparison. They strive for honorable dealing to establish a reputation and protect it. Some altered dates and forged mintmarks have caused the "doctors to disagree," but if a mistake is made, correction has to follow or discredit will. Fortunately, there is no grape vine better for rapid transmission than that of the coin fraternity. Numismatists, particularly here in New York City, have been responsible for apprehension of the counterfeiter of rare commemorative half dollars, all fine products.

Beware of false rarities. They are fewer now than of old. Publicity has led to their detection. It has become a practice with dealers and advanced collectors to present them to the American Numismatic Society for comparative purposes, or to destroy them.

But with it all, I am reminded of what my old friend, F. E. Ellis, founder of the St. Louis Stamp and Coin Company, said, "We now and then buy a coin on suspicion."

NATIONAL COIN WEEK

April 16-22, 1944

It has been the custom of the A. N. A. for the past several years to designate a particular week, usually in April, as National Coin Week. During that week a special effort is made by members of the Association and by the local coin clubs throughout the Country to arrange for exhibits, newspaper publicity, radio talks, and in other ways to call attention to the interest, pleasure and educational value of our hobby. The observance of National Coin Week has been very successful in previous years and this has been so because of the splendid work and cooperation of the many members who participated. It is the hope of the Association that it will be even more successful this year.

It has been customary to have a particular theme, the celebration of some important milestone in the history of our coinage, and to build the exhibits and publicity around this theme, without, of course, restricting the exhibits in any way. This year it will be appropriate to have as the theme first coined in 1794. The April issue of THE NUMISMATIST will have more to say about this and some suggestions for local publicity on the subject.

Prizes to individuals and to clubs have usually been offered, both by the Association and by various dealers in coins. The Association will accept and distribute, in accordance with the wishes of the donor, any prizes that dealers may care to offer, but no direct solicitation will be made for such prizes. Last year the prizes offered by the Association consisted of special banners and ribbons, individually printed with name of the winner. It is not certain that prizes of this sort can be obtained now so that it is possible that we may not be able to offer special prizes this year. A definite announcement on this will be made later. In any case, a full report of individual and club activity will be published in THE NUMISMATIST.

Club Secretaries or Presidents should begin now to plan the participation of their members, and individuals should begin to make advance arrangements for exhibit space and newspaper publicity. The April issue will contain further announcements.

President Kortjohn has just announced the appointment of Charles P. Knoth of St. Albans, N. Y., as General Chairman.

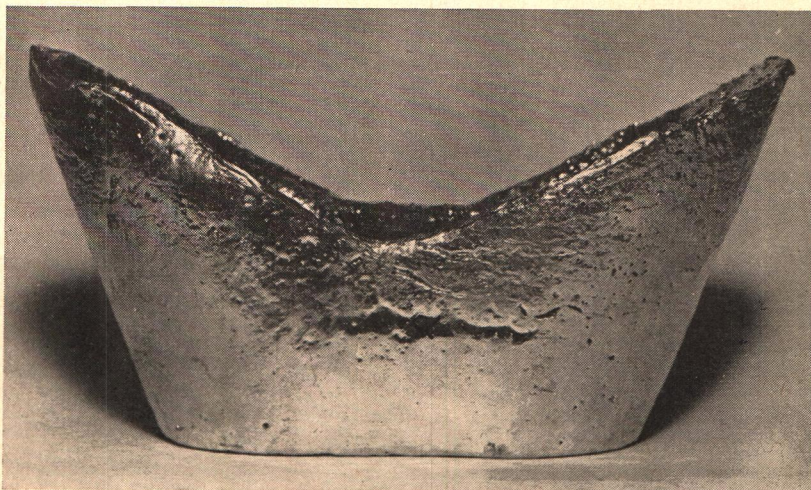

LEWIS M. REAGAN,
Director of Publicity.

ONE OF THE FUNDAMENTALS OF DEMOCRACY

"That some should be rich shows that others may become rich, and hence is just encouragement to industry and enterprise. Let not him who hath no house tear the house house of his neighbor; but rather let him strive diligently to build one for himself, thus, by example, showing confidence that when his own is built it will stand undisturbed."—Lincoln.

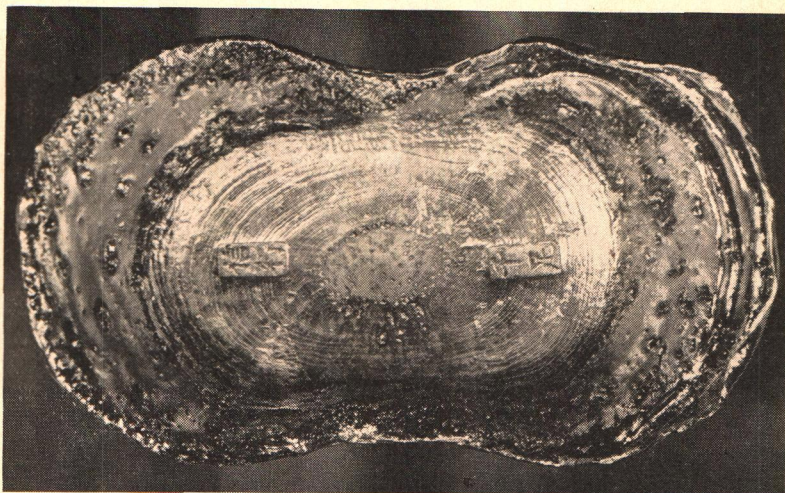

CHINESE SLIPPER MONEY

By P. O. SIGLER, Lt. Col., J.A.G.D., Fort Belvoir, Virginia

SIDE VIEW—SLIGHTLY REDUCED

The above illustrated 50 tael sycee, or “slipper money,” is one of the world’s largest silver coins, measuring $4\frac{3}{4}$ inches in length, 3 inches in width, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches in depth, and weighs approximately 4 pounds. It is dated about 1850, was made in a sand mould as indicated by its smooth outer surface, is of pure silver with the exception of a very small percentage of copper alloy, and was used as money in China. Its value was about \$30.00 in United States currency.

INSIDE VIEW—FROM DIRECTLY ABOVE

These queer stamped silver pieces are thought to have first appeared in China during the reign of Kublan Khan, the Mongol emperor who ruled from 1260-1295 A. D. Some of them are round and resemble a kettle drum, others are square, but most of them are shaped like the one illustrated and the standard pieces range in size from this large 50 tael size to tiny "slippers" weighing less than an ounce.

Banks which were especially selected by the government were permitted to have their silver made into sycee by smelting shops called Loofangs, and a small charge was made for this service. The smelter usually stamped the finished piece with the name of the place where it was manufactured and the date, after which it was delivered to an assayer who, for another small fee, certified to the purity and weight by stamping the piece or by writing on them with Chinese ink. Although the method of manufacture and assay was very primitive, experts are astounded by the accuracy of the stamped weight and degree of purity.

Sycee were used in China until prohibited by law in 1933, being supplanted by coined silver dollars. Wealthy Chinese frequently had much of their riches in silver bullion which they converted into sycee as a convenient method of storing it. In addition, it then became an acceptable medium of exchange, and could be freely spent for goods, services and taxes. The 50 tael sycee, like gold coins in the United States in the days before the establishment of clearing houses, were used by banks in the same city to settle daily balances. They were also employed in foreign trade. The smaller sycee were used as a currency for expensive purchases which could not conveniently be paid in the lowly cash, worth but a fraction of our cent.

OUR COINAGE IN 1943

During the year 1943 the United States Mints struck a record number of coins, totalling 2,023,898,270 pieces, of which over half were steel cents. Each of the Mints struck coins of every denomination up to the half dollar. As was mentioned in the report for the preceding year, the 1943 cents were struck from zinc plated steel. Though 1,093,838,670 pieces were made, they were not favorably received by the public because of their confusion with the dime when new, and also because they became grey or black when in circulation for a short time. Their disfavor has been so great that in 1944 cents will be struck again from a copper alloy to be obtained from used shell cases. The steel cents are to remain in circulation and the Treasury Department advises that they served the useful purpose of conservation of copper. The Mint does not admit the striking of any bronze cents bearing the 1943 date. The 1943 five cent pieces are again of the same kind as those for the latter half of 1942 and contain no nickel. No proof coins were struck in 1943.

Coinage for the year 1943 was as follows:

	Philadelphia	San Francisco	Denver
Half dollars	53,190,000	13,450,000	11,346,000

A POST WAR PROJECT FOR OUR MINTS

By R. BRUCE McPHERSON, A. N. A. No. 7741, Detroit, Michigan

(A paper read at the 450th meeting of the Detroit Coin Club)

The coins of the United States are definitely emblems of the sovereign power of this nation. No other government authority in this country is permitted to coin money, nor is any private individual or corporate body so empowered. The coins themselves bear the emblems of such power and authority.

Since 1793, when the first United States Mint was established, our coins have carried the emblems we cherish as setting forth our belief in the sovereign power of these United States. Among these emblems most often appear the Liberty Head or the full figure of Liberty, emblem of the freedom we enjoy as citizens of this great nation; the eagle, emblem of power and might; the shield, emblematic of the protective powers of our government, together with the stars that glorify our flag. Among the legends that appear on our coins, our country's name and that of Liberty are generally prominent as well as the motto E Pluribus Unum, significant of the close union of our states.

It is not fitting that these coins should be roughly handled, scratched, nicked and otherwise marred in the process of packaging and transporting them from the various mints to the points where they reach the hands of the ultimate users. Coin collectors securing uncirculated coins from the United States Treasury find in the Treasury's remittance letter the following statement:

"Treasury cannot undertake to furnish coins that are free from tarnish and scratches. Coins become scratched in the necessary counting and packing at the mints, and they become tarnished after being stored away at the mints for a short time."

Under the present system of counting, handling and packing for shipment from the mints our coins are more or less defaced. They are dumped loose into canvas bags, loaded on trucks or trains for transfer to the Treasury or sub Treasuries, then shipped to distant Federal Reserve Banks. Here they may be counted and rolled, or again shipped loose in canvas bags to correspondent banks in the larger communities, with perhaps another trip to banks in smaller centers. They undergo rough handling all the way. Nicks and dents, scratches from abrasion in rubbing against each other, and prints from the fingers of bank clerks who count the coins before rolling them into standard size rolls, all take their toll from the bright faces and edges of the newly minted coins.

Today the art and science of packaging the products of industry has reached a high peak of excellence. Step into any drug store, and you find the display rack on the counter filled with attractively wrapped rolls, not of cents, nickels and dimes, but candies "a great big roll for a nickel." Today the hardware merchant would not be willing to receive a shipment of screws, bolts or any of dozens of hardware items in canvas bags to be stacked around on the floor. Instead the trade demands and receives these articles carefully packed in cartons so they will stack squarely on the shelves and correctly labeled for quick identification. These facts also apply to many other kinds of merchandise.

In this, the farthest advanced industrial nation in the world, our mints are definitely behind the times in the handling, packing and shipping of our coins as they come from the presses.

Therefore let our government make, as one of its contributions to the post war period, the installation in our mints of the most modern machinery possible, so that our coins will pass from the coining machines to the ultimate user, machine sorted, rolled in standard rolls, packed in standard cartons, and labeled with distinctive labels. The label on each carton should show the denomination, the amount contained, the year of coinage and the mint at which the coins were issued. All this could be done without the coins being touched by human hands.

When done these things would be accomplished. Our coinage would reach the ultimate user free from scratches, nicks, abrasion and finger prints. Being put in rolls immediately after coining, they would to a large extent be free from tarnish.

I believe our banks would welcome a relief from the time, labor and liability of error involved in counting, rolling and storing the immense number of new coins needed in servicing the nation's business. They would be rid of the nuisance of having bags of loose coins piled on their vault floors with no identification other than a tag easily torn off or disfigured. Bank tellers and examiners would find it much easier under this system to take inventories of various denominations on hand. The mints, Treasury and Sub-Treasuries would derive the same benefits from a more modern and systematic method of storing their surplus coins, if packed in labeled cartons and stored on shelves where all labels would be easily read for checking and inventory.

Our numismatists and coin collectors would, I am sure, give a hearty welcome to the receipt of uncirculated coins in perfect condition.

From a practical as well as from a patriotic and an artistic standpoint this United States of America should possess the finest and most modern coinage system in the world. American ingenuity and mechanical ability can do the job.

Let this be the Mint's Post War Project.

AN OBSERVATION FROM AN OLD COLLECTOR

"Owing to the great demand for proofs, it seems that a new industry has sprung up in the coin business. A recent ad reads 'polished proof.' Now, a proof coin is one struck at the Mint on a specially prepared flan polished before it is struck. Any other is not a proof, although there are coins with proof surfaces where the flans were unusually smooth and perfect. Now some of the best 'extremely fine' and 'uncirculated' pieces are being transformed into 'proof' coins!"

ANOTHER INVERTED REVERSE

A $20 Federal Reserve note, series of 1934, with reverse inverted, has been reported by Mr. R. Bloom, a member of the Rochester Numismatic Association. He would be interested to know if any other similar specimen of this series has been discovered.

A FRIENDLY WORD TO CLUB SECRETARIES

In the interests of all concerned, the Editor feels it necessary to call certain matters to the attention of those Club Secretaries who prepare reports of their meetings for publication herein. He is confident these suggestions will be recognized as reasonable, and that the fine spirit of co-operation so evident among Club officers will easily solve the difficulties.

First of all, it is clear that copies of the minutes of these meetings must be edited, and those items which are merely routine, or which are of purely local interest, omitted. It is also necessary to condense at times, for the space available for such reports is limited.

Again, there are several important rules that should be observed—not serious if overlooked in any one report, but they add up to a headache for the Editor when he is confronted with the necessity of revisions in four out of every five reports received. The printer is expected to “follow copy,” and it should therefore be correct when it reaches him. The following points, if observed, will help enormously:

1. Never capitalize the denomination of a coin, nor the metal of which it is composed.
2. Never use a hyphen except for compound words, or in dividing syllables at the end of a line; they belong nowhere else. This does not refer to dashes, which are sometimes (wrongly) indicated by a single hyphen.
3. Do not capitalize a coin's condition—such as “very fine,” “uncirculated,” “proof,” etc.
4. Please punctuate INSIDE your quotes, NOT outside (see No. 3).
5. Never use a “short and” (&) in straight reading matter; spell it out.
6. Use abbreviations sparingly.
7. When numbers less than ten are used, spell them out; if ten or over, either spelling or figures will be proper: Attendance, 15 members and four guests (not 4 guests).
8. Indent the first line of each paragraph.
9. Refer to a member as “John H. Smith,” not merely as “Mr. Smith.” We might want to identify him, and “Mr.” alone is a bit confusing—even baffling.
10. All reports should be typed.

The foregoing may seem too simple to merit attention, but every month literally hundreds of corrections must be made in the reports sent to the printer—a time consuming process, and wholly unnecessary if the above rules are observed. If you will compare your copy minutely with the printed version you may discover what changes (if any) have been required.

The Editor will be grateful for your complete cooperation.

A CORRECTION—AND A QUERY

In the February NUMISMATIST, under “Publications Received,” we quoted a statement from Stack's Numismatic Review to the effect that one of their contributors, William S. Dewey (Life Member No. 52) was a grandson of Admiral Dewey. Mr. Dewey has asked that this be corrected, since a relationship, while it did exist, was indeed remote.

He also sends in two brass trade tokens, each the size of our present 5 cent piece, on which he would like information as to the time and place of issue, and nature of the business. On the obverse of one is a well designed monogram, nearly filling the field, of the letters MNC. On the obverse of the other is simply the name DEWEY, curved, over a figure 1. The reverses are similar: the name DEWEY horizontal in the center, pellets above and below; around, GOOD FOR 5c IN TRADE; small ornament at bottom. Can anyone attribute these tokens?

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established.* The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Editor. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"THE MIRACLE OF ENGLAND"

On more than one occasion we have emphasized the importance of collateral reading in connection with any phase of numismatics. This is, of course, in addition to a study of reference material dealing directly and solely with the series of coins, medals or paper money in which the collector may be interested—and such study should be regarded as indispensable.

But collateral reading, carefully chosen, provides background and atmosphere, in a manner of speaking, complementing the reference material of immediate importance. After having tested this theory (in reality a principle, rather), who will deny that a new and deeper significance attaches to the ancient Roman series from having read Ferrero's "Greatness and Decline of Rome;" or his "Women of the Caesars;" or "Lives of the Twelve Caesars" by that lusty old historian Suetonius? What could better re-create the atmosphere of our colonial times than Carl Van Doren's superb biography of Benjamin Franklin? Or, considering a later period, another masterpiece—"Andrew Jackson," by Marquis James. These examples might be multiplied many times, opening up a fascinating avenue of research, adding enormously to our understanding and appreciation of our collections, be they large or small.

In support of this "article of faith," may we place high up among the list of such notable volumes "The Miracle of England," by André Maurois (1940). There have been many histories of England, but none we have ever read has afforded the downright satisfaction realized in this study of an ancient island that in the course of centuries was to become the center of a great empire, finally of the still greater British Commonwealth of Nations.

The author's style is clear, his skill in condensation is marked, and his ability to reinvest the past and its peoples with the actuality of today is exceptional.

It is because of the rare quality of this history that the collector to whom English coins appeal can find therein a background of far greater extent than is present in the various works on the coins of England—valuable as they are within their self-imposed limits. Perhaps many collectors in this country have neglected the early silver pennies because they were current during a long period which seemed almost hopelessly unfamiliar, and therefore without interest. But Maurois gives us a clear cut running story of those difficult times, giving each reign a separate place in its own right, yet as a part of the whole. William the Conqueror becomes as real as Charles I; and King John, who signed the Magna Carta, as George III, whom our colonists found unsympathetic to that historic document. And so on, down to the strange drama of the abdication of Edward VIII, and the beginning of the reign of the present King, George VI.

A history of distinction in its own right, it should be especially welcome to those who sense the peculiar appeal of England's coinages; and to them we most heartily commend this well named volume.

TO MEMBERS WHOSE DUES WERE UNPAID FEBRUARY 15

The Editor has been directed to remove from the mailing list the names of all members whose annual dues were not received by the General Secretary by February 15th. Upon subsequent payment, however, the magazine will be resumed, and any missing issues supplied as long as our surplus stock permits.

POSTAL ZONE NUMBERS

The Post Office Department is urging, in fact insisting, that so far as possible all mail for cities in which postal zones have been established shall bear the proper number of the zone in which the mail is to be delivered.

In your correspondence with the Editor always give your postal zone number, if any, and if a member, or non-member subscriber, correction will be made in your recorded address unless already noted. The addition of the zone number speeds up delivery of the magazine—a welcome result at any time, but especially in these days of abnormally heavy mails and reduced forces of postal employees.

NOVEL COIN EXHIBIT AIDS WAR BOND DRIVE

(From the New Haven (Conn.) Register)

Milford, Jan. 20.—An exhibit of coins of the United Nations, mostly dollar size, was announced yesterday by Albert Stowe, treasurer of The Milford Trust Company. No charge is made to view the exhibit, which is located in the lobby of the bank, but it is hoped that all persons viewing it will be stimulated into buying "that extra bond" for the Fourth War Loan.

In addition to coins of the United Nations, there are two large frames containing specimens of "Odd and Curious Money of the World," purported to be one of the finest in New England. Also to be seen are a frame containing the complete types of Fractional Currency issued during the Civil War that are still legal tender; a frame housing the complete type set of the last issue of Confederate Money, from the 50c denomination to the rare $500 note; and a very interesting frame containing most of the state issues of tax tokens in various metals, cardboard, fibre, paper and plastic.

The exhibit planned through the co-operation of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Katen, will be open to the public during the business hours of the institution.

A CLOSING ARGUMENT ON THE STEEL CENT

The Washington Post recently voiced on its editorial page some caustic criticism of the steel cent, and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, promptly replied. While the minting of these unwelcome substitutes for the traditional copper ceased on December 31st, they are still in circulation—over a billion of them—and the statement by Mrs. Ross is timely. One could wish that the public would be one half as vocal in praise of coins which do have an artistic appeal as it is in “beefing” about a piece which (even with good reason) it doesn’t like.

The clipping was received through the courtesy of Major Joseph Moss.

The editorial that appeared in The Post of Tuesday, December 28, voicing in strong and arresting terms dissatisfaction with the currently issued 1-cent piece, doubtless struck a responsive chord in the minds of readers to whom it has been, in varying degrees, annoying.

It was from inadvertence, I conclude, rather than from lack of understanding, that the editorial failed to mention that the adoption of zinc-coated steel early in 1943 for the sole purpose of releasing copper which was critically needed for guns, ships and planes with which to fight the war, and the further fact that there was absolutely no material available to the Mint other than common steel, for the 1-cent piece. (The zinc, for coating, was a concession on the part of the War Production Board to prevent rusting).

The inconvenience we have suffered on account of this coin has meant that approximately 4700 tons of copper have this year gone into armaments that ordinarily would have been consumed in the making of 1-cent pieces.

The Post’s statement implies that it was from choice rather than necessity that the Treasury changed the content of the coin. Far from it! The fact is that the Mint has been beset by harassing mechanical difficulties in the processing of this unsuitable material. We of the Mint heartily rejoice that the War Production Board now sees its way clear to allocate the necessary amount of copper to permit a return on January 1 to the coin with which the country is familiar.

I further state for your information, and that of Post readers, that the Mint, though operating 24 hours daily, finds its facilities sorely strained to meet the current demand of business for 1-cent pieces; a fact that points to the impracticability of calling in those of zinc-coated steel, already in circulation.

NELLIE TAYLOE ROSS.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor:

Under “Editorial Comment,” in our January Numismatist, the question is raised, “Why have we lost 6,000 of our 10,000 members?”* As a member of our organization and as one willing and eager to have a share in the team work so needed and desired, I offer the following opinion as one of the main reasons why we have lost and are losing so many members.

In order to explain this opinion I will tell a little story, which is common to all dyed-in-the-wool, ardent coin collectors. A certain collector, whom I know well, had occasion, as collectors do, to purchase a common cent. He felt that the uncirculated specimen was more than he could afford, so he decided upon one in slightly inferior condition and began to watch advertisements until he could obtain one that would serve his purpose. Now as the uncirculated specimen was worth $5.00 and could not be had for less, he was more than delighted when he saw an “extremely fine” one offered for $1.00. Now, to the more experienced collector the fact that this was ridiculously low in price would tell him to forget the coin, but the new and enthusiastic young collector sent his money for the coin, and lo!

tion. All alike are parts of the great laws of the universe. All our serious monetary controversy in the United States is the result of vicious teaching to be found in our own Constitution, inherited from a corrupt age, when the fiat of a king was thought sufficient to make a coin worth more than its weight in the metal content thereof.

Where did the people of the United States learn the heretical doctrine of fiat money? Is it not taught in the Constitution of the United States? The people should at once strike at the root of the evil and eradicate from the fundamental law the theory that the value of anything can be regulated by arbitrary fiat in violation of natural law.

Let the people restore to themselves their inalienable right to liberty of trade, so that they can deal with each other in gold, silver or in wheat or cotton or in corn as they please, and pay in what they have agreed to pay in, without impertinent interference from legislators or anybody else. Then, and only then, can the monetary system of this United States be placed on a sound foundation, and all the gold, silver and other products of our mines, as well as the products of human industry and the people who produce or own them, can become truly free.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM J. SCHULTZ.

Cincinnati, Ohio, December 9, 1943.

COMMUNICATION

Pomona, Calif.

Dec. 3, 1943.

To the Editor:

I have just returned from Costa Rica where I have been for the past seven months. While there I learned many things about their coinage. I brought back with me a few specimens of their gold, silver and nickel coins. Gold coins are very much in demand there and bring a good price. They have a custom which many people try to follow; when a man is married the finest gift he can make his wife is one of 13 gold coins made into a bracelet. This probably accounts for some of the demand for gold coins.

One Money Exchange shop in San Jose had a very good selection of gold from many countries, their $20.00 U. S. gold pieces being the most valuable. They had a flat price of $70.00 for any double eagle, regardless of date or condition.

Their present coins of nickel are coined in San Jose, the Capital. I secured two proof specimens of their 1943 coins. They don't seem to have quite the lustre of our U. S. proofs.

I am also of the opinion that this war will make more people coin collectors. Coming back on the boat about 75 per cent of the fellows were talking and trading coins from Central America. They were trying to get some from each country. Many of them will throw them into a cigar box when they get home and never think of them again, but some will keep on traveling and picking up coins until they can't stop when they return home.

I am interested very much in type collections of U. S. Coins. Your Handbook W-52 that you describe in the June issue sounds interesting. I would like to have you send it to me, at your convenience, or any other book that you consider might be of some help to me with my type set.

STEWART J. BINGHAM, A. N. A. 9691.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

ALBANY NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—139th meeting, Feb. 10, 1944. Twenty members and two visitors were present; President Reynolds in the chair.

President Pond addressed the meeting with an informal report of his activities as an officer in the Society over a period of a great many years, remarking that although his associations with the officers and members during these years had been of the finest quality, and that he regretted exceedingly to surrender any office in the Society at this time, he felt it would be for the best interests of all if he be allowed to relinquish any office and take his place among the members, for a much needed rest. He graciously volunteered to assist on any committees or otherwise. At the close of his remarks the members unanimously extended President Pond their heartfelt gratitude and appreciation for his long and untiring efforts in bringing the Society to the position it holds today.

The President then called upon one of our guests for the evening, Mr. John Zug of Bowie, Md., for a few remarks. Mr. Zug responded with a very interesting talk on numismatics in general, and referred to his several visits to Boston, especially the A. N. A. convention of 1921. He illustrated his talk with specimens of rare and beautiful gold coins.

A report of the Auction Committee given by Mr. Head, was to the effect that there should be 5 lots of coins per member, and lots from approximately 12 members, and that the listings be made within two weeks after the previous meeting, also that the consignor grade his own coins.

A discussion was had concerning future auctions, whether a 10% commission not in excess of 50c per lot, be charged to the purchaser, or whether it be a straight 10% with no limitation. If bids are lower than the face value shall the consignor have an open bid or protective bid. This discussion ended with a motion made by Mr. Rodecker that the consignor was to have the privilege to bid on his own coins and pay the 10% unlimited commission. Carried.

Rev. Golding supplemented his talk with an unusually large and interesting collection of United States coins dating from the earliest times down to the present, including several excellent specimens of the 1856 flying eagle cent and many other rarities. NUMISMATIC AND ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY OF PHILADELPHIA

A stated meeting of the Society was held by invitation of Mr. Whiting at the Union League on January 24th. After a delicious dinner the meeting was called to order by the Secretary, who requested Mr. Scattergood to take the chair. Mr. Scattergood called on Mr. Reilly, Chairman of the Nominating Committee, who nominated Mr. Longstreth to succeed himself as President for the coming year. Mr. Longstreth was thereupon unanimously elected President of the Society for 1944.

Mr. Longstreth took the chair and requested Mr. Reilly to continue with his nominations for the remaining officers and for the several Committees of the Society. All the officers were re-elected.

Mr. Norris was called upon for a report on Numismatics, and requested Mr. Tatnall to present the interesting exhibition of paper money which he had brought.

Mr. Norton then presented a list of the Society's positions which he had prepared. The Membership feels that this list is of great importance and expressed appreciation of Mr. Norton's work in preparing it. It was then moved, seconded and unanimously carried that Mr. Norton's report be made a part of this meeting. The report being the result of a request made at a previous meeting that a list of the Society's positions be prepared and kept on active file.

Mr. Castor then reported progress in the preparation of our next publication. During 1936 to 1943 inclusive, twenty articles have been handed to him for inclusion in Volume 33. The previous volume contained seventeen articles which required 265 pages for publication. The Committee now plans to prepare the necessary illustrations, and when funds are available it proposes to print 100 bound and 100 unbound copies of the new volume. It was also proposed that the Numismatic Committee consider the possibility of selling duplicate coins in order to raise additional cash for completing this publication.

The Society then took a recess at which time Mr. Haslam introduced our speaker, Mr. Carl Zigrosser, Curator of Prints at the Philadelphia Museum of Art. Mr. Zigrosser spoke in a very interesting fashion in regard to modern prints. His talk was illustrated with appropriate slides. At the conclusion of his address a vote of thanks was given him for his interesting and instructive lecture.

In attendance there were 28 members and two guests.

—M. WISTAR WOOD, Secretary.

OMAHA COIN CLUB—Twelve members gathered at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Judd for our 105th meeting, Friday evening, February 4.

A brief business meeting was called to order by President Blaufuss. After its conclusion the rest of the evening was devoted to looking over Dr. Judd's well known collection of patterns, gold series, U. S. type sets, odd and curious monies, and many other coins too numerous to mention. Dr. Judd also had on display a Panama Pacific set complete in original box.

As a special feature, Mr. Haase had arranged to have one of the six known 1913 Liberty Head nickels on exhibit. It has a perfect mat finish, and all members were glad of the opportunity to see this famous coin. He also had a 1915 Lincoln cent struck in gold, and an 1859 cent struck over an 1857 half-dime. These coins are all very rare and are the property of Mr. J. V. McDermott, of South Milwaukee, Wis.

The guests keenly appreciated the privilege of viewing these rich displays, and the delicious lunch afterwards served by Mrs. Judd and Mrs. Wilson proved a happy climax to the evening.

—RAYMOND MOULTON, Secretary.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The 81st regular meeting was called to order by President Felix Baranovich February 14th in the Rose Room of the Hotel Benson, Portland, with 26 members and 5 visitors in attendance.

A motion was passed authorizing the secretary to compile and publish an annual membership booklet at the expense of the club. It was suggested that the form of the Chicago Coin Club booklet be followed.

After the business session the meeting was turned over to Stephen Bibler, chairman of the program committee, who brought attention to the following Washington exhibits: Large display of paper money bearing portrait of Geo. Washington, belonging to Geo. McLarty. Complete set of Washington quarters, uncirculated, belonging to Hugh Davenport. Display of Washington copper coins and tokens issued during late 1700's, belonging to H. Perry.

Hugh Davenport showed several of the new Lincoln copper cents (aren't they pretty when compared with the old dull iron ones!) and told how they were supposed to be made of scrap metal—copper shells returned from the fighting front. [See Dec. issue, p. 1005. —Ed.]

V. S. Bonebrake gave a short talk on the various positions of mint marks on the Lincoln cents, and freaks, such as the 1922 plain. He told how President Theodore Roosevelt had been an admirer of Abraham Lincoln and had requested V. D. Brenner to make the design for the cent which was issued in the 100th birthyear of Lincoln. His talk on various locations and positions of the mint marks was rather technical to us "students" and requires digesting, and perhaps a repetition at another meeting to fully inform us so that we may understand.

Mrs. Effee Eltinge told the story of Victor D. Brenner, sculptor, whose real name was Victoras Barnauskas. Born in Shavli, Lithuania, on June 12, 1871, he grew to be an expert die-maker. An innocent duplication of the official Russian seals obliged him to flee from Russia. As a youth he came to the United States where he continued his studies and work in the arts. It was here that he changed his name to the present Americanized spelling. His best known works are the plaques and die-engravings of Abraham Lincoln. He died in New York on April 5, 1924.

John Townsley told the old story about Washington throwing a dollar across the Potomac River. When questioned as to the ability of Washington and the width or span of the river, he replied "Well, a dollar went a lot further in those days!"

Stephen Bibler showed some rarities from the Col. Greene collection belonging to J. V. McDermott of South Milwaukee, Wisconsin. These are the 1859 Indian head cent stamped over the 1857 half dime in silver, and a 1915 Lincoln cent in gold. The club appreciates the opportunity to view these coins. Observations and explanatory talks were given by Geo. Pipes, Leonard Trythall and Bibler.

Other items on display were:

A freak 1921-S dollar without reeding and stamped off-center, shown by Stephen Bibler.

A freak 1819 fifty cents stamped only half way across the planchet, shown by Felix Baranovich. U. S. proof sets by Stan Sebolt.

The meeting was closed with an auction with John Slusher as auctioneer. The auctions are highly successful these days, and the commissions are now paying the running expenses of the Club. All you have to do is "offer it for sale."

President Baranovich asked for freak coins to be shown as exhibit material at the March meeting.

—STEPHEN H. BIBLER, Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—

The 104th meeting of the Club was called to order at 8 P. M. by President Hooper, on Thursday evening, February 10th, in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel with 35 members and guests present.

A discussion arose concerning the purchase of books for The Free Library of Philadelphia. It was reported that five books on different subjects had been ordered to date thru Mr. Ira Reed. The library now has a work by Price on "Definitions of Numismatic Names."

Mr. Ballard gave a report of the replies to "The News Letter" which is sent to the men in the armed service and to those members who are ill. Major Moss wanted to be remembered to the Club. John LeJa sent in a letter from Sampson, N. Y., and three letters were received from Sergeant George Magee who is in Italy together with some crisp Italian Occupation notes. These notes were distributed to the members as chance prizes.

Mr. Ira Reed, the Curator, announced that President Richard Hooper was displaying this month at 37 S. 18th St., Philadelphia, a very fine and complete set of proof nickels and proof quarters from 1858 to 1915.

The exhibits of the evening were as follows:

Mr. Tattall: A set of English Jubilee coins; Morocco, 1 ryal, dated 1918.

Mr. Vanderwende: A Hawaiian $1.00 note with the low serial number of 66; an African $1.00 note. Both notes were in crisp condition.

Mr. Vanderwende spoke to us very informatively about the history of Sweden and Swedish coins. He reviewed the various rulers of the country and explained in detail some of the coins issued by them. One interesting series he mentioned was the large plate money which, according to tradition, was used as ballast by boats sailing in the early days to America, and that some of our large cents were supposed to have been made from the plate money.

Mr. Schick conducted a very lively auction of a large variety of coins.

At our March meeting Mr. Willard P. Snyder, the Treasurer, will speak to us on "The Norman Coinage of England."

—ARTHUR SIPE, Secretary.

PACIFIC COAST NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—337th meeting, January 26th, with 26 members and five guests present.

In the absence of President Morris Mr. Ralph A. Mitchell presided, and in a very appropriate ceremony installed the newly elected officers for 1944.

The Secretary submitted a healthy financial report and reviewed the activities of the Society of the last year. He recommended that the Society should have a permanent library and reading room for the members, and after many suggestions it was decided to defer the matter until the next meeting for final action.

The program of the evening consisted of a fine talk by Messrs. Sewell and Crossfield; 41 of the 100 known varieties of the 1794 cent were displayed. This was very well received by all present. Lt. Bowker talked on fake Chinese coins, and promised a display of Chinese coins for the next meeting.

An auction was held after the meeting with great success.

Coins of the Countries starting with the letter P were on display in which Ensign Lenker, Sgt. Webber and Mr. Redfield participated. Sgt. Webber also displayed various U. S. Invasion Paper money. Mr. Mitchell displayed a belt made of 387 $\frac{1}{4}$ real silver coins of Guatemala. The 1944 "S" mint Lincoln cents were also on display.

—EDWARD FOGLER, Secretary.

PITTSBURGH COIN CLUB—The Winter meeting of the Club was held Wednesday, January 19th, in the game room of the Pittsburgh Coal Co.; for a change of scenery, one of our friends invited us to meet in the office of Mr. W. W. Reynolds, in the Columbia Bank Building, which we accepted with thanks.

We had a very interesting meeting with a large turn out of members and visitors. It was noted with sorrow one of our members, Mr. O. W. Millikin, had passed to the great beyond.

Several coins were displayed for proper identification and classification; it is the desire of our experts to assist any member or friend of our Club to identify his or her coins.

As this was our election night, the following members were nominated and elected to serve for the year 1944: President: Howard D. Gibbs; Vice President: Dr. Paul McBride Gillis; Secretary-Treasurer: J. Edgar Cunningham; Librarian: Jimmie Kerr.

The following coins were displayed and a brief history was given by their owners:

President Gibbs: 40 rare crowns and multiples up to the 5 crowns; his display also included the rare Greenland dollar. Vice President Gillis displayed Cob money, Philip IV 8 reals; medals of Franklin, William Pitt, John Paul Jones and Alexander Hamilton. Kerr, two Siberian 10 kopecks of 1767, used by the serfs of Siberia; also a 5 kopeck of Russia dated 1780; Reynolds, two Proclamation pieces for Cuba under Spain, dated 1834, and three counter-stamped pieces of Holland; Gaede, some large United States paper money of various kinds; Kranack, some 3 and 5 dollar gold pieces.

—J. EDGAR CUNNINGHAM, Secretary.

RACINE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The 71st monthly meeting was held Friday, Feb. 11, at the Y. M. C. A. Thirteen members and two guests were present.

The banquet committee reported that the banquet this year would be held on the evening of April 27, at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Rev. A. G. Weiler gave a talk on Vatican coins, and displayed many fine pieces minted in Vatican City, all issued in 1929, and all but the gold in 1939.

—A. L. GROSS, Secretary.

RICHMOND COIN CLUB—The thirty-fifth regular meeting of the Club was held at 8 P. M. on Wednesday, February 9, at the Byrd Park Club House, with President Lewis presiding. There were six members and two visitors present despite the inclement weather.

A most serious discussion arose with regard to publicity in order to interest more people in numismatics and the Club, such as placing appropriate books on numismatics in the Public Library. The President asked Mrs. Lewis to ascertain what can be done by way of contacting the Department of Public Education with a view of introducing the subject of coins and coin collecting in the public schools of the city.

He also asked the Publicity Committee to investigate and endeavor to obtain space in the Sunday paper each week for an article on Coins and Coin Collecting. [See editorial on p. 91, January issue, this magazine.—Ed.]

The matter of displays for each meeting night was also discussed. Since the outbreak of the war, the members have practically neglected bringing anything of general interest to visitors for purposes of display. Mr. Stevenson, Chairman of the Exhibits Committee, was requested to see that there is a display of general interest each meeting night.

Mr. Levi displayed a complete set of the 1918 series of $1 notes from the Federal Reserve Banks from each of the twelve districts.

Mr. Mallory displayed a 1940 proof set recently acquired.

Owing to the lateness of the hour, Mr. Lewis was able to present but a portion of his paper on "Bimetallism vs. The Gold Standard," which elicited marked interest, followed with pertinent questions and further elaboration. The Club appreciates the usefulness of such general information as a background to a better understanding of our monetary system. The topic under discussion will be continued at the next meeting, with appropriate displays of specimens of our gold and silver coinage, as well as the Bryan and other so-called "wildcat" silver dollars advocating the greater use of silver in our business transactions.

—HELEN G. LEWIS, Secretary.

SAN DIEGO NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

Our eighth annual inaugural banquet was held on January 15th at the San Diego Club, with 21 members and guests in attendance.

The following officers were installed: Eugene Johnston, President; Dr. Ray H. Wilson, Vice President; Lionel C. Panosh, Treasurer; Irving B. Knickerbocker, Secretary; Dr. Bruce L. Wallace, Curator and Librarian.

Dr. Wallace had on display his collection of Chinese dollars; Mr. Johnston, his proof sets; Mr. Knickerbocker, his complete set of large and small cents.

—IRVING B. KNICKERBOCKER,
Secretary.

SPRINGFIELD COIN CLUB—320th meeting, February 9th, held at the Museum of Fine Arts; President Wheeler presiding, with nine members and one guest present.

Mr. Gaylord read resolutions on the death of Mr. Oliver, and the Club, by a rising vote, accepted them as read. Mr. Carrier brought in a coin collector in the form of a Telephone Pay Station. He explained the different parts, how it operated, and told some interesting things about its use and abuse.

Mr. MacIntosh showed One and Five Dollar bills in sheets.

The auction conducted by Mr. MacIntosh was short but interesting.

—W. W. WILLARD, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 90th meeting of the Club was held at the Y. M. C. A. Club Rooms, Jan. 26, with 20 members and four visitors present. President Worth presided. The main business of the evening was election of officers for 1944. Mr. Worth and Mr. Zeckser were re-elected President and Secretary, respectively, and Mr. La More elected Vice President. The club was afforded the very unusual opportunity of viewing and examining the famous, and almost legendary 1913 Proof Liberty head nickel, thanks to the generosity of J. V. McDermott of South Milwaukee.

The scheduled talk by Lieut. Anderson on Spanish coins failed to materialize as the speaker had left the city. Lieut. Anderson is a real authority on Spanish and South American coins, having lived in Venezuela for 20 years, and studied and collected this series extensively. Mr. Fouts spoke in his place on the subject and did a fine job of pinch-hitting. He brought to mind mental pictures of Spanish Galleons, with black bearded pirates swarming over the side and carrying away loot of doubloons, pieces of eight, etc. The fact that these coins were the foundation of our own money made the subject one of unusual interest. Our first continental currency bore the promise to repay the holder in Spanish-milled dollars.

Displays: Mr. Saeman spoke on his very extensive collection of Sales Tax tokens in metal, paper and plastic. These were of Seattle and other cities of Washington, and all about the wooden tokens of Tenino. Also, many of Illinois, some extremely rare, and from other states—milk bottle and beer bottle tops, Matanuska (Alaska) tokens, etc.

Presidential medals of Lincoln, John Adams and Jackson by Mr. Fouts. Mr. Fouts mentioned that most of these medals can be obtained from the Philadelphia Mint for $1.00 each. The Mint will send lists of those available.

Italian invasion paper money in 50 and 5 lire by Mr. Main. These are issued by the U. S. Government for use in occupied areas and are printed in 1, 5, 10 and 50 fractional, and 1, 5, 10 and 20 in dollars.

After an interesting auction, the meeting adjourned until Feb., when odd, freak and unusual coins will be featured.

—HENRY H. ZECKSER, Secretary.

SYRACUSE NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION

Regular monthly meeting held Feb. 4, at the home of J. A. Cassedy, 118 Clifton Place, nine members and guests attending; President Paul S. Burns presiding.

Several items of interest were on display, including:

1. Complete collection of uncirculated commemorative half dollars, and up-to-date, beautifully mounted, commemorative U. S. postage stamps, by J. A. Cassedy.

2. A frame of Indian curios and relics by Stanley Gifford.

3. Presidential coins by Prof. Tilford and Frank Webster.

4. Early American newspapers and George Washington memorial medals by Paul Burns.

An article about a strange collection was read. A native of Tyrol collects samples of river and lake water. He has more than 3,000 bottles, all properly labelled, containing samples from all over the world. It is interesting to note that the clearest water comes from Lake George, here in New York State.

Refreshments were served by our host and hostess. Meeting was then adjourned until the first Friday in March, when we will meet at the home of Frank Webster.

—FRANK O. WEBSTER, Secretary.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

The regular meeting was held at the Hotel Washington on February

7. with 24 members and four guests present.

As the speaker of the evening, Congressman J. Hardwin Peterson, of Florida, was unable to be present, the evening was devoted to the following exhibits:

Mr. Atwood exhibited nineteen silver tetradrachms of Alexander; tetradrachms of Ptolemy the first to the tenth; several Athenian tetradrachms from 380 to 323 B. C.; a Corinthian stater and a Tarentum stater; also a large bronze of Hadrian.

Mr. Jameson: a five lira note, Italian invasion money as taken into Italy by the U. S. armed forces. A French African five franc note dated December 14, 1942, and a pattern dime of 1869, Adams-Woodin No. 787.

Mr. Weikert: A type collection of U. S. coins, a sheet of 50 cent fractional currency, a sheet of five dollar notes of the Central National Bank of Middleton, Conn., and a sheet of three $10.00 and one $20.00 note of the same bank. He also showed a collection of twenty-five Confederate notes $1.00 to $100.00 in uncirculated condition.

Major Moss: A one peso uncirculated, issued by the Japanese Government for use in the Philippine Islands.

Mr. Rothwell: A beginner's set of small cents.

Mr. Zug: A $10.00 refunding certificate on recall of a bond issue of 1872, and explained the history of the issue of these notes.

Mr. Leachman showed four trays of coins of the British possessions, explaining in detail the most important issues from a historical standpoint.

—FREDERIC E. HODGE, Secretary.

WESTERN RESERVE NUMISMATIC CLUB—The 275th meeting of the Club was held in the Carter Hotel, Wednesday, February 9th, with 22 members present; Vice President Howard J. Law presiding.

Dr. Law read a paper entitled "Early Mexican Coinage," embracing the period from the time of the Aztecs up through Phillip V. He illustrated his talk with numerous silver and gold coins of that period.

Exhibits were made by the following:

Mr. A. P. Spencer: Franklin Press cent, Talbot, Allum and Lee Cent, Two Conder tokens.

Mr. J. Simko: Small and middle Roman Bronzes and numerous silver denarii, also a large silver coin of Emperor Nero.

Mr. W. M. Jacka: 60 Civil war tokens with numbers H. & G. also 15 unlisted tokens and a number of foreign gold coins.

Mr. Fred Hahlen: 1861-0 half dollar; 1861 Confederate half dollar (restrick); Commemorative half dollars of Lincoln, Grant, Gettysburg, Antietam and Stone Mountain. Male and female slave tokens and numerous Civil War tokens.

Mr. E. H. Windau: 2 currency paper Mexican pesos, torn in half to be used as change, due to the scarcity of small coinage in Mexico.

Mr. J. F. Sawicki: Medals relating to Washington and Lincoln.

After an auction of forty lots, the meeting adjourned.

—HARLEY L. FREEMAN, Secretary.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB

The regular meeting of the Club was held Wednesday, Jan. 19, in the Williams Room of the Central YMCA. President Fuller called the meeting to order, with 11 members present.

Benjamin Charles read a paper on "All That Glitters Is Not Gold." It gave the membership an insight as to the values of the markings on goldware, which means little as to its real content. On silver however, "Sterling" means at least 92½% fineness, this being only 2½% finer than U. S. coin silver, which is 90% fine. Of the gold-plated ware, filled gold is the most substantial plate, followed by rolled gold plate and the thinnest plate being electro plate.

The gold dollar raffle, a fine 1857 piece, was won by Benjamin Charles.

—F. B. FABLE, Secretary.

NUMISMATIC REVIEW

JOSEPH B. STACK PUBLISHERS MORTON M. STACK

Special Announcement

We have just been informed by our printers that due to war time restrictions, the proposed issue of

"UNITED STATES CENTS FROM 1816 TO 1857,"

a compedium of the first order and vital to all Cent collectors, will have to be cut $\frac{1}{3}$ and that therefore a substantially smaller number of copies than first anticipated will be available to the collecting public.

It is with this inevitable restriction in mind, that we urge those that have not as yet taken advantage of our pre-publication offer, to avail themselves of possibly the last chance to obtain this work.

The book is being readied NOW for immediate distribution. 293 pp. of text, profusely illustrated, and 11 additional plates; size $9\frac{1}{2}$ by $12\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

PRE-PUBLICATION PRICE:

Cloth, $5.00

De Luxe, $15.00

We regret we cannot guarantee delivery, but will try our best to fill your order—and the sooner you send in your order, the better your chances!

FIFTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

THE 1856 FLYING EAGLE CENT

By JOHN F. JONES, A. N. A. No. 6, Jamestown, N. Y.

FOREWORD

In the September, 1938, issue of The Numismatist, on pp. 748-750, is an interesting article on "The Flying Eagle Cent of 1856," written by Wesley R. Hauptman of Los Angeles, Cal. In it, he makes the statement: "As far as I have been able to determine, there were 960 pieces [of this cent] all struck in proof."

He quotes William Evans, "a renowned numismatist of Chicago," who goes farther and says "there were thousands struck uncirculated and generally estimated at 5,000, but many believe to be nearer 10,000—which I think is nearer the exact number."

After reading these conflicting views, and with no thought of censoring that article (which has merit), the present writer wishes to correct several statements made therein and place before the readers of The Numismatist the facts in the early history of this little cent and its many satellites, as we have found them. Without going into the metallic content of the coin or the Acts of Congress that legalized its issue and circulation which have been fully explained by earlier writers, we will call to your attention the many specimens placed on the market and produce evidence of their existence.

This paper has been delayed, due to an unsuccessful search among collectors from coast to coast these past five years for a Chapman sale catalogue which included the Geo. W. Rice hoard of 1856 small cents, apparently sold in 1911.

We have finally decided to submit the article as it is, hoping it may bring to light the missing catalogue, from which we had expected to increase the evidence shown in the Leed's sale catalogue, of the prevailing conditions in which those coins were found after their issue to the public.

The writer was greatly interested in Mr. Hauptman's article on this little coin in the September, 1938, issue of THE NUMISMATIST for various reasons: First, because it gave our readers the information gathered by our old friend, Edgar H. Adams, during his 30 years of research and writing for the N. Y. Sun and other metropolitan papers, which has been tied up in the Adams-Woodin book on U. S. Patterns—without the publicity it should have had in this magazine. Second, it gives the present writer a chance to correct several errors, and also to add a little information on this interesting topic, for the benefit of present day collectors.

I do not agree with Mr. Hauptman "that all 1856 nickel cents were issued originally in proof," nor with his correspondent, Mr. Evans, that "thousands were struck uncirculated," as a little research would correct both statements.

It is very easy to make an offhand remark that "thousands were coined," but not so easy to give some authority for that remark; and, as many collectors are "from Missouri" it might be well to examine the offerings of this Eagle cent in public sales—since it was coined—for it may clarify the subject, because sooner or later most coins of value reach the auction room, where competitive bidding establishes a price and a record for the time being.

The most noted coin cabinets in the world were made and have been dispersed in the auction room.

In 1860, James Ross Snowden was Director of the Mint, and under his direction was prepared "A Description of Ancient and Modern Coins in the Cabinet Collection at the Mint of the United States." On page 101 of that book, he states, "In the preparation of this article we have obtained (with some measure of labor) a large portion of our information from the private records of the Mint . . . placing no more reliance than is necessary in the surmises or generally accepted rumors of the day, as they are doubtful authority," etc. On page 102, "There are several years in which dies were prepared and specimen coins struck. These pieces, as far as we have been able to ascertain them, have been set down in the table as 'patterns,' it being impossible to state the number coined." On page 120, under "Experimental Pieces" (Unauthorized Coins of the U. S.), "1856—The nickel cent, which was adopted in the following year (1857) was first coined in this year." (Note the last.) No record of the number struck is shown in that book, which was prepared and published four years later.

The curator, Mr. T. L. Comparetti, prepared another "Catalogue of the Coins, Tokens, and Medals in the Numismatic Collection of the Mint of the U. S. at Philadelphia," (pub. 1913) in which lot 1570 is an ordinary nickel cent of 1856. No other reference to it is made in this book, and evidently that is the only specimen owned by the Government, under whose authority they were struck.

It occurred to the present writer that the number of dies used on this coinage might determine somewhat the number of pieces issued, as the life of each die is limited by use. We, therefore, addressed a courteous letter to the Superintendent of the Philadelphia Mint, asking for this information, to which we received this reply:

"With reference to your letter, please be advised that the Annual Reports of the Director of the Mint set out the date of the authoriz-

3. 4. (Regular type) in pure copper—thick and thin planchet.
5. (Regular type) in pure copper—very thin planchet, $\frac{1}{2}$ size of latter, unique (this appeared first in Leed's sale at \$7.00).
6. (Regular type) in pure copper. Rev., oak wreath with broad shield, etc.—from Leeds sale at $30.00.

The other eight pieces were in copper-nickel of the regular type.

In the Geo. H. Earle, Jr., collection, sold by Henry Chapman on June 25-29, 1912, lot 2217 was an 1856 half cent described as of "Regular dies," enclosed in a paper marked by W. E. DuBois (Asst. Assayer of the U. S. Mint at that time) "88 parts copper, 12 parts nickel, value per lb. 54 cts. Struck with a half-cent die, merely to try how this mixture would coin." Proof sold for $4.25. (This explains the 1856 half cent coinage in that metal.)

In the Dr. Wilhelm collection, sold in 1912, was an 1856 nickel cent with double struck date and letters on obv. A New York dealer recently listed a double cut date of 1856 which may be the same specimen.

In 1914, the American Numismatic Society held an "Exhibition of U. S. and Colonial Coins" in New York City, at which Mr. Judson D. Brenner of Youngstown, Ohio, exhibited a remarkable collection of "patterns" of the U. S. minor coins. Among them were eleven different varieties of the 1856 flying eagle cent, lacking but three varieties of those listed in Adams-Woodin, and adding one new variety—205a.

Searching through the coin sale catalogues of the past 80 years for the 1856 oddities (an early authority called them "eccentricities of the U. S. Mint"), we have listed all such offerings found and classed them according to Adams-Woodin, the standard authority on U. S. patterns and trial pieces, for the benefit of today's collectors, as follows:

- A.W. 204—the adopted type in pure nickel—had 15 sales.
- A.W. 205—with thin planchet in pure copper—had 23 sales.
- A.W. 205a—the same, but thick planchet—had only 3 sales.
- A.W. 206—the common variety in copper-nickel (no list of sales was made; see memo below).
- A.W. 207 and 208—in bronze, thick and thin planchets—only 3 sales.
- A.W. 209—Rev. with oak-wreath and broad ornamented shield at top, in pure copper—shows 17 sales.
- A.W. 210—the same in copper-nickel—had 8 sales.
- A.W. 211—Obv. without date or inscription. Rev. tobacco wreath, etc., in pure nickel. Only one in Woodside collection.
- A.W. 212—the same in pure copper—shows 21 sales.
- A.W. 213—the same in copper-nickel—had only 2 sales.
- A.W. 214—eagle and inscription—but without date. Rev. without One Cent—in nickel—no sale.
- A.W. 215—same with One Cent on rev.—in nickel—no sale.

We must also add the seven pieces classed as "unique" which are not listed in Adams-Woodin, viz:

1. With half-cent reverse.

2. In metal resembling silver.
3. Square piece of brass with rev. inscription.
4. Impression from this brass.
5. Double-struck date and letters.
6. Thin— $\frac{1}{2}$ size in copper.
7. Thick—in pure copper.

The common variety of 1856—A.W. 206—(of which it has been said "thousands were struck") does not appear in all the minor collections. Maybe a dozen or 15 pieces are offered in public sales in the course of a single year; that has been about the average for the past 80 years (if we exclude the collections already listed, and three more exceptions to be shown later); and don't forget, many of those sales were repeat sales, offering the same coin over again perhaps several times.

A.W. 205, 209, and 212 (all in copper) seem to have had the largest coinage, following A.W. 206.

If "the proof of the pudding is in the eating," then the proof of a coin's scarcity should be established by the sales in 80 years.

The Chief Coiner of the Philadelphia Mint, in 1871, in reply to a letter of inquiry, said:

"From all I can learn, it was customary in former years to re-strike a limited number of pieces from old dies to oblige collectors and others, and whilst there is no law against the practice, it is liable to abuse, and perhaps it is well that the destruction of all the old dies and hubs has entirely removed this temptation."

All the old dies were destroyed by him in 1869 as an act of precaution.

Considering this free and easy manner of restriking pieces in 1859 and 1860 under his administration, can we wonder that Mr. Snowden declared, "it being impossible to state the number coined . . ." And with these facts before us, how can anyone state the exact number struck or restruck of this 1856 Flying Eagle cent, with its many varieties? It is an unknown quantity.

Capt. John W. Haseltine, an early coin dealer of Philadelphia, author of "Haseltine's Type-Table of U. S. $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{2}$ and 1 Dollar," issued in 1881, and to whom we owe the discovery of the "unique" Nova Constellatio silver 500 and 1000 mills 1783 (first patterns for the U. S. half and one dollar)—noted also for placing the 1884 Trade dollar and other rarities on the coin mart—was very much interested in the many patterns produced at the U. S. Mint and probably handled more of them than any other dealer in his day.

In March, 1910, he sent 24 specimens to Hon. James H. Manning of Albany, N. Y., who thereupon wrote the Director of the Mint for certain information relating to those pieces. Not getting a satisfactory reply, Mr. Manning returned the shipment to Capt. Haseltine.

As soon as they were receipted for, a secret service man seized the parcel on behalf of the Government under a certain section of Revised Statutes of the U. S., passed in 1873, which specified that patterns were prohibited from sale at the Mint.

Capt. Haseltine had been selling pattern coins for the previous 40 years and promptly opposed the government seizure through his attorney. He said: "The validity of every pattern was placed in jeopardy by this action, and he proposed to carry the case to the highest court, if necessary, to establish the status of this class of coins."

Mr. Farran Zerbe wrote a very able article at the time, which was printed in THE NUMISMATIST of July, 1910, entitled "Pattern Pieces Seized—The Individual vs. the Government—Collectors' Rights Defended," giving a careful analysis and history of these by-products of the U. S. Mint from the start. Mr. Zerbe clearly states the "Pattern pieces cannot be classed legally as coins; in fact they are not coins. Any emission to be a coin must be empowered by law, adoption, or usage. It is the unadopted design, or bearing date before adoption, that makes a pattern."

This classes all 1856 Flying Eagle cents as patterns, whether they are dated and like the 1857 issue or not, because the empowering act was not adopted until February 21, 1857. In the September, 1910, issue of THE NUMISMATIST was published a Resolution and Address by Edgar H. Adams—"To Fix the Status of Pattern Coins," which was adopted by the A. N. A. at its September convention of that year.

Other agitation followed, until in October, 1910, the case against John W. Haseltine was dismissed, and his coins were returned, under a letter from the U. S. Attorney, indicating no cause for action (see THE NUMISMATIST, Nov. 1910, p. 227), which was pleasing news to all collectors as it established their right to possess U. S. patterns without government interference.

The question of the right of collectors to hold pattern coins was first raised at the intended sale of Dr. Linderman's collection in 1887, and the disposal of his coins was temporarily stopped by Government Agents. In 1888, the sale was permitted, with the omission, it is said, of several unimportant lots. (That may account for his collection having only two 1856 cents.)

In 1887, new rules and regulations were laid down, as an addition to Article XV of the 1873 Coinage Act—see p. 139. Mint Report for 1887. The Director of the Mint in that year, Mr. James P. Kimball, studied the practice of striking patterns and trial pieces very extensively, as shown on pages 130 to 140 of his report, criticizing many past doings of Mint employees and advocating the proposed new regulations as a remedy.

Since 1856, there have been three outstanding collectors who coveted this first year Flying Eagle cent, who had the financial means to satisfy that great desire, and who had everlasting faith in its rarity and future value.

The first whom we shall mention was R. B. Leeds. He was, at the time of his death, the oldest resident of Atlantic City, N. J. (about 55 miles from Philadelphia). Henry Chapman sold Mr. Leeds' collection on November 27-28, 1906. In the catalogue it states:

"For many years he was an ardent collector, turning his attention to accumulating all the examples he could of certain dates, his especial hobby being 1856 Eagle Cents of which he had 109 specimens.

"The greatest collection ever offered of this very rare cent, Mr. Leeds was a firm believer in the rarity and value of this coin, and bought all that he could for many years past. The advance of the past ten years has proved his judgment to have been correct."

Mr. Chapman, who knew coins and their condition as well as any other expert, listed the Leeds' pieces separately as follows:

7 oddities in proof,	10 extremely fine,
17 proofs of regular type,	17 very fine,
38 uncirculated,	11 very good, 9 good.

A total, 109 pieces which, expressed in another way, means only 22% were perfect proofs, 44% were uncirculated or extra fine, and 34% had seen service—conclusive evidence that all were not originally issued in proof condition.

In this sale, the Eagle cent without date or legend, in copper, sold at $20.00; the dated pieces in copper sold from $13.50 to $30.00 each. The pure nickel piece went for $30.00. The ordinary proofs sold from $8.00 to $10.50 each; the uncirculated, from $6.00 to $10.00 each; the very fine, from $5.50 to $6.50 each; the good and very good, from $4.00 to $5.50 each; and the whole lot of 109 pieces averaged $7.70 each—certainly a good showing for that sale.

In reviewing the catalogue of this collection, which, by the way, had become a storehouse of rare U. S. coins, Mr. Leeds for years bought every scarce date of U. S. issue that came his way—among them he had four 1873 gold $3.00 (only 25 coined); 12 of 1815 over 1812 silver half dollars; 12, 1852 half dollars; 11, 1859 pattern half dollars; 8, 1877 and 7, 1878 proof 20 cent pieces. In large copper cents, he had 12, 1793's; 12, 1804's (among them, one of the finest known); 35 of 1809; 33 of 1811; 60 of 1817; 70 of 1823; and 130 of the 1857's. He had also 13 1863 pattern 2 cents; 11, 1854; and 13, 1855 pattern cents in different metals; and last but not least, 2097 half cents dated 1793 to 1857.

Try to equal that today.

George W. Rice, a wealthy building contractor of Detroit, Mich., who began collecting coins in 1864, is believed to have accumulated the largest hoard of the little 1856 Flying Eagle cent ever gathered together, numbering 756 pieces.

The writer spent several days in August, 1901, with Mr. Rice at the A. N. A. convention in Buffalo, N. Y., and he then told of his search for that little cent—stating his opinion, from all the information he had acquired, was that only 1100 pieces were struck of that date, in the regular coinage.

In 1906, Mr. Rice disposed of his main collection of coins (without the 1856 cents) through the St. Louis Stamp & Coin Co. In 1911, he apparently sold this hoard of 756 Eagle cents through Henry Chapman but as yet no catalogue of that sale has been found, although reference to it is made in a Ben Green (of Chicago) sale list after he attended the sale in Philadelphia.

The late John A. Beck of Pittsburgh, Pa., had a mania for gold coins, 1856 Flying Eagle cents, and American smoking pipes. He owned the largest private collection of those pipes in the United States. Only the Smithsonian Institute and the American Museum of Natural History excelled Mr. Beck's exhibits. No doubt he bought many of the Leeds and Rice 1856 cents, as we are informed the greater portion of those cents are enclosed in Henry Chapman envelopes (marked with their cost), proving they came principally from Philadelphia. However, one country coin dealer wrote that "he sold Mr. Beck at least 50 or 60 of his Eagle cents." For years he had a standing offer with all coin dealers of $10.00 for each 1856 nickel cent obtained, regardless of condition. At his death, some 20 years ago, 531 pieces of this date were found among his holdings. The silver composition piece (lot 2201 in Mickley sale) must be here, as C. H. Shinkle of Pittsburgh listed such a piece in 1905 in his "U. S. Coin Values and Lists," which was compiled mostly from this collection, and there may be other rarities that have disappeared, also among them.

One of the Trust Companies of Pittsburgh is Executor of this estate, and that collection is still intact in their vaults. "Nothing has been sold, and none will be sold" is the reply of a leading official.

The leading coin dealers of the country have made a well worn path to that Trust Co. since Mr. Beck's death, without results; but with Government, State, and local taxation, and other necessities, there will come a time (if not to the second generation of his family, then perhaps to the third or fourth) when cash they can use will be a prime necessity; and when that day comes, there will be plenty of 1856 Flying Eagle cents on the market.

In 1856, the Philadelphia Numismatic Society was born. Without a doubt, we owe much to the early members of that organization (now the oldest numismatic club in the country) for the numerous additions to our pattern coinage. They must have had many "teething pains" in their younger days, which only a visit to the U. S. Mint could relieve, and the purchase of another rare variety would quiet for the time being.

As some evidence of this, turn back and see what Mr. Mickley believed in the early 1860's—lot 2200—"perhaps unique—certainly of great rarity," yet we traced 20 sales and one exhibit of the same variety since then.

Included in "collectors and others"—mentioned in the Chief Coiner's letter of 1871—we must not forget Wm. Idler, another early coin dealer of Philadelphia, who was father-in-law to Capt. Haseltine and like him handled many U. S. patterns. He was the owner for over 40 years of what is known as the Idler-Granberg 1804 dollar, and his collection of Colonial money, stamps and signatures was one of the best in the country.

Lyman H. Low once wrote, "No cent in the series of our coinage has been so much in demand during the past few years, and none of any date has so rapidly advanced in price, the demand exceeds the supply."

The 1856 to '58 Eagle cent will always be in demand; it is a "live coin"—its main emblem, that splendid flying eagle, is a miniature copied from Christian Gobrecht's artistic dollars of 1836, '38, and '39. No other type of eagle on our American coinage is equal to it, yet the public of that time objected to its use, calling it "the flying buzzard"; in 1859, it was replaced by the Indian head cent, which has far less artistic merit.

At this distant day, all the early objections to the Flying Eagle cent seem trivial except one—"it was so much easier for children to swallow than the old copper cent."

Mr. Hauptman got his wires badly crossed when he stated that, "During the month of May, 1857, $3,800,000 worth of the little Flying Eagle white cents had been struck at the mint."

That makes exactly 380 million cents for that month alone, and only 17,500,000 cents were coined in the whole year of 1857, according to Mint Reports, and the total number of copper-nickel cents coined in eight (8) years from 1857 to 1864 inclusive was only 200,772,000.

No doubt some hundreds of 1856 pieces were struck and placed in circulation to gain public recognition and approval, and they had no service too—samples from past sales prove that—but R. B. Leeds in the vicinity of Philadelphia after many, many years of collecting could only show 109 of those cents at the end, although in the same period he had acquired nearly 2100 half-cents.

A nickel cent that sold in 1859 and 1860 at $2.00 shortly after coinage (a high price for those days with few collectors) certainly proves that thousands were not struck for circulation.

Referring to "the abundance of Flying Eagle cents in 1859," there was no such complaint soon after during the Civil War, when as much as 20% premium was charged for small cents, and business firms found it necessary to issue untold thousands of Civil War tokens to take their place and provide change for the retail trade.

The writer realizes that he has not been able to scrutinize every public sale of this coin in the past 80 years, but he has examined a great majority in his effort to place definite (not hearsay) evidence before your readers.

We have now examined the record, following the historic advice of a former New York State Governor, and sincerely hope it will benefit all cent collectors.

ADDENDA

This design of the flying eagle was selected by the Director of the Mint, James Ross Snowden of Pennsylvania, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. James Guthrie of Kentucky, as prescribed by law.

It must have been popular with the public in some localities, as shown by this quotation from The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser of January 8, 1857: "The New Cent—The editor of the Providence, R. I. Journal has been permitted to see one of the new cents just struck off at the mint. He describes it as a little larger than a dime, and nearly twice as thick. On one side is a flying eagle, with the inscription 'United States of America, 1856,' around the circle: On the other is 'One Cent' within a wreath. It is altogether the handsomest coin of so low a denomination that we have ever seen."

A well-known correspondent writes: "the issue of 1856 Flying Eagle cents virtually started coin collecting in this country. There were a few great coin collectors before that time, but not many, and then they started."

We have listed the variations of the 1856 nickel cent which have appeared and called them "patterns" (as other writers have done), but some of them are not patterns—either complete or incomplete regular type design. They are simply frauds, created for early Philadelphia collectors by employees of the Mint, for the sake of a little extra compensation.

When placed beside the many beautiful patterns of the other coins struck at the same Mint, they only create disgust that such practices were tolerated at any time in our National Mint.

As proof of this feeling, it is very noticeable that none of the higher class Philadelphia collectors of that period indulged in this practice, and those men would not even permit such pieces in their cabinets, as shown later when their collections were sold.

Even the officials of the Mint at that time were ashamed to exhibit more than the regular type in the Government display, or to include them in their private collections. After the Wm. Fewsmith sale in 1870, complaint was heard "the pattern pieces were slaughtered in cold blood: . . . due to purchasers classing them with pieces said to be recently struck surreptitiously at the United States Mint."

In tracing the whereabouts of this little coin, we have received many interesting letters relating to the larger U. S. collections, and are deeply grateful for all information received. The great John Story Jenks collection of Philadelphia, sold in 1921, had only A. W. 206, the regular type; and A. W. 210, with oak wreath and broad shield on reverse.

Col E. H. R. Green, who nearly cornered the rare postage stamps, had not had his attention properly called to the 1856 Eagle cents, as only about a dozen were included in his immense collection of coins although he had managed to accumulate 12,000 U. S. half dollars in his spare time—all in the finest condition.

Wm. F. Dunham of Chicago had only one piece of the regular type in his collection.

Mr. B. G. Johnson of St. Louis Stamp & Coin Co. wrote us regarding the Virgil M. Brand collection of Chicago: "The statement that Mr. Brand bought a great many of these Flying Eagle cents is entirely without foundation, as are many other statements about Mr. Brand's collection. I appraised this collection, and in the entire collection there were not over a dozen 1856 Flying Eagle cents of the regular type and possibly ten Flying Eagle patterns."

This disposes of the largest private collections, and any specimens of this sort offered hereafter at sales came originally from the early Philadelphia collections.

In conclusion: let no one be dismayed at the inflationary prices shown these days for coins. Only recently, a fine 1856 Eagle cent changed hands at exactly face value, and that happened right here in New York State of all places. The seller said he paid only one cent for it many years ago and that was all he wanted now. Beat that, if you can!

THE SESQUICENTENNIAL OF THE SILVER DOLLAR

By LEWIS M. REAGAN, Brooklyn, New York

(Cuts through the courtesy of Wayte Raymond, Inc.)

In the observance of National Coin Week it has been customary to adopt a special theme which would pay particular honor to some significant feature of our national coinage. The year 1944 is an appropriate occasion to celebrate the coinage of the standard silver dollar, it being the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the first striking of this important coin.

Previous issues of THE NUMISMATIST and numismatic literature in general contain a wealth of information and legend regarding the silver dollar and it is not intended or expected that this paper will add any new facts. All that is being attempted is to collect a few of those facts for the convenience of numismatists and others who wish to honor this coin in connection with their exhibits for National Coin Week.

The Philadelphia Mint was established in 1792 as a result of legislation signed by President Washington on April 2 of that year. A few patterns were struck in 1792 and in 1793 the mint struck cents and half cents in copper for general circulation. Silver coins in denominations of half dimes, half dollars, and dollars were first struck in 1794.

In the original bill the Senate had favored the provision that the portrait of the President should appear on all coins. The House of Representatives was opposed to this and it was struck out. As finally passed, the Act of 1792 provided a general outline of the design and legends to appear on the coins and left the details to the artists employed by the Mint and the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. It was specified that the coins bear a figure emblematic of Liberty, with the inscription of the word "Liberty," the year of the coinage, for silver and gold coins the reverse to bear an eagle and the inscription: United States of America.

It is not certain who prepared the dies and design for the 1794 dollar but as the obverse is similar in some respects to the obverse of the first type of the 1793 cent and as that coin is supposed to have been designed by Robert Scot, it is likely that he cut the dies for the obverse, at least, of the 1794 dollar. It is believed that the flowing hair bust was suggested by the medal made by the French artist Dupre, struck to commemorate the victories of Saratoga and Yorktown.

First Design

This first design was not received with general approval and but few coins were struck in 1794 and are now quite rare. On the obverse, besides the figure emblematic of Liberty, are 15 stars around the outer edge, one star for each State then in the Union, above LIBERTY, below, 1794. On the reverse, a rather sickly looking eagle, encircled by branches of laurel, inscription UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. On the edge, HUNDRED CENTS, ONE DOLLAR OR UNIT. Size 24 (sixteenths of an inch), weight 416 grains, fineness 892.4 (parts of silver in 1000).

Second Design

The first design was continued for a part of the coinage of 1795 but was then changed to the type known as the "Fillet Head" on the obverse. The figure of Liberty was enlarged, facing right, hair tied by a ribbon or fillet, shoulders draped. Fifteen stars and the word LIBERTY as before. Date below. There was no change on the reverse, except for minor variations in the wreath. No change in size, weight or fineness. This design is supposed to have been made by the famous artist, Gilbert Stuart.

Third Design

In 1797 the number of States in the Union increased to 16 when Tennessee was admitted, and the number of stars on the obverse was accordingly increased to 16, some varieties having 10 on the left and 6 on the right, others with 9 and 7. In 1798 it was realized that further increase in the number of stars as additional States were admitted would not be feasible, so that the number of stars was reduced to the former number of 15 and then to 13 for the original 13 States. As there was no other important change in the design, varieties due to number of stars will not be classified here as distinct designs.

There was, however, an important change in the design of the reverse made in 1798. An eagle with raised wings, known as the "heraldic eagle," bearing the United States shield on its breast, in the beak, a scroll inscribed E PLURIBUS UNUM, the first appearance of this motto in the silver dollar, although it had appeared in this fashion on the 1795 gold half eagle. A bundle of 13 arrows in the right talon and an olive branch in the left. Above are clouds and 13 stars. Inscription, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. Edge still inscribed as before. Weight and fineness the same as before but the size slightly increased to 25. This design of the eagle is similar to that of the Great Seal of the United States but differed from it in one important respect. On the Seal the eagle is shown with the arrows in the left talon and the olive branch in the right. Whether this change was an accidental mistake or deliberate has been the subject of much speculation. In any case, the design was not altered and coins of this type continued to be struck each year to and including 1804 when coinage of silver dollars was discontinued until 1840.

The 1804 Dollar

Included in the coinage of this third basic design are some bearing the date 1804. The 1804 silver dollar is often referred to as the "King of American Rarities." There is no doubt that there exist silver dollars bearing the date 1804. There is no doubt that such pieces are rare. Beyond these two facts there is considerable difference of opinion. The interested reader may find a great deal of literature on the subject and a further discussion of this topic will not be attempted here.

Fourth Design

The coinage of the silver dollar was discontinued in 1804 by President Thomas Jefferson to prevent its further export and melting. The price of silver had risen so that the dollar actually was worth more than a dollar in silver and the coins were disappearing from circulation rapidly. Some were hoarded, others melted and used commercially as silver, and many were being exported. Under the Act of January 18, 1837 the weight was reduced to 412½ grains, fineness changed to 900. Coinage was resumed in 1840 with much improvement in design and manufacture. A new mint building had been finished, new machinery installed, and with a general improvement of industrial and business conditions throughout the country, there was need for the resumption of coinage of the dollar. The new design was the work of Christian Gobrecht, and shows Liberty seated on a rock, supporting with her right hand the United States Shield, across which there is a scroll inscribed LIBERTY, and in her left hand is a staff and liberty cap. Date below. On the reverse, an eagle with expanded wings, with shield on breast, an olive branch in right talon, three arrows in the left talon. The motto "E Pluribus Unum" does not appear, but for the first time, the denomination appears on the coin (rather than on the edge) in abbreviated form: ONE DOL. Above, the inscription UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. In 1866 a scroll bearing the motto IN GOD WE TRUST was added above the eagle. This design was continued until 1873 when coinage was suspended until 1878.

Flying Eagle Dollar

In 1836 there was struck quite a number of pieces, usually considered patterns, of the silver dollar with a beautiful and distinctive design by Gobrecht and known as the Flying Eagle dollars. The obverse is similar to that adopted for the coinage beginning in 1840 except that there were no stars. The reverse shows an eagle flying among stars of different magnitudes. The inscription UNITED STATES OF AMERICA and ONE DOLLAR complete the border. These patterns appeared in 1836, 1838 and 1839; some had the signature Gobrecht under the figure of Liberty on the obverse, some had stars on the obverse and none on the reverse and there are variations in the nature of the edges, some plain and some reeded. There is some evidence that the 1836 variety may have been intended for circulation and a few may actually have been used in that way but most numismatists classify all of these pieces as patterns.

The eagle used as the model for these coins and those of 1840 was the Mint Eagle, named Peter. He lived at the Mint, flew about the city of Philadelphia and always returned to his quarters in the evening. He met an untimely end due to his curiosity while inspecting a flywheel on some of the machinery in the Mint. His usefulness did not end at his death, however, for he was stuffed and mounted, and continued to serve as a model.

Fifth Design

The coinage of standard silver dollars was resumed in 1878 following a period during which the Trade dollars were coined. The new design was by George T. Morgan and the coins are generally referred to as the Morgan type. Sometimes called the "Bland" dollar since the legislation which authorized them was sponsored by Representative Richard P. Bland of Missouri. On the obverse is the head of Liberty for which the model was Annie Williams, a Philadelphia schoolteacher, although the result is not a recognizable portrait of the model and was not intended to be. The motto E PLURIBUS UNUM was restored and appears on the obverse at the top. On the head is a cap, a wheat and cotton wreath and a band inscribed LIBERTY. Below, the date. Around the edge, 13 stars. On the reverse, an eagle with expanded wings pointing upward, olive branch in right talon and three arrows in left talon. Above the eagle, IN GOD WE TRUST, beneath the eagle is a semi-wreath, tied and crossed reaching upward nearly to the wings. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA and ONE DOLLAR, separated by stars, complete the border. Those first coined in 1878 had 8 tail feathers, but the number was reduced to 7 and subsequent issues all had 7 feathers. Why the change was made has not been made clear by various writers who have been consulted. The Great Seal which was used for the original eagle model has 9 tail feathers; the dollar of 1798 is supposed to have 9. The initial M of the engraver appears inconspicuously on both the obverse and reverse.

Coins of this design were struck in great quantities between 1878 and 1904 not only at Philadelphia but at the branch mints in New Orleans, San Francisco and Carson City. It was also struck in Denver when coinage of this type was resumed in 1921. It had a wide circulation west of the Mississippi and in the South but was never very popular in the North and East. Large quantities were held by the Treasury and Federal Reserve Banks as a reserve against paper money and in recent years it has been reported that most of the coins held or received by the Treasury have been melted.

The coinage was discontinued in 1904 when the supply of silver the purchase of which had been authorized in 1878 had been exhausted. It required a further legislative act to resume the coinage and this was done in 1921. The design was changed again in 1921.

Sixth Design

The new design of 1921 was by Antony de Francisci who was commissioned to do the work. This coin is known as the Peace dollar and commemorates the peace following the war of 1914-1918. The word PEACE appears on the reverse under the eagle and it has been stated by other writers that it is unusual if not unique to have authorized a coin commemorating peace. The obverse shows the figure of Liberty with a somewhat startled look, hair a bit disarranged, and a younger and more immature face than had been usual on other types. Above the figure is the word LIBERTY in expanded form. IN GOD WE TRUST is divided by the neck of the figure, below is the signature of the artist and the date. On the reverse is an eagle standing with closed wings, facing right, above is the inscription UNITED STATES OF AMERICA and E PLURIBUS UNUM. The denomination, ONE DOLLAR is divided by the eagle and the word PEACE below. This type was coined each year from 1921 to 1928 and in 1934 and 1935.

Conclusion

Besides patterns there have been two other types of silver dollars coined, namely the Trade dollar from 1873 to 1885 and the commemorative Lafayette dollar of 1900. They will not be discussed here.

The standard silver dollar has always been a favorite item with collectors because of its beauty, its long and interesting history, its rarities and its special attractiveness when in proof condition. Representing as it does our standard unit of exchange, numismatists regret that it appears to be passing out of existence as a medium of exchange. It seems doubtful that it will again be coined for purposes of circulation. In one hundred and fifty years since it was first coined in 1794 it has missed a good many birthdays, having been coined in only eighty-two years. There have been, on several previous occasions, numismatic articles entitled "The Passing of the Silver Dollar." On this, its 150th birthday, it may well be that it has passed into history but it will always have a place in the memory and the cabinets of collectors.

In conclusion, we quote from Voltaire: "American dollars have no need of ancestors, but since they have such a creditable family tree, a justifiable pride therein is a part of every American birthright."

TWO UNRECORDED SILESIAN FIVE DUCAT PIECES OF FERDINAND II

By HENRY GRUNTHAL, A. N. A. No. 6995, New York City

Through the courtesy of the firm of Wittlin, Inc., I am able to report the discovery of two new legend varieties of the Five Ducat piece struck at Breslau in Silesia, in 1628.

All the three varieties have the portrait of Emperor Ferdinand II facing right on the obverse and the crowned double eagle with Austrian shield on the reverse. At the time of this coinage the mint at Breslau had been leased to Hans Ziesler who employed Hans Riedel as assayer. They apparently had difficulties to secure the properly hardened iron necessary for cutting the dies. We must remember that the time of this coinage is in the middle of the Thirty Years' War, which might explain the lack of the appropriate metal. A peculiarity of the issue is the fact that the title Duke of Silesia appears on all three coins in a preferred place namely in front of the higher title "Archduke," which is a very unusual arrangement.

1. The coin which is listed as #217 in "Friedensburg & Seger" the standard work on Silesian coins is very common and can be found in practically any important catalogue of Austrian or Silesian coins. I mention only Striebold, Horsky, Hirsch-Troppau, Loeffler, Nolte and Wilmersdoerffer. Compare also Koehler 65 and Herrgott page 199.

2. The second piece differs in the legend insofar as it reads on the obverse: BO.REX D.SI instead of B.REX.DV.S. This coin came originally from a Munich sale (Helbing March 1926 #473) where the cataloguer gives an exact description of the variety, but refers by mistake to Friedensburg & Seger 217. The reverse reads like No. 1, but the die is different; compare the shapes of the crowns, and size of dates.

3. The third variety which was purchased from the estate of the late Col. Green reads in the reverse legend: CO.T.1628 instead of C.T. 1628, though the obverse reads like Fr. & S. 217 and indeed is apparently identical with it. Compare the decorations of the armor, and the first two letters of "FERD."

Thus it is now known that we have not a single variety of the quintuple ducat of 1628 from a single pair of dies, but three distinct varieties in making which two obverse and three reverse dies were used. The order may be difficult to determine, but 1 and 3 are closely connected. My friend Professor Mabbott, who was much interested in the new varieties, suggests that the difficulty of getting proper metal for dies may explain why specimens from all but two of the known five dies are so rare. All save the dies of No. 1 may have proved unsatisfactory or indeed have broken quickly. Were two sets of dies in use simultaneously specimens of No. 2 should be fairly common. The apparent enlargement of the flaw at FE of FERD on No. 1 suggests that it succeeded No. 3. The possible orders are of course 3, 1, 2 and 2, 3, 1 of which the latter is more probable.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Knoxville, Tennessee

IV. SWEDEN

In 1523 Sweden emerged from the Union of Kalmar (formed in 1397 with Denmark and Norway) as an independent nation under a native king, Gustavus Vasa (1523-1560), the founder of the modern kingdom. A century later his grandson, Gustavus II Adolphus, enhanced Sweden's prestige by his brilliant leadership in the religious and political wars in the Germanies. A hundred years of continual struggles followed the king's death at the battle of Lutzen in 1632; then this immediate branch of the dynasty died out in 1751. The new king Adolphus Frederick was succeeded by his son Gustavus III in 1771, and he in turn by his son, Gustavus IV Adolphus in 1792.

This king was only thirteen at his accession. He took over complete power in 1796, but his few good qualities plus an obstinate and passionate nature augured ill for his rule. His hatred of Napoleon caused him to join the coalition against France, and as a result he lost most of Sweden's Germanic possessions. After the loss of Finland to Russia in 1808, a revolution occurred; the king was deposed and died in exile in 1837. The riksdalers of this ruler show a half dozen different portraits beginning with one at the age of thirteen. Only one, however, was used in the nineteenth century, depicting the king as he appeared at the age of twenty-three. The legend designates him as king of Sweden, Gothland, and Vendalia. It was the custom for each king to incorporate his motto into the reverse design of his coinage.

The king's uncle was called to the throne as Charles XIII, and as crown prince to the childless new ruler Prince Christian Augustus of Augustensburg was chosen. This prince died suddenly in 1810, and the selection of another candidate became necessary. Partly through lack of agreement, partly through the desire of securing a first-rate soldier, and partly through a hope of appeasing Napoleon, the choice fell upon the Emperor's Marshall Jean Bernadotte, Prince of Ponte Corvo. He soon exercised considerable influence in his adopted country, and with Sweden's welfare paramount in his mind, he shortly threw the country's resources against his former master. He was largely instrumental, too, in securing Norway, by the Treaty of Kiel in 1814, to replace Finland, which had been lost to Russia. Charles XIII died in 1818. He issued really only one type of riksdaler, the inscription on which had to be modified in 1814 to include his title of King of Norway also.

Bernadotte came to the throne as Charles XIV in 1818 to inaugurate a reign of twenty-six years of peace. He had a forceful personality and became popular in both Norway and Sweden. The later years of his reign were embittered by some of his strong conservative leanings. There are four types of large silver involving changes of portrait, arms, and designation of value, also a commemorative for the tercentenary of the securing of political and religious freedom. The reverse of this latter coin bears three portraits in medallions of the kings on the several centennials: Gustavus Vasa, who inaugurated the freedoms; Gustavus II

Adolphus, Sweden's greatest warrior, who was king in 1621; and Frederick I, who had been Prince of Hesse and brother-in-law of Charles XII before becoming king in 1720. Alone among these large Swedish silver pieces, this has the various inscriptions in Latin.

Charles's son Oscar succeeded him in 1844. Though not as vigorous a personality as his father, he was more flexible and firmly entrenched the House of Bernadotte in Sweden. His last years were marred by ill health, during which time his son took over the actual governing. His riksdalers have three different heads and two reverses issued over a period of fifteen years.

Charles XV, who succeeded his father in 1859, was a thoroughly charming and intelligent man though not a great statesman. The wars which brought Germany and Italy into existence he remained aloof from, and Sweden continued to reorganize herself socially. With him the riksdaler pieces of the nineteenth century come to an end. The Scandinavian Monetary Union was formed in 1873, and a two krone coin was the largest silver piece minted until 1935.

The only five kronor coin is a commemorative of Gustavus V to mark the fifth centennial of the founding of the Swedish Riksdag in 1435. The oppression of the Swedes by the German king of the three Scandinavian countries, Eric of Pomerania, led to a rebellion by a Swedish noble, Engelbrecht Engelbrektsson, who assembled the first parliament of nobles, priests, burghers, and peasants at Arboga in January 1350. The Riksdag has never been abolished since that day.

The earliest issues have the Swedish national arms, three gold crowns on a blue field, surrounded by the chain of the Order of the Seraphim. The later pieces of Charles XIV John, 1827-1842, have the arms of Sweden united with those of Norway and Gothland with a small shield superimposed dividing the arms of Vasa and Bernadotte. The coins of Oscar I and Charles XV quarter the arms of Sweden and Gothland with the small shield again, and abolish the chain and order for two lions supporting the crowned arms.

WOMEN WORKERS IN THE S. F. MINT

San Francisco, Mar. 4—For the first time in history, women are making money in San Francisco. Literally, that is.

By the sackful, the ladies are turning it out in the heavily-guarded United States Mint which supplies federal reserve banks in Salt Lake City, Seattle, Portland, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Although this is not the first time women have been employed at the San Francisco mint, it is the first time they've had a hand at actually manufacturing the money, says Supt. P. J. Haggerty.

Years ago women employees were hired to weigh the coins, but retired when modern weighing machinery replaced the slow, tedious, by-hand method. Women also have been used in clerical posts and at one time were employed as machine "feeders." It was not until masculine money makers marched off to war, however, that many women came to work in the mint.

Today, the mint employs 72 women as punching machine operators; on the reviewing table where they pounce upon odd-sized or badly-stamped coins; at the automatic weighing machine, where coins are rejected if so much as a hair's weight above or below tolerance; on the counting and sacking machines and as press operators.

A. R. Hodgson, chief clerk, says the women are good workers, although they need help in heaving money bags around. Each is under civil service, investigated carefully by the Secret Service and hired for her "good character and honesty."

Hodgson says, contrary to popular belief, that there's nothing to the rumor that all mint workers are searched for hidden coins as they go off duty.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE BIXBY LETTER

One of the items in the exhibits made at a recent club meeting (reported in this issue) was a copy of the famous Bixby letter, long believed to have been written by Abraham Lincoln—a masterpiece in its own right regardless of authorship. The letter follows:

Washington, November 21, 1864
Executive Mansion

Mrs. Bixby, Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Madam:

I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant-General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any words of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering to you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the Republic they died to save. I pray that our heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.

Yours very sincerely and respectfully,

Abraham Lincoln

Nicholas Murray Butler, long the President of Columbia University, of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, in his autobiography "Across the Busy Years,"* tells the true story of this letter for the first time, which was written not by Lincoln but by John Hay, then his private secretary.

Theodore Roosevelt greatly admired the letter, and had a framed photograph of it in one of the guest rooms of the White House. John Morley, English statesman and author, occupied this room while a guest of the President in 1904, and seeing the letter was deeply interested. On this same visit he called upon John Hay, then Secretary of State, and in their conversation expressed his great admiration for the Bixby letter. Hay listened, and, after a brief silence, told Morley that he himself was the author and that was the reason it had never been found among Lincoln's papers, and why no original copy of it had ever been discovered.

He asked Morley to consider the information as confidential during his (Hay's) lifetime, which was done. On one of Butler's visits to London (in 1912) Morley told him the story, making the same request that Hay had made—that the secret be kept until after his death. Morley died in 1929, and no revelation of the true authorship had ever been made until its appearance in this autobiography (an intensely interesting and informative piece of literature).

"As a matter of fact," says Dr. Butler, "Abraham Lincoln wrote very few letters that bore his signature. John G. Nicolay wrote almost all of those that were official, while John Hay wrote almost all of those which were personal. Hay was able to imitate Lincoln's handwriting and signature in a well-nigh perfect fashion."

Lincoln is so prominently identified with our coins, medals and paper money that the foregoing should be of absorbing interest to collectors generally.

BOOK REVIEW

OLD COINS OF CHINA, A Guide to their Identification. By Holger Jorgensen. Published by the author, Los Angeles, 1944, 27 pp., illustrated. Seven pages of text, 20 plates, 8½" x 11".

This work will adequately fill the requirements of coin collectors desiring the basic information required correctly to attribute most of the ancient and medieval bronze coins and the cash of the Ch'ing dynasty of China. Its compiler has taken to himself the Chinese adage that one picture is worth a thousand words, and has made his pamphlet 75 per cent illustrations. While both the text and illustrations fall somewhat short of perfection, the compiler has no illusions with regard to this, and has frankly offered this pamphlet as a reproduction of a scrapbook which he has found of value and which he believes will be of assistance to other collectors.

Illustrations of some 366 major types of coins are given, with index, together with lists of the principal Chinese dynasties and most of the Chinese characters found on their coins with romanizations. This work differs from most others compiled by occidentals which illustrate Chinese coins, in that none of the illustrations are inverted and only one of the metallic cowries is so placed. However, it seems its compiler believes that specimens with fanciful figures on their reverses are coins, whereas they are almost without exception amulets simulating coins.

This pamphlet is highly recommended to the tyro in Chinese numismatics.

SPRING CONVENTION OF THE I. N. A.

The Iowa Numismatic Association is to hold its Spring Convention at Cedar Rapids, the dates being May 20th and 21st; headquarters, Hotel Roosevelt. Committees from the Cedar Rapids Coin Club have been appointed, and are definitely planning for another successful meeting—the invariable experience of the I. N. A. throughout its six years of existence, during which twelve conventions have been held: spring and fall.

The Cedar Rapids Coin Club was host to the I. N. A. in October, 1941. Being conveniently located for train and bus service, and for what driving may be possible, there should be an excellent attendance. The exhibits have always been exceptional in quality, and the whole affair a delightful interlude.

A cordial invitation is extended to collectors not only in Iowa, but in neighboring states. Write Mrs. John Culbreth, 1400 2nd Avenue, S. E., Cedar Rapids, for any information desired.

NATIONAL COIN WEEK

National Coin Week will be observed this year during the week of April 16-22. The particular event in our national coinage being celebrated is the sesquicentennial of the silver dollar. Exhibits should also include half dimes and half dollars which were first coined in 1794, but any other coins and currency may be included.

The national Committee has mailed some material to Secretaries of local coin clubs. Additional material may be obtained on request to the Chairman and if any clubs were overlooked notice should be sent to the Chairman.

The Association will again offer prizes similar to those awarded last year. Special ribbons, appropriately printed will be awarded to individuals on a competitive basis and to clubs which participate most actively in this observance. Detailed reports must reach the Chairman by May 1 and a report of the awards and the activity will appear in the June issue of THE NUMISMATIST.

Many of the principal coin dealers have again responded most generously to the invitation to contribute prizes in the form of merchandise or books. A complete list of these prizes could not be prepared in time for announcement in this issue but the prizes will be awarded in accordance with the conditions specified by the donors and a complete report will appear in the June issue.

National Coin Week is the only publicity on numismatics undertaken by the Association on a nation-wide scale. It has been most successful in previous years in promoting the hobby of numismatics and the growth of the Association and of local coin clubs. The Committee invites the active participation of every collector and expresses the hope that this will be the most successful Coin Week ever held.

The Committee consists of T. R. Hammer, Burlington, Iowa; A. Kosoff, New York City; Lewis M. Reagan, Brooklyn, N. Y.; and

CHARLES P. KNOTH, Chairman,
115-120 226th St., St. Albans 11, N. Y.

EDWARD J. HENLE ARRESTED

Word has been received from the office of the Inspector for the Post Office Department at Los Angeles that Edward J. Henle was apprehended and arrested on the morning of March 10th, and was then held for removal to Los Angeles for trial. What the formal charges may be was not stated, but his "customers" can probably guess their nature. Further information will be given when available.

GUATEMALA ISSUES NEW COINS

GUATEMALA, March 4—President Jorge Ubicos has authorized circulation of new twenty-five cent coins minted in Philadelphia to increase the amount of fractional currency needed in trade. A map of Guatemala on this coin includes Belize, British Honduras territory under dispute. The Ministry of Finance prohibited the exportation of fractional currency because the shortage seriously hampers business.—New York Times.

NEW POSTAGE RATES ON LIBRARY BOOKS

The following information has been sent in by our Librarian-Curator, Ted R. Hammer of Burlington, Iowa:

"New postage rates effective March 26, increasing local letter, parcel post, registered mail, money orders and other fees will make only a slight increase in the cost of mailing library books.

"Books mailed in the first to third zones or the same state may be sent for four cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional pound; 5c for two pounds; 13c for 10 pounds, and so on.

"Outside the third zone, no attention is paid to distance. The fee is four cents for the first pound and three cents per pound after that. In other words, this means only one cent per parcel more than the old rate of three cents per pound. Such rate is for books only.

"Borrowers outside the third zone (more than 300 miles distant or outside of Iowa) are cautioned to mark parcels BOOKS. Those in Iowa or within the third zone (not over 300 miles from Burlington, Iowa) must mark their parcels LIBRARY BOOKS. The Librarian will continue the service of sending an addressed label marked BOOKS or LIBRARY BOOKS, as well as an envelope for stamps."

EXTRACTS FROM THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR OF THE MINT

(Fiscal Year Ending June 30, 1943)

Metal Savings: Based upon the production of 5-cent and 1-cent coins during the fiscal year 1942 it is estimated that over 4,900 tons of copper and 300 tons of nickel will be freed annually for use in furtherance of the war effort, as a result of the changes in minor coinage alloys.

Silver in the War: Silver bullion, in quantity 695,001,504 fine ounces, was delivered to the Defense Plant Corporation, etc., during the fiscal year under terms of a contract dated May 6, 1942, providing (in effect) for loan of about one billion ounces of silver to be used as a substitute for copper or other strategic materials in plants that are engaged in, or are essential to, the war effort. Its principal use is understood to be in bus bars, for transmission of electric current. The total silver lent in this manner, 699,819,332 fine ounces as of June 30, 1943, is to be returned to Treasury custody under terms of the contract, after it has performed its function.

Employees: The total number of officers and employees of the Mint Service on June 30, 1943, was as follows:

Bureau of the Mint	44
Philadelphia Mint	1,201
San Francisco Mint	420
Denver Mint	305
New York Assay Office	158
West Point Depository	15
Seattle Assay Office	9
Fort Knox Depository	36
Total 1943	2,188

Coinage For Other Countries: The coinage for other countries during 1942 totaled 307,737,000 pieces; the metals used were silver, copper, brass and zinc.

Grand Total: The totals for all U. S. coinages from 1793 to the end of 1942—149 years—are as follows: gold, $4,526,218,477.50; silver, $1,782,-344,237.85; minor, $28,672,893.61. Grand total, $6,560,235,608.96.

WITH THE DEALERS

The Belden E. Roach collection, sold at auction by Mehl on February 8th, set a new high for American auction sales: $91,679.68, even surpassing the total of the Dunham sale, held by the same dealer in 1941, which realized $83,364. This last was composed of 4,169 lots, two of the coins bringing over $15,000; the highest figure reached in the Roach sale of 3,530 lots was $2,000, but it was amazingly rich in superb material, almost all of which was U. S.

It is impossible in a limited space to make more than a few selections from the sale, and many others equally interesting must be omitted. A wide distribution of the catalogue in advance of the sale, with later price list available, can of course give complete information.

New England shilling, Lot 1, $242.50; Pine Tree shilling, Lot 17, $105; Sommer Islands sixpence, $127.50; Mass. cent, 1788, Crosby 3-A, Lot 35, $67.50; $20 gold, 1850, Lot 131, $87.50; 1864 (proof), Lot 143, $245; 1865 (proof), Lot 144, $247.50; 1907 (Saint-Gaudens), Lot 170, $105; 1921, Lot 179, $945. Wass Molitor & Co. $20 gold, with large head, Lot 298, $2,000. $10 gold, 1798 over '97, seven stars left, six right, Lot 312, $750. $5 gold, 1797 over '95, 15 stars, Lot 507 $745; 1859 (proof), Lot 588, $210. $4 gold (Stella), 1879, $365; 1880, Lot 803, $632.

The series of $50 gold, California, 1851-52 and 1855, ranged from $410 to $925, mostly uncirculated.

The 1836 silver dollar, GOBRECHT on base, proof, Lot 1491, $105; same, GOBRECHT below base, proof, $315; 1838, Lot 1493, $335. Half dollars: 1796, 15 stars, v. g., Lot 1703, $235; 1797, fine, Lot 1704, $175.

CHICAGO COIN CLUB BULLETIN

The annual issue (Vol. IX) is, as always, a pleasing production. The usual membership list appears, and the itemized contents of their Library require nearly three pages. Their Constitution and By-Laws, also published, might well be used as a model for other clubs in process of organization.

Two interesting illustrated articles are included, one by William Evans, "Mostly About U. S. Dollars," and the other entitled "The Noble and the Angel," by William G. Rayson—a member so perfectly at home among the intricacies of English coinage.

POSTAL ZONE NUMBERS

The Post Office Department is urging, in fact insisting, that so far as possible all mail for cities in which postal zones have been established shall bear the proper number of the zone in which the mail is to be delivered.

In your correspondence with the Editor always give your postal zone number, if any, and if a member, or non-member subscriber, correction will be made in your recorded address unless already noted. The addition of the zone number speeds up delivery of the magazine—a welcome result at any time, but especially in these days of abnormally heavy mails and reduced forces of postal employees.

DEATH OF CHARLES TUPPER

Providence, R. I.
February 8, 1944.

To the Editor:

I regret that I neglected to notify THE NUMISMATIST of the death of Mr. Charles Tupper of this city. Mr. Tupper, whose membership number was 1901, had been a member of our Association since April, 1917. His name was proposed for membership by the late Howland Wood and Waldo Moore and I believe he held continuous membership up to the time of his death on October 20th, 1943.

Mr. Tupper was born at Hyde Park, Massachusetts, July 27th, 1872 and came to Olyneville, (a suburb of Providence) R. I., in 1880, where he lived and taught music for over fifty years. He also owned and operated the Royal Theatre in Olyneville for many years. He was a Charter Member of the Coin Club of Rhode Island and a regular attendant at all of the Club meetings. I miss Charles' friendly weekly visits to my store and our discussions on numismatic problems and current events. At the time of his death Mr. Tupper was President of the National Checker Association, Past President of the Providence Checker Club, a member of the Roger Williams Family Association, the Tupper Family Association of America, Inc., and the Plainfield Street Baptist Church. His wife and a daughter, Miss Isabel A. Tupper, also a sister, Mrs. R. P. Bailey, survive him.

HORACE M. GRANT
R. I. District Secretary.

BACK TO CHINA

To the Editor:

The Rev. Arthur B. Coole, Sec.-Treas. of the North China Methodist Mission, has returned to China again to take up his work with the Mission. He will be located in Chungking.

Rev. Coole will be remembered as the author of the outstanding book on Chinese coins and history under the title of "Coins in China's History." He is also the author of a Bibliography and Union Index on Chinese numismatics.

He went to China with his parents when he was six years old and remained there until he returned to the United States for his college education and post graduate work. He has spent about twenty-five years in China and speaks, reads and writes Chinese in the Mandarin and Foochow dialects. The Mandarin is the national language. His work in previous years has been in Peking and Tientsin. His new post in Chungking will give him an opportunity for research work in Chinese numismatics in a location he has not visited.

The writer, who specializes in Chinese coins, after some eight years of correspondence with Rev. Coole on Chinese numismatics, had the pleasure of entertaining him for several days at his home in Washington, D. C., when he came east from Denver, Colo., on his way to China.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

ATLANTA COIN CLUB—The 302nd meeting of the Club was held March 2, at the Henry Grady Hotel. Paul S. Johnson, President, presided. Twenty-two members and three guests were present.

After disposing of the regular business, the following program was presented. E. F. Brown read Ted R. Hammer's article in the January Numismatist on the Fractional Currency Shields. In connection with this reading a Fractional Currency Shield belonging to Mr. E. P. Tomlinson was exhibited.

W. B. Johns next read an article from the American Weekly of August, 1943, dealing with shell monies. Both readings were very interesting and were well received by the Club.

One of the high lights of the program was the exhibition of the undated variety of a 10-dollar Templeton Reed Georgia gold piece. Besides this coin, Geo. M. Todd also exhibited a brilliant uncirculated 1916 standing liberty quarter. Another exhibit of unusual interest was a complete set of half dollars by Mr. O'Dell Garrison. All coins in the set except twenty pieces were uncirculated or proof.

—C. N. WORTHINGTON, Secretary.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular meeting of the Society was held at Hotel Avery, Monday evening, March 10, with President Chell-Frost in the chair, and 17 members and two guests present.

Mr. Schumacher spoke at some length on the coming National Coin Week displays; also on returns to the Government of the Federal Income Tax which the Society is called upon each year to file.

After various routine matters had been discussed and disposed of, Mr. Knudson entertained the Society with a large and varied assortment of motion pictures, thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present. CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—On Tuesday evening, March 7, occurred the 192nd meeting of the Club, at which thirty members and guests were present. The meeting had been announced as Swap Night, with round table discussion and auction, and informal discussion took the place of the usual and formal address. Among other matters of Club business, discussion of a meeting place took precedence and Mr. Chas. Campbell and Secretary Stanton were directed to make further negotiation in reference to available rooms at the Public Library.

President Adolph Larson, Jr., presented an interesting topic for discussion, namely, "When is a Coin not a Coin?" in which he called attention to the distinction between money and coins, and the anomalous situation in reference to proofs, essays, patterns, and the like, which, although officially struck, are not primarily issued for circulation as money. The discussion which followed related to the status of commemorative issues, trade dollars, gold and other numismatic items not intended for general circulation.

Mr. Holger Jorgensen presided at an interesting auction which closed the activities of the evening.

—EARLE K. STANTON, Secretary.

Mrs. Lewis reported that she had contacted the Board of Education with regard to introducing the study of coin collecting in the Public School System, and was told that it was against the policy of the Board to permit extraneous subjects such as hobbies.

The proposal to place books on Numismatics in the Public Library was shelved for the time being after much discussion.

Our plans for National Coin Week were discussed, and Mrs. Lewis was asked to contact the leading department stores with regard to display space. Several other problems were discussed relative to the exhibits. Each member is to bring to the next meeting his material for display when final arrangements will be completed.

Mr. Lewis presented a most enlightening and instructive paper entitled "Legislation Affecting Our Metallic Money, 1792-1853," with brief reference to economic and political conditions of the times, exhibiting specimens illustrative of such changes as were effected. SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 91st meeting of the club took place Feb. 24, at the Y. M. C. A. Club Rooms, with 14 members and five visitors present. President Worth turned the chair over to Bert Wagner, past Vice-President, who presented various ideas for discussion. This procedure proved very interesting and educational. Various ways and means were presented at considerable length, toward promoting more interest and enthusiasm in our club and numismatics in general. Principal subjects discussed were: Larger membership; bigger and better handling of displays; becoming more familiar with fellow members' numismatic interests; publicity among members as to duplicates for trading, for mutual benefit; improvements in the general handling of material up for auction—and the auction itself.

This general discussion was made possible because no feature speaker was on the program. Mr. Wagner was highly complimented for the manner in which he brought out certain defects in the affairs of the Club, and his suggestions were well received. Various committees were appointed to delve further into the matter. The Secretary was able to show the members two coins believed to be unique. This contribution of excessively rare coins for display was again made possible by our very good friend, "Mac McDermott," So. Milwaukee, Wisconsin. It consisted of a Lincoln cent dated 1915 and struck in gold, and an 1859 over 1857 one-cent obverse, and half-dime reverse and struck in silver. They were from the Col. Green collection.

Mr. Glickert: set of minor blank planchets in holder, except quarter; 1924S goitre cent. A very odd and unusual freak, showing imprint of Washington in silver, the same as Wash. quarter but the size of a nickel and thinner than a dime. This "coin" was found in a roll of Unc. Washington quarters.

President Worth: $5 bill cut far off center.

Next Month: Mr. Fouts in a talk on the "Carkeek" collection. This "often heard of but seldom seen" collection has been examined by Mr. Fouts, and we expect to know more about it then.

SYRACUSE NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—Regular monthly meeting held Friday, March 3, at 311 Beman Ave., Mattydale. Nine members and guests attending; President Paul Burns presiding.

The following officers were elected for the year 1944: President, James A. Cassidy; Vice President, George R. Tilford; Secretary-Treasurer, Stanley M. Gifford.

The retiring secretary was asked to order for various members copies of the third edition of the Handbook of United States Coins, published by the Whitman Publishing Company. This is found to be a pretty good collectors' guide.

At the suggestion of Mr. Gifford, it was decided that our next meeting will consist of a dinner, place to be announced later, after which he will try to arrange a historical interest tour.

A committee consisting of the newly elected officers was appointed to arrange for a display during Coin Week in April. The details are to be taken up at our next meeting.

Refreshments were served by the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Webster.

—STANLEY M. GIFFORD, Secretary.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular meeting was held on March 6th, at the Hotel Washington. There were twenty-six members present and twelve guests. The meeting was called to order by President Atwood and after a short business session, Edward S. Conger introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, former President of the Republic of Panama. Dr. Alfaro had much to do while President of the Republic with the establishing of the monetary system and the conversion of the currency that is in use at the present time.

In a most pleasing manner, Dr. Alfaro began his address with a description of the first money used on the Isthmus, which was the crudely made coins known as cob money. He described the different mints that produced this money, and the use of the Spanish 8-real pieces with the Pillar of Hercules and the two globes on the obverse, and the Coat of Arms of Spain on the reverse; later the heads of the different kings of Spain appeared on these coins.

At the conclusion of Dr. Alfaro's very interesting address, the coins which he had described were exhibited, they being from the collections of Dr. Alfaro and Mr. Edward S. Conger, who was born and spent his boyhood in Panama. Dr. Alfaro exhibited a beautiful medal presented to him while President. This medal was designed by a celebrated French artist and sculptor. Only six of these medals were struck at the Royal Mint in Rome, in commemoration of the centenary of the death of the Liberator Simon Bolivar. A copy of the medal was presented to the presidents of Venezuela, Columbia, Panama, Ecuador, Peru, and Bolivia, the six republics which Bolivar liberated from the Spanish yoke. The Doctor also exhibited a set of sand blast proofs of the current Panama coins in a beautiful leather case, which were first issued during Dr. Alfaro's administration, and a set of Papal coins of the Vatican City presented to him by the Pope. Another interesting exhibit by Dr. Alfaro was a necklace made up of several silver coins of Spanish and European origin which the Doctor had received in exchange for several of the silver Balboa's from a native woman of the tribe of San Blas Indians during an official visit to the reservation.

At the conclusion of Dr. Alfaro's address, on motion by Major Moss, a rising vote of thanks was tendered our speaker for giving us an evening of his valuable time before his return to Panama.

Other exhibits were made by the following members:

By Mr. Rothwell: A collection of Central American coins, and cut and counterstamped pieces of the West Indies, the latter as attributed by Howland Wood. Many of these pieces were described by Mr. Conger by reading an article in The Numismatic Scrapbook.

Mr. Leadman exhibited and described another part of his collection of coins, from the British possessions in Africa. Many sidelights of history pertaining to these coins were brought out by the speaker.

Mr. Weikert exhibited a complete collection of small cents, including an 1856 Flying Eagle. He also read some very interesting items from his numismatic scrapbook.

Lt. Col. Newton spoke of his two years in Panama with the Marine Corps and his visit to the reservation of the San Blas Indians. He told of the great numbers of coins of various denominations and countries worn by these Indians in the form of necklaces, some wearing several necklaces at one time and some reaching to the waist, but to the horror of the collector, every coin was holed.

Mr. Jameson called the attention of the Society regarding the Mint collection deposited in the U. S. National Museum. He stated that the collection of U. S. coins was not complete in the late issues, and that an effort should be made to have these missing coins procured by the Museum and placed in the collection.

The meeting adjourned at 10:00 P. M. and a reception was tendered our guest and speaker of the evening.

—FREDERIC E. HODGE, Secretary.

There is a strong demand for commemorative half dollars once again. These coins have been overlooked by many collectors during the past few years and the popularity in this series is growing daily with the demand greater than ever before. Many new auction records have been set in the commemorative series and prices are rising rapidly. This is not an inflationary appreciation as the coins have been underpriced for the past few years.

In view of the small number of coins issued and the large following, many new price advances will be noted in the months to come. These coins are better than money in the bank. Buy now and avoid higher prices later. One year from today these prices may look like real bargains.

"BID" prices are what we will pay for nice uncirculated coins. We can use circulated coins at discounts from these prices. Write us what you may have.

"ASK" prices are our selling prices for uncirculated specimens. Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded. Postage extra on orders under $5.

All Prices are subject to change without notice

FIFTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

GOLD AS A MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE

By BRAD MILLS, A. N. A. No. 7820, Dallas, Texas

(A paper recently read before the Dallas Coin Club)

Gold is a metal distinguished from other common metallic elements by its beautiful characteristic yellow color which it preserves untarnished on exposure to the atmosphere under most conditions. There are many yellow substitutes for gold, but none is as enduring and useful as the gold itself. The specific gravity of gold is about 19.3, and thus is one and one-half times heavier than lead and almost twice as heavy as silver. Obviously it is 19.3 times as heavy as water. Gold melts at 1045° C., or about 1800° F. and will not melt in a common fire.

The pure metal is harder than lead but softer than copper, silver, platinum, or zinc. For practical purposes it is alloyed with copper or silver, the copper rendering it redder and the silver paler than its true color. The proportion of gold contained in an alloy is expressed in degrees of fineness, or as carats; fineness being expressed in parts per thousand, as 916.6, or decimally, .9166. The carat value of gold is expressed in parts of 24, pure gold being 24 carats fine. Thus 14 carat gold contains 14 parts of pure gold and 10 parts of an alloy. The legal standard for gold coins is about 22 carats fine, or 11 parts of gold and one part of alloy. The lowest carat unit recognized is nine carats, which would make the mixture only $37\frac{1}{2}$ per cent gold and $62\frac{1}{2}$ per cent alloy.

Gold is the most malleable of all metals, and gold leaves often are not more than $1/280,000$ inch thick. A particle of gold weighing only $1/2,500,000$ grain is easily seen by the naked eye. Gold also is the most ductile of all metals, wires less than $1/20,000$ of an inch thick having been obtained by encasing a wire of gold in silver and drawing down the compound wire. A 500-foot length of such wire weighs only one grain. Gold comes from the refinery in bullion bars and is assayed to determine purity and value. On reaching the United States Mint the gold is melted with 10 per cent copper.

Gold usually is found in a pure state, but often is associated with silver, copper, mercury, and other minerals. Gold also occurs in sea water, but the amounts vary only from five to 260 parts of gold per 100,000,000 of water. Although extraction is economically impossible, the oceans contain an estimated 10,000,000 tons.

Because of its brilliant appearance and permanency, gold was almost certainly the first metal to attract the attention of man. It was known and prized by the earliest civilizations, Egyptian, Minoan, Assyrian, and Etruscan, and from all of these periods ornaments of great variety and elaborate workmanship survived. The metal itself was used as a medium of exchange.

Coins were first issued in a number of places at about the same time. Unlike many objects in every-day use, they always have been highly prized by their owners and frequently hoarded. Gold coins as we know them are not older than the eighth century B. C. Their circulation followed the earlier bartering periods, during which cattle and crude instruments were the chief mediums of exchange.

The earliest gold coins appeared in Greece, Asia Minor, Persia, and other areas around 800-750 B. C. Apparently the spread might be likened to the modern spread of the telephone or the railroad. The Egyptians knew of these earliest gold coins but did not attempt such early coinage.

During the period from 500-330 B. C. Greek coinage was in full bloom, but most of the coinage was silver. The Persians continued gold coinage through this period. Very beautiful gold coins were issued by Italy and Sicily about 340 B. C., and they were strictly coins of necessity.

After the vast issues of gold by Philip II, Alexander and Lysimachus, gold was rarely struck, except in Egypt. This refers to the period from 330-100 B. C.

Between 100 B. C. and 268 A. D. coinage gradually became debased, passing from almost pure gold to a poor mixture, and finally to copper.

The technique of production of coins has remained in principle the same from the earliest period of coinage to the present day. The earliest coins were made by first producing a die, then placing the desired amount of gold between the dies. Pressure or heavy blows on the dies would produce coins of beauty.

Gold coins were extensively used during Mediaeval and later European periods, but almost invariably they would become heavily alloyed as new regimes would take over. Gold coins were more or less standard medium of exchange in the various European, African, and Asiatic countries from the renaissance on through the nineteenth century, although gold was very scarce at times and coinage was negligible.

Between 1493 and 1936 world production of gold has been about 27 billion dollars, or about 1,223,000,000 ounces. Until recently gold was being mined at the rate of about 35,000,000 ounces annually, but no late figures are available.

The United States mint was established in 1791, but gold coins were not minted until 1795. Gold coins were minted more or less continuously to 1933, and when the Gold Reserve Act of January, 1934, prohibited further gold coinage, our mints had coined $4,526,218,477.50 worth of gold coins.

A constitutional act of 1792 established the gold value of one dollar as 24.75 grains of pure gold, or 15 times that of the pure silver in a dollar. Eagles and half eagles were first coined, closely followed by the quarter eagles. Obviously, the first eagles contained 247.5 grains of pure gold and 22.5 grains copper alloy. Half and quarter eagles contained proportionate ratios of gold and copper and weighed half and a fourth as much as eagles. The Act of 1834 reduced the fineness of gold from .916 $\frac{2}{3}$ to .899225 and reduced the weight to 258 grains, making the gold content of the eagle only 232 grains. The Act of 1837 changed the fineness to .900 without change in weight and thus made the pure gold content 232.2 grains.

Double eagles and one dollar pieces were authorized in 1849, and three dollar pieces in 1853. The one dollar and three dollar pieces were discontinued by an Act in 1890 and the quarter eagles by an Act in 1930.

Gold bars, bearing the Mint stamp as to weight and fineness, were available under certain conditions to depositors of gold bullion or gold coin, and the gold monetary stock was largely held in the form of bars, which were a more convenient means than coin for reserve purposes and for settlement of international balances.

The president proclaimed in January 1934, the gold dollar of the United States to be 15 $\frac{5}{21}$ grains of gold of nine-tenths fine, as compared with the previous gold dollar of 25.8 grains of gold nine-tenths fine. This represents a reduction in value of about 41 per cent and makes the present gold dollar the equivalent of about 59.06 cents of the former unit.

Private issues of gold coins were minted in California from 1830 to 1862, in North Carolina from 1831 to 1840, in Oregon in 1849, in Georgia in 1830, in Utah from 1849 to 1860, and in Colorado from 1860 to 1861. The Brasher Doubloon was issued by Ephraim Brasher of New York in 1787. In some cases these pioneer coins contained a little more gold than regular United States gold coins, in other cases a little less.

The so-called "California gold" was minted from about 1849 to 1881, these small coins having been issued in quarter dollars, half dollars, dollars and two and one-half dollars; and in round and octagonal shapes.

When this country almost suddenly left the gold standard in 1933, gold values actually strengthened all over the world. This was somewhat of a paradox, as the first thought was that these values would be lessened by a form of repudiation of about $66,000,000 worth of so-called gold bonds held in this country.

Although gold coins are not supposed to be used as such, any bank will gladly accept them at face value and ask no questions, giving in return paper money of the face value of the gold. For some reason the government never has attempted to impose a penalty on any person who walked into a bank and offered a few pieces of gold in exchange for paper money. The banks, however, are obligated to turn over the gold to the Treasury Department for melting.

Our own government is using gold in occupied countries, and as a medium of exchange in other countries. Natives everywhere know the value of gold, and in many cases will not accept ordinary paper money. Near East and South Sea Island natives are paid a certain sum in gold for caring for and guiding our lost fliers back to their bases or to accessible points.

It is impossible to predict the future of gold as a medium of world exchange, but it is my guess that it will continue to be the standard on which world commodity values will be based.

V. THE BALKANS

Albania

The ousting of the last Venetian rulers from Albania at the end of the fourteenth century brought that country under Turkish sovereignty, where she remained until modern times, with the exception of a period of semi-independence from 1760-1822. The nationalistic movements in the Balkans during the 1860's and 1870's brought no results to Albania until 1912, when she achieved autonomy. Emerging from the Balkan Wars of 1912-13 as a recognized independent state, the country was ruled for a few months in 1914 by Prince William of Wied. Then the first World War and chaos descended. Italian occupation, which followed in 1918, lasted until 1920 when boundaries were established, to be confirmed by the League of Nations only in 1926. Ahmed Zogu, who had been minister of the Interior in the government in 1921 and Prime Minister in 1922, was expelled from the country in 1924. He returned in 1925, and with Jugo-Slav support overthrew the existing government and made himself President of the Republic he established. On September 1, 1928 he proclaimed himself King of Albania as Zog I. Trouble with his Balkan neighbors forced him to rely more and more on Italian support in spite of improvement and general advance in the country's economic and social systems. Finally in April of 1939 Italian forces invaded Albania. Zog fled, and Victor Emanuel III was proclaimed King.

A National Bank was founded in 1925 with Italian backing. Gold and silver currency, prepared and issued by the bank, appeared first in that year. The only type of silver dollars was issued during the first three years of Zogu's presidency, and bear his head on the obverse and an agricultural scene on the reverse.

Bulgaria

The independent Bulgarian empire which had flourished from the eighth to the fourteenth century collapsed completely before the conquering Turks in 1396. For nearly five centuries the Bulgarians suffered almost every indignity from their Mohammedan overlords. Not until about 1825 did the long cowed national spirit show any signs of reviving. Attacks were made against both Turkish political domination and the spiritual monopoly of the Greek Orthodox Church. The rebellion which finally flared in 1876 was met with the most barbaric atrocities. Serbia and Russia, however, declared war on Turkey, and a successful campaign was followed by the Treaty of San Stephano (1878), which created a large Bulgarian state. The jealous Great Powers, fearing Russian dominance, proceeded by the Treaty of Berlin to give parts of the kingdom back to Turkey and to split the rest into an autonomous Bulgarian principality and the province of Eastern Rumelia. An assembly of notables met at Trnovo in 1879 to draw up a very liberal constitution and select a ruler.

The choice settled upon Alexander, Prince of Battenburg, son of the Prince of Hesse-Darmstadt. For four years, before realizing that his hope of real leadership lay in a native Bulgarian policy, the new Prince allowed Russia to dominate his affairs. Nationalistic ambitions demanded a union with Eastern Rumelia, which was effected only after a war with Serbia. Russian intrigue continued, and following a conspiracy in 1886 the Prince was forced to abdicate.

A Regency followed until July of 1887, when the vacant throne was offered to Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. The Powers led by Russia refused to recognize him, but he undertook to govern, nevertheless, with the aid of the statesman Stamboloff. By 1896 his position was established, and in 1908 the Prince proclaimed himself King and the nation united and free from any Turkish ties. Ferdinand abdicated in 1918 at the close of the first World War, and was succeeded by his son, who reigned from 1918 until his death last year.

The coinage system was based on the lev (meaning lion, plural leva; nominally about a franc—20 cents) divided into 100 stotinki. This was subsequently devalued until a lev was eventually worth about 1.2 cents, or the 100 leva piece about $1.20.

The coat of arms used as the obverse design for Alexander's coinage consists of a crowned golden lion on a red field, supported by two lions under a canopy.

Greece

After 350 years of Turkish domination the Greeks were ready to undertake a move for freedom shortly after 1800. Russia had intrigued for some years with the Christian subjects of the Sultan, and in 1821 furnished some substantial aid. The rebellion was led by Alexander Ypsilanti and the Archbishop Germanos. After seven years of warfare and the destruction of the Turkish and Egyptian fleets at Navarino in 1827, the Greek republic was born in 1828 with Count Capo d'Istria as president. He was assassinated in 1831, after which the Great Powers declared Greece an independent monarchy.

Prince Otto, son of King Louis I of Bavaria, became king in 1832. He proved an autocratic and despotic ruler, and despite his forced adherence to a liberal government after 1843, he was never popular.

Greek disappointment over the results of the Crimean war ultimately led to his deposition in 1862.

After some shopping around, a new ruler was found in Prince George of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, son of Christian IX of Denmark and brother of Queen Alexandra of England. His reign saw the gradual expansion of the kingdom notwithstanding much factional strife, repeated altercations with Turkey, and ever recurrent crises in Turkish dominated Crete, which Greece wanted. Prince George of Greece had been sent as High Commissioner to Crete in 1898 for a three year period. In 1901 his term was prolonged, and he actually remained until 1906. Cretan delegates were admitted to the Greek Parliament in 1912, and in 1913 Turkey formally ceded the island to Greece. In this same year the king was assassinated in the midst of the Balkan wars, to be succeeded by his son Constantine.

The new king, during the World War, in spite of the General Greek sentiment in favor of the Allies, showed leanings toward Germany, and was finally forced to abdicate in June of 1917. He was succeeded by his second son, Alexander, who died in 1920. After a plebiscite Constantine returned to Athens. The disastrous Turkish war of 1921-22 forced the king's retirement a second time, and his eldest son ascended the throne as George II. Troublous times continued. George left Greece in December 1923, and a republic was proclaimed in April of the following year. This lasted until March 1935, when the monarchy was restored under the former king. George was again obliged to leave Greece upon the German invasion of his country in April, 1941.

Greece joined the Latin Monetary Union in 1868. The drachma, equivalent to the franc, was divided into 100 lepta. The Greek coat of arms has a cross as the central motif, designed to remind the world of Greece's part in defending Christianity against the Moslem Turks.

AN EARLY COMMEMORATIVE PROPOSAL

By DAMON G. DOUGLAS, Caldwell, New Jersey

(A paper recently presented at the Bronx Coin Club)

In view of the reviving interest among collectors in the existing United States Commemorative half dollars, and of the expressed hope of many for a new series of commemorative coins, it may be of interest to recall an early proposal, the adoption of which would have made all United States coinage, in a sense, commemorative.

The proposer, Elias Boudinot of Elizabeth-Town, New Jersey, a staunch and conservative Federalist, had served in the Continental Congress, and as its President in 1782. He was a member of the House of Representatives from 1789 to 1795, when Washington appointed him as third Director of the Mint in Philadelphia. In the House in 1792 he had voted in favor of the Senate bill which provided for the representation of the President to appear on our coinage, and had consistently opposed the House amendment to substitute a figure "emblematical of liberty." This amendment carried and, despite a first refusal, was ultimately concurred in by the Senate.*

However, before regular coinage was commenced, it became evident that the weight of 264 grains for the cent, as fixed in the original bill, should be reduced. The supplemental bill for this purpose gave Boudinot his chance for another effort to bar Liberty from the coinage, and to become the first advocate of commemorative coinage for the United States. Under date of January 1, 1793, the Annals of the Congress of the United States record the story.

"Mr. Boudinot, after remarking that the artists who had exhibited specimens of the figure of Liberty on the several samples of coins which he had seen all differed in their conceptions on this occasion, for the sake, therefore, of uniformity, he moved to add a clause to the present bill, providing that, in lieu of the figure of Liberty, the head of Columbus should be substituted. Mr. Boudinot supported his motion by some pertinent remarks on the character of Columbus, and the obligations the citizens of the United States were under to honor his memory.

"Mr. Clark was in favor of the alteration. Mr. Williamson and Mr. Livermore objected to it. On the question being put, the motion was negatived."

Thus Liberty retained her place of honor, and Columbus remained without commemoration on our coinage for just short of a century.

SWITZERLAND WILL ISSUE COMMEMORATIVE COIN

From F. Dossenbach, Director of the Swiss Official Information Bureau in New York comes the statement that on August 26, 1944, Switzerland will observe the 500th anniversary of the battle of St. Jakob an der Birs. In honor of this event the Federal Council has decreed that 100,000 commemorative five-franc pieces be designed and coined. A contest has been opened for the submission of suitable designs.

A small chapel stands on the spot near Basle where, on August 26, 1444, a small band of Swiss Confederates succumbed to a force of French and Austrians thirty times stronger. It was a heroic defeat which carried the fame of Swiss bravery all over the world. Only two years later the Austrians were beaten at Ragaz and a subsequent peace in 1450 enabled Switzerland to retain her possessions.

Dr. Walter Stampfli, President of Switzerland for the year 1944, has accepted the honorary presidency of the 500th anniversary celebration of St. Jakob an der Birs.

LEGIONARY DENARII

By ROBERT M. SISSON, A. N. A. No. 6036, Marion, Indiana

The series of denarii, struck by Antony in the winter of 32-31 B. C., is unique, nothing similar being known in the coinage of either ancient or modern times. The coins of this series are identical in design, having on the obverse the legionary eagle (aquila) between two legionary standards; and the reverse, a war galley; only the inscription differentiating the coins of the series, as the number of each legion, running from I to XVIII, appears on the particular coins used to pay the soldiers of that legion. If we issued all our half dollars some year with the name of the state on the ones that were put into circulation in that state, we would have a corresponding situation here.

Antony's motive for coining this series appears, superficially, to have been one of flattery to the legionaires—the apparent idea being that the soldiers, on receiving their pay, would feel honored to see the stamp of their own legion on the coin, and that this would help to insure their loyalty to Antony in the war between himself and Octavian which all knew to be imminent. This is the reason generally ascribed for this coinage, when any reason at all is given. Mattingly, in referring to them says "Finally, for the campaign of Actium, Antony struck his famous series, with types complimentary to his army and fleet, proudly setting out by name the full number of his legions."

Can it be that the real underlying reason for this series has been overlooked? It appears probable that this was the greatest piece of monetary propaganda ever seen in history, and that the "honoring" of the legions was merely incidental.

In the first place, all the histories of those times are agreed that Antony was the idol of the soldiers and had no reason to doubt their loyalty; Octavian, on the other hand, being able to raise an army only with great difficulty. Therefore, it seems that it would have been unnecessary for Antony to go to the trouble of issuing a special coinage in order to impress and flatter his troops.

The territory from which he intended to draw his auxiliaries, supplies and political support, stretching around the eastern end of the Mediterranean from Greece to Libya, however, consisted of a large number of quasi-independent states whose rulers were actually dependent on Rome. Neither Antony nor any other Roman commander was the idol of these petty princes or their subjects. The rulers were interested solely in holding their jobs and the people were only interested in which party would levy the smallest amount of taxes. This meant that their one desire was to get on the winning side. If they were undecided as to the outcome of the ensuing war, their support would be very indifferent and cautious, but, if they were convinced that Antony was sure to be the victor, they would not hesitate to supply him with everything they could in order to get his future support.

I believe that either Antony or one of his associates (probably the latter) hit on the idea of issuing the series of legionary denarii as one means of impressing the people with the great strength of Antony's

JAMES II PLANTATION HALFPENNY

By P. O. SIGLER, Lt. Col., J. A. G. D., Fort Belvoir, Virginia

During the short and unhappy reign of James II, from 1684 to 1688, English coinage reflected the economical stress of the empire. The coins of his reign were for the most part struck from scrap metal obtained from melting down old guns, broken bells, and kitchen utensils, white metal, and Prince's metal.

The history of the coin now described has been obscured by the many conflicting statements of various authors.

OBVERSE

Device: James II in armour, on horseback, facing right, laureated and wearing a sash. In his right hand he holds a truncheon which rests on his hip. The horse, rearing on his hind legs, stands on a pedestal.

Legend: IACOBVS. II.D G.MAG.BRI.FRAN.ET.HIB.REX. (James II, by the grace of God King of Great Britain, France and Ireland).

REVERSE

Device: Four shields, cross-wise, each crowned and bearing the arms of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, respectively, and joined together by a chain.

Legend: VAL.24 PART.REAL.HISPAN. Size 18. Weight 138 grains.

This coin, which is undated and has a beaded milling around the legend and around the edge, is made of pewter. It was intended to pass at the rate of twenty-four to the real. At that period pewter consisted of a mixture of approximately 80 per cent tin and 20 per cent copper, which has led to the pieces being described as tin by some authorities and pewter by others. It was not unusual to use tin for coinage and it is reported to have been employed by Dionysius of Syracuse and later in Gaul during the reign of Septimus Severus and Caracalla. Cast coins of this metal were also made by the ancient Britons.

The dies of the James II halfpenny are alleged to have come some years ago into the possession of an English dealer, who is reported to have struck off many specimens.

M. W. Dickeson, the first American numismatic writer to make an intensive study of our early coins, stated that this coin was "issued by James II for the American Plantations, where the Spanish dollar chiefly circulated, with its parts, reals, and half reals." S. S. Crosby, who wrote ten years later (1875), and whose book is still an outstanding authority, said: "The tin piece of James II, has been, we think without reason, considered as intended for Florida; we have not described it, as we see no ground for such an opinion . . ." Later American writers have accepted Crosby's verdict that the James II piece is not an early American coin.

In an examination of the works of English commentators, some disappointment is encountered as many of them seem to shrug their shoulders when they reach the reign of James II and pass hurriedly on to more fertile fields. For example, H. Noel Humphreys states that little copper money appeared during this reign; that the halfpennies and farthings are of tin with a copper plug, and that the reverses are the same as those of James II's predecessor but not so well executed. Charles Oman says: "There is little of numismatic interest in the short reign of this ill-advised and ill-natured monarch. He copied exactly all denominations of his elder brother, with a mere change of the portrait and title."

A further examination of the English authorities, however, reveals the following:

Chalmers: "It may here be stated that the only Imperial step which would appear to have been taken before the revolution of 1688 to meet the difficulties attending currency in the colonies was the striking of an interesting coin in tin in the reign of James II. This bears the legend 'Val 1/24 Part. Real-Hispan,' and had no central plug of copper, but was mainly identical with tin farthings issued under Patent from Charles II, and his successor by Thomas Neale and others, who coined 20d. from a pound of tin, and paid 40% profit to their Majesties. There seems no ground for the view which assigns this coin to Florida."

Leake: He describes this coin and designates it "The Plantation Half-penny."

Rawlings: "The first English regal money for North America was a tin 1/24 real struck by James II. for the Plantations, where Spanish coin was in circulation: hence its foreign name."

Atkins: "The next piece [the James II coin] which falls under our observation is a very curious one in an economical point of view. It recognizes a Spanish currency as generally prevalent in the American Plantations, and offers the means of small change in terms of the Spanish mint."

Humphreys: (In a later publication than that previously cited). "In the reign of James II, a tin piece was issued for the American Plantations, where the Spanish dollar chiefly circulated, with its parts, reals and half-reals. The English coin was intended to pass as twenty-four to the real . . ."

Burgess: "The 'Plantation' pewter half-pennies of James II were struck especially for use in Virginia." No authority, however, is given for this statement, and none of the other writers mention Virginia in connection with this coin.

Del Mar: "Worse still were the tin coins struck for the American plantations by James II, 1685-88, of which 192 were ordered to pass for a Spanish peso, or 24 to the real de plata."

It has been necessary to go to considerable length in the citation of authorities inasmuch as the conclusion about to be reached is contrary to the view expressed by Crosby. In deference to his vast knowledge of this subject one might hesitate to point to an error in his work, but many of the above quotations are from books written subsequent to his, and considering the extensive field covered in his book, it is surprising to find so few errors.

On reliable authority, therefore, it may be said that the Plantation halfpenny was issued for the American colonies and that it had no especial relation to either Florida or Virginia. This coin, the first authorized English money coined especially for general circulation in the colonies, proved that an English sovereign recognized the prevalence of Spanish currency in the American Plantations to the extent of adopting a Spanish denomination. The silver coinage of the Boston Mint antedates the James II piece but did not have the express sanction of the Crown.

army and the certainty of his victory. It was a time when there were no radios or newspapers and most of the people could read and write only to a limited extent. But they all used money and had used it here even long before the Romans had. Combine this with the fact that the Roman coinage was legal tender even though local coinage was also used and that soldiers, from time immemorial, have spent their pay with great rapidity, and what is the result going to be? In a short time these coins will be in circulation all over the East and the people will be reading on them—Leg. II, Leg. VI, Leg. XII, Leg. XV, Leg. XVIII. They are sure to notice it, because there are a lot of counterfeit coins around and they examine money carefully to be sure they are getting the real thing.

This evidence of the overwhelming number of legions loyal to Antony can't help but impress them with his great strength, and once they are duly impressed, support and supplies will flow in to him.

Did it work? Something evidently did, for when war finally broke out, Plutarch says Antony "had vassal kings attending, Bocchus of Libya, Tarcondemus of Upper Cilicia, Archelaus of Cappadocia, Philadelphus of Paphlagonia, Mithradates of Commagene, and Sardalus of Thrace. Out of Pontus, Polemon sent him considerable forces, as did also Malchus from Arabia, Herod the Jew, and Amyrtas, king of Lycaonia and Galatia; also, the Median king sent some troops to join him."

THE CONDER TOKENS OF ENGLAND

By HOMER R. STEPHENS, A. N. A. No. 6277, Croton-on-Hudson, N. Y.

(A paper read before the New York Numismatic Club Feb. 11th, 1944)

That part of this evening's topic relating to the "Eighteenth Century Tradesmen's Tokens of England," more commonly known as "Conders," is a subject of many ramifications.

In order for us to understand the reason for the sudden appearance of so many different tokens within so short a period, and their immediate unqualified acceptance by the people, it is necessary for us to try to visualize the circulating medium in copper, the money of the great majority, during the reign of King George III.

At the time of his accession to the throne of England the coins in circulation were almost exclusively of the money of William III (1689-1702), most of which were worn smooth by constant circulation. This coinage was principally of silver, with a few tin halfpence and farthings containing copper centers. These tin pieces had been struck during 1690-91, by individuals working under patents granted by the Government. Within two years of their issue, their value had depreciated by two thirds; the number had been increased considerably by counterfeits and over-issue by the patentees, with the result that in making change the people suffered a loss of from two to three shillings per pound.

During the reign of Anne (1702-1714) the higher denominations were considerably improved, but with the exception of a few pattern farthings and half-pence, no small change was put into circulation.

George I (1714-1727) caused to be coined halfpence and farthings which were lighter than those of William III, but they were nevertheless accepted in lieu of a better medium of exchange. However, during the seventh year of his reign a shortage of small change again existed, and again patents were granted, one of which went to William Wood, coiner of the so-called "Woods Coinage" refused in Ireland, but accepted in America, and now considered "early American."

In 1738, George II (1727-1760) caused to be issued for circulation in both England and Ireland halfpence and farthings, but due to the fact that they were still considered as tokens, and that they were of poor workmanship, counterfeiting was practiced to the extent that one-half of all of the small change in circulation was base, and none was acceptable to shop-keepers, whether good or bad. However, this doubtful medium of exchange was forced upon workmen in payment of their wages to a very large extent, and great suffering was caused owing to their inability to use the same in the purchase of food or lodging. Therefore all coining of copper was ordered stopped for the remaining period of the reign of George II.

This, therefore, was the situation at the time George III (1760-1820) was crowned. However, he did nothing about this condition during the first 10 years of his reign, but in 1770 authorized a halfpenny and in 1771 a farthing. By 1776, rewards were being offered for the apprehension of counterfeiters and various persons were tried and convicted, but without stopping the abuse.

That was the picture when in 1787 the Parys Mines Company of Anglesey, Wales, issued the Anglesey penny, the forerunner of the series under discussion. This penny, several varieties of which are here in front of me, was the first coin of that value and metal ever circulated in England. It was followed shortly by halfpence and farthings, also shown here this evening.

The issuance of this penny (known now as a token) was to take the place of farthings and halfpence which had continued to be known as "pledges or tokens" from the time of Elizabeth (1558-1603). This exclusion of copper coins from the laws relating to other Regal currency gave the opportunity for extensive counterfeiting, as penalties inflicted were trifling and convictions uncertain. These three issues, the penny and half-penny and the farthings were soon followed by an avalanche of tokens issued by various tradesmen and others.

Some were well designed and some obviously the work of amateurs. These tokens bore devices of many kinds: effigies of kings, queens, bishops, peers and warriors; men of science, art and literature; they commemorated national and local events; depicted natural objects such as rocks, mountains, seas and rivers; objects of man's ingenuity, such as cathedrals, colleges, forts, mines, factories and homes; also objects of antiquity. They included pieces of theological, political and social satire; advertisements of exhibitions, businesses or wares. Men were shown at work at various trades, or angling, shooting, boxing or speaking. Birds, beasts, fishes, flowers, insects, vegetables, arms, crests, flags, emblems and musical instruments were included in their ranks. They were struck in bronze, brass, tin, white metal, silver, and, in a few rare instances, in gold.

Included among the tokens were many of the so-called Washington pieces now considered as "Early American," as well as the Kentucky cent; the Franklin Press cent; the Grate cent, and also what appear to be mulings of the Talbot, Allum and Lee cent. Many tokens bear unmistakable reference to the American Colonies, i.e., The Arms of the United States and edge inscriptions of "An Asylum for the Oppress'd of all Nations," or "United States of America."

The circulation of the tokens of this series continued with unquestioned popularity for 10 years, being accepted during that period in every part of the United Kingdom as a regular medium of exchange. During this period it is estimated that the Anglesey penny, halfpence and farthing were issued to the extent of 300 tons and the remainder of the series in like quantity. However, by 1797 counterfeiters had succeeded in introducing their wares into the flow of tokens, lowering the popularity of the issue and causing the Government to take steps towards the issuance of regular copper coinage. In that year, 1797, the firm of Boulton and Watt was commissioned to strike the now much sought after broad rimmed two penny and penny pieces, the larger of which is known as "The Cartwheel." That, as Mr. Morgenthau would say, is the story behind the token.

I have here this evening a considerable number of this series of tokens, some of which were issued as a substitute for currency, and as such bear a promise to pay; others which were struck for sale to collectors or for exchange, as private tokens. Of the many struck for circulation I have picked out some of the more outstanding which I will identify more fully.

The first four Anglesey pennies, Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 9 are known as the

"D" pennies of the Parys Mines. They were designed by Collins, an employee of the Company; dies engraved by Hancock, and were struck at the mint of the Company at Birmingham. According to contemporary writers this type was never put directly into circulation, but given as presents to various friends of the firm. There were only two reverses (Nos. 4 and 5) and four obverses, three of which are shown (Nos. 5, 6 and 9). By combining these, six known varieties of this, the second issue of the Company, were produced. The first was the very rare "Monogram penny," the dies for which were engraved by Milton. Token No. 11, next in line, is of the type issued for general circulation, continuing with many variations until 1791. The three half pennies, Nos. 267-8 and 387, are of various types—No. 267 being a copy of one of the above mentioned Monogram pennies. Also shown are three of the farthings (all varieties of which are rare). Just to illustrate the idiosyncrasies of die sinkers I conclude the Anglesey display with a penny of 1789 No. 250, halfpenny of 1790, No. 380, and a farthing of 1791, No. 456, all of which bear the Cornish Druid head rather than that of Wales.

Continuing to the next tray, the token numbered 79—Hampshire was issued by the following three tradesmen: S. Salmon, keeper of the "Brown Bear," John Courtney, the "George," and Edward Frost, the "Ship." The design of the obverse, "St. George and the Dragon," refers to Courtney's place of business, and the salmon and ship on the reverse to the others. It is a promissory penny.

Token No. 32 of Edinburgh, issued by Thomas and Alexander Hutchison is shown for the purpose of comparison with counterfeits of the same. These merchants issued 10 tons of halfpennies. The design represents Saint Andrew, the patron saint of Scotland, and his cross, the reverse showing the Arms of the City of Edinburgh.

Next in line are tokens issued by one Basil Burchell: Nos. 271, 272 and 274. The first two were good for a halfpence worth of merchandise when presented at his place of business, but were issued in such large quantities that they were finally made irredeemable by having holes punched through the planchets. Burchell, however, issued a further token as represented by No. 274 but took the precaution of having the edge read "This is not a coin but a medal." While not a counterfeit, non-observing persons would no doubt have accepted either type in good faith, but upon presentation would find that they had been defrauded, owing to the presence of this edge inscription.

Tokens No. 9 and Nos. 278 and 281 are a penny and two halfpence of Middlesex, bearing the monogram "C. H." They were struck for the sole use of the boys of "Christ's Hospital," a private school, and were known as "Housey-Money." It was illegal for the boys to make purchases outside of the gates, or to retain possession of current coin, hence the use of these tokens. No. 278 is struck in brass, and No. 281, although dated 1800, was not struck until 1833 and is probably a reissue made necessary by the worn condition of the earlier specimens.

We have next the use of a double thick planchet by S. Prentice of Suffolk, who indicated by an edge inscription that it was a "Double token payable by S. Prentice." In other words, although it stated its value to be a halfpenny, it was worth one penny to the holder. Both the single and double thick strikings are shown.

The token "Ireland No. 1" is an extremely interesting one, dealing as it does with the need of providing the poor with means of obtaining food without such means being squandered for liquor. This token was issued by the City of Dublin, and had a value of one penny, being good for two quarts of soup.

Cheshire No. 37, bearing the likeness of Charles Roe, is also interesting due to the fact that this gentleman was one of the founders of the Mining Company which issued the Anglesey penny. Roe was a silk twist manufacturer. The next token, "Herefordshire No. 4," bearing an effigy of one of the famous cattle of that name was issued by R. Biddulph, and while it does not specify any value, contemporary writers state it was originally intended as a halfpence, but was found to be too expensive and was finally issued as a pence. The next tray contains the only three pence token of the series, that of Wroxham in Norfolk. This token was used to pay the workers in the Marle pits at that location. The beautiful token bearing a likeness of General Cornwallis was issued by P. Decker of Bury in Suffolk.

The last currency token shown is that of Kings County, Ireland, and was issued by the Viscount Charleville and Baron Tullamoore, who in 1806 became Earl of Charleville. There are four known varieties, of which I show you two, one in bronze and the other a gilt proof, the latter being extremely rare. You will note that this token is for one shilling and one penny, and is of very excellent design and execution. The reason for the odd denomination was that Irish pence were computed 13 to an English shilling.

The next tray, leading off with Fifeshire, No. 1, contains a few of the so called private tokens and displays some very fine examples of the die sinker's art.

Included in the remaining tokens are some portraying buildings in London which have been destroyed in the present conflict; an election token (the only one of the series); and several satirical tokens particularly Middlesex No. 239 and Warwickshire No. 34, the latter mentioned as being accompanied with an original of the throwaway issued at the time 1791-2, describing the same. A good example of advertising will be observed in the series issued by Pidecock, who ran an exhibition of birds and beasts. Continuing with the type of tokens issued for sale, I show you two trays: one containing tokens bearing busts of men famous in various walks of life, most of them contemporaries of this series; and the other, a variety of the so-called medalettes issued to commemorate the recovery of King George III from an attack of insanity and for other events.

The Lady Godiva's are shown to indicate their common rating. Of all the series this seems to have taken the fancy of American collectors. Those shown all differ in some minor detail.

In closing may I call your attention to the two trays containing the so called early Americans. There you will find many of the Washington cents; the Franklin Press cent; Kentucky cent and the Talbot Allum & Lee cent. Along with the latter I show all but one of its known mulings.

A LETTER TO GENERAL SECRETARY SHELDON

North Ireland
 19 March 1944

Dear Mr. Sheldon:

I received my 1944 A. N. A. card relayed with your letter to me by my wife. I am at present stationed in North Ireland and am doing very nicely for myself in getting my English collection built up and adding the Irish Free State, which to me is very interesting.

Interest in coins by men of the forces is quite noticeable. I haven't gone in for too much paper money other than invasion issues, but have done quite well in coins. I have purchased a number of English pieces in Belfast and have some old crowns in very good condition. I have picked up some gold and have found the price a shade under New York quotations. For instance, I got three pieces recently, two sovereigns and one guinea, in uncirculated condition; I bought them for a little less than Stack's got for the same type of coins in their November auction, listed as fine. I also obtained a two pound gold Victoria Jubilee, considered very scarce here.

I have found the prices of coins are some times out of bounds because of the U. S. soldier having the amount of money he does. For instance, I saw a crown piece in a store window with a price tag of thirty shillings six pence.

It was of George IV, 1822, in very good condition. I tried to get the price down but was unsuccessful, yet a native bought it for me for eighteen shillings.

I haven't been able to find a dealer who handles coins as a main line in Ireland. They do have them in England, but here coins are handled by antique dealers and pawn shops, and you never find them in quantity. A find of a half dozen pieces in one place is rare. I saw a torn well worn Confederate States twenty dollar bill in a window with a price tag of three pounds ($12.00), and they could be bought for ten or fifteen cents at home in this condition. I have also had the opportunity to buy gold sovereigns of England, Australia and South Africa in very fine condition for just twice face value; reason, because the coins had been mounted for wearing as jewelry. This is quite a habit here, and any number of British and British Colonial coins can be bought in uncirculated or very fine condition, but the coin naturally carries the blemish of the solder.

As for the paper money of the Irish Free State, they put out so many varieties it is expensive to collect them all. A pound note represents four dollars of our money, and over here you spend it as we would a dollar bill back home. I have two five pound notes of Ireland, one old which is printed half in Gaelic and the other half in English, and another that is half as large as this sheet of paper or more. I also have five of the pound notes, and feel I can't afford any more, even tho several more varieties have been brought to my attention.

LOUIS H. A. KLEIN, (A. N. A. 6531),
Capt. Med. Adm. C.

THE MINUTE MAN MEDAL

By HENRY M. LANE, South Norwalk, Conn.

While the battle at Compo was not a major engagement in comparison to some, it does stand out prominently in this locality, for it, and the subsequent skirmishes, spread over quite a section of lower Connecticut.

At dusk, on April 25, 1777, twenty-six British ships sent from New York by Lord Clinton anchored off Compo and landed 2500 men under the command of General Tryon. The purpose was a raid on Danbury where the Continental Army had supplies stored. Most of the local men were away serving in the army on various fronts, and the homes were left under guard of the Minute Men and those unfit to stand the rigor of steady army service. The Minute Men resisted this invasion from the start. But the British forced their way over hotly contested territory and succeeded in reaching Danbury on the second day. They destroyed the stores there and quartered the troops as though intending to stay; but they were soon forced to withdraw. The return trip was a hard one for them and the casualties were many. It started as an orderly retreat but soon turned into a rout. At one time there was considerable doubt as to whether or not they could regain the ships, due to barricaded highways and determined resistance of the colonists. A spy finally showed Tryon another road which avoided the barricades and thus they were able to reach the ships and so sailed back to New York.

The British lost many men and the New Englanders called it a decided victory, even though the stores at Danbury had been destroyed, for a small unorganized force had put to flight the cream of the British. Tryon became famous (or infamous) due to raiding parties and was fairly well known along the coast line during the revolution. This particular raid was his last from sight of his ships as he found it costly to let the Continentals catch him inland where the guns of the ships could not protect him.

The medal is designed after the statue that now stands at the entrance to Compo Beach at Westport, Connecticut, and was struck to commemorate the battle. It was issued during the Connecticut Tercentenary. The obverse is by James Earl Fraser, the reverse by Laura Gardin Fraser. The statue at Compo is the work of Daniel L. Webster.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established.* The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Editor. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

* (Any exceptions now being run will terminate when existing Advertising Contracts expire.)

EDITORIAL COMMENT

NUMISMATICS IN EDUCATION

Next to universal discussion of the war itself, perhaps post war planning is now claiming more attention than any other vital subject of national concern. It is well that it should, for whatever course is adopted, relating to both domestic and foreign affairs, will profoundly affect our future for generations to come. It is none too soon to begin exploring the various theories that are bound to be offered, and the sifting should be relentless toward the superficial, the unsound, and the sinister—for there will be plenty of these, regardless of labels.

Within our field of numismatics we might well do some post war planning on our own account, and with high purpose. At the Convention of 1922 (New York) President Moritz Wormser reported on an investigation he had made as to the extent foreign universities possessed collections of coins and, where such collections existed, whether or not they were employed in teaching history and other related subjects.

The replies were interesting, and that portion of President Wormser's address might form an introduction to the suggestion herein offered. Apparently no great effort was later made to conduct a thorough survey of our own colleges and universities, having in view a definite attempt to gain recognition of the value of numismatics in certain of their courses.

However, for some time we have had a committee charged with the responsibility of continuing this investigation, although its efforts have necessarily been suspended on account of the war. When victory finally comes, as it inevitably will, and we resume our normal peace time existence, we suggest this particular object be made a definite policy of the Association. Our membership is nation wide, and contact could effectively be made with such institutions as might properly be interested. The proposal can be strongly supported, and if it gains a foothold in even a few instances, it should prove its value so definitely that a wider acceptance would eventually follow.

All this presupposes a carefully worked out method of approach, based on a practical demonstration of the several directions in which numismatics could be directly applied in various courses. It is obvious that proper use of any collection, either owned or lent for the purpose, is likewise necessary to the success of the plan.

But these are details to be supplied as the preliminary investigation indicates and, by experience, the principle matures. The important thing at the moment is to view it as a live issue, and we hope it will be so regarded at our coming convention.

AN APPRECIATIVE WORD TO CLUB SECRETARIES

On page 215 of our March issue appeared "A Friendly Word to Club Secretaries," outlining certain items badly in need of correction (in the majority of cases) in the matter of club meeting reports.

Many of the reports received for April publication have shown compliance with the urgent suggestions made last month, for which the Editor is sincerely grateful. However, the article referred to must have escaped the attention of a number of other Secretaries who, no doubt, would be as willing to comply as those who have, had they seen it.

Their attention is therefore called to page 215 of the March issue, so far as the various points mentioned apply to their own reports; and their requested cooperation will be deeply appreciated.

AN APPRECIATED HONOR

Kirkaldy, South Australia
29 January, 1944

To the Editor:

My Society has instructed me to inform you that we would be grateful if you would consent to be an Honorary Correspondence member of the Numismatic Society of South Australia.

With fraternal regards,

Yours faithfully,

THOS. H. FREWIN, Hon. Sec.

A COMMUNICATION FROM THE KING OF EGYPT

It will be recalled that Honorary membership was voted His Majesty, Farouk II, King of Egypt, at our 1943 convention in Chicago last September.

Past President J. Douglas Ferguson has just received from the King's private secretary an acknowledgment of this action, reading in part as follows:

"Deeply appreciating the kind thought that dictated the decision taken at your last Annual Convention regarding His Majesty's membership, the King has commanded me to convey to you and to your honourable colleagues His Majesty's most sincere thanks and best wishes for the constant progress of the Association."

"GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT"

On April 13th at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, occurred the death of Mrs. Mary J. Drummond at the age of 90. She had led a simple, frugal life, living alone since the death of her husband six years ago. Several days before her death she suffered two severe falls, and before being taken to the hospital revealed to a relative that money for her expenses would be found concealed in her bed.

Investigation disclosed two strips of canvas quilted into small squares, each square containing a ten dollar gold piece, with a total face value of some two thousand dollars. Packets of bank bills, mostly of the discontinued large size, increased the value of the hoard to about twenty thousand. There was no will, and the division among a number of heirs, mostly distant relatives, will no doubt be an extended process.

AN UNRECORDED TRANSYLVANIA DUCAT OF MICHAEL APAFI

By HENRY GRUNTHAL, New York City

Amongst a collection of 42 Transylvanian ducats which I purchased recently, I found the following gold coin of Michael Apafi, which is not recorded in Adolf Resch's book on Transylvanian coins.

Ducat, 1680, struck at Fogarasch. MIC:APAFI - D:G:P:TR. Bust in armor to right. Rx. PAR:REG:HVNG:DO & SI:COM:1680. Crowned arms. A - F (Arx Fogarasch, which means "Castle of Fogarasch") below.

Ducats of this prince are plentiful and were struck annually from 1675 to 1690, the year of his death, with the exception of 1679. The specimen described above is the first known for the year 1680. It is lacking in the outstanding collections of Prince Montenuovo and Horky, as well as in many sales catalogues containing Austrian series. The history of the coinage of Michael Apafi is treated in detail in the late Moritz Wormser's article, "Coins and Medals of Transylvania in New York Collections," published in the American Journal of Numismatics, 1914, Volume XLVIII.

ANCIENT COINS FOUND IN JERUSALEM

JERUSALEM, March 4—Workmen digging in a garden behind main faculty and arts building of the Hebrew University on Mount Scopus in Jerusalem recently found a small hoard of silver coins in a pottery bottle—evidently somebody's ancient savings hidden a little below the surface of the ground alongside an old-time terrace wall.

The bottle contained eleven silver coins struck at Tyre between 130-29 and 30-29 B. C.

Nine coins belong to the class of shekels circulating at Tyre bearing dates of the era between 40 and 29 B. C.

The other two coins found were tetradrachms dating back to the reign of King Demetrius II, of the Seleucid dynasty, and were struck at the Tyrian mint in the year 130-29 B. C.

The nine Tyrian shekels were excellently preserved with a thick, dark patina, while the two earlier Seleucid coins were much worn, having apparently been in circulation a long time.—New York Times.

GOVERNMENT STAMPS THAT WERE USED FOR MONEY

By N. KEY HART, A. N. A. No. 8524, Washington, D. C.

During the past few years the Government, through the Department of Agriculture, has issued three kinds of stamps that were used—in a limited sense—as money.

One kind was issued to certain eligible persons for the purchase of food. The other two were for the purchase of cotton goods.

These stamps were not money, of course, but within the limits prescribed by the Government they could be spent as if they were money, and for that reason they are of some numismatic interest.

The story of Food Stamps goes back to May, 1939, when a program was started by the Department of Agriculture for the purpose of giving wider distribution to surplus farm products. Eligible relief families were given the opportunity of buying orange colored Food Stamps up to a limited amount, and with each dollar's worth of orange stamps they received free 50 cents' worth of blue Food Stamps. The stamps were in the denomination of 25 cents.

The orange stamps could be used at face value for the purchase of any kind of food at local stores in cities where the plan was in operation; the blue stamps were for the purchase at face value of especially designated surplus food commodities.

The object, of course, was to give relief families more food and better diets, and at the same time to provide an outlet for surplus farm products in the regular channels of trade. The Department of Agriculture paid the costs from funds appropriated by Congress.

Rochester, N. Y. was the first city in which the Food Stamp program was used. At the peak of the program in 1941 it gave assistance to 4,000,000 people in cities all over the country. At the same time it moved large quantities of farm products that were glutting terminal and local markets. The program was suspended on March 1, 1943, for the duration of the war, as food surpluses had long since disappeared. It had been kept in operation for some time only on a greatly reduced scale as an aid to unemployable persons and needy families that had not benefited from wartime employment.

The Cotton Stamp program, similar in principle to the Food Stamp plan, began at Memphis in May, 1940. Its purpose was to aid cotton farmers by expanding the home market for cotton goods. Eligible persons were permitted to buy Cotton Stamps up to a limited amount. These stamps were in the denomination of 25 cents and were colored green and brown. With each dollar's worth of green stamps, eligible purchasers received a dollar's worth of brown stamps free. The stamps were issued in books containing $4, $6, $8, $10, and $12 worth of the combined stamps. The stamps could be spent at retail stores for any kind of cotton goods or articles made of cotton.

The Cotton Stamp program came to an end on June 30, 1942. Cotton was selling at a good price at that time, and mills were working at capacity to meet war demands for cotton goods; for those reasons the need for the program had abated. The program greatly increased the cotton purchasing power of low-income families in the 39 areas in which it operated.

The Cotton Stamp program is not to be confused with the Supplementary Cotton program of 1941, under which white stamps for the purchase of cotton goods were issued free to cotton farmers who made extra reductions in their cotton acreage in order to help reduce the burdensome cotton surplus then in existence.

The white stamps were also issued in the denomination of 25 cents. Farmers making the required reductions in cotton acreage received these stamps and could spend them at retail stores for cotton articles. The program was in operation only one year.

Merchants who took in Food Stamps and Cotton Stamps redeemed them at face value through the Department of Agriculture. While the programs have been terminated, it is said that a few of the stamps of each kind are still in private hands and that they will remain a liability on the United States Treasury until redeemed.

I have specimens of the white Cotton Stamps of the Supplementary Cotton Program, which were given to me by a Tennessee farmer in the original books; but I have not yet been fortunate enough to acquire original specimens of the green and brown Cotton Stamps or the orange and blue Food Stamps.

DEATHS

On March 1st occurred the death of Walter W. Garrabrant, 78, of Morris Plains, New Jersey, at his winter home in St. Petersburg, Florida. For many years he was Supt. of Street Maintenance in Newark, moving to Morris Plains at his retirement in 1926. His membership number in the A. N. A. was 1555, and he was an active member of the New Jersey Coin Club, specializing in colonial coppers, mainly those of his own state.

Louis A. Burmeister, Jr., 56, one of the best known coin and stamp collectors in Wisconsin, died at his home in Milwaukee March 30th. He had been a member of the A. N. A. (No. 2157) and District Secretary for Wisconsin for many years.

As one of the founders of the Milwaukee Numismatic Society (No. 1) he served as its first president. It was largely through his efforts that the club prospered and the large membership was attained.

Mr. Burmeister was also active in the Milwaukee Philatelic Society, having served as president of that organization.

MORE ABOUT EDWARD J. HENLE

Following the recent arrest of Edward J. Henle, reported in last month's issue, upon arraignment he entered a plea of guilty; however, on April 10th, when he appeared for sentence, his attorney requested permission to change the plea to one of not guilty, and the trial is now set for June 6th at Los Angeles.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The regular monthly meeting of the Society was held Monday evening at the Hotel Avery, Boston, on March 27th, with President Chell-Frost in the chair, and 14 members and two guests present.

Mr. Katen also spoke at this time of the preparations being made by the Milford Coin Club (Conn.).

Mr. Volk presented the Society with a beautiful plaque of the Boston Numismatic Society showing the official seal etc., the frame of which being hand carved gold. This contribution was highly appreciated by the members, and on a motion a vote of thanks was extended Mr. Volk, and the Secretary instructed to express the Society's thanks by a personal letter, and to spread the same upon the records.

The balance of the meeting was turned over to one of our guests, Mr. John Sweet of Boston, who gave an extremely interesting talk illustrated by a very fine collection of U. S. covers, both patriotic and historic, stamped and unstamped envelopes.

Communications were read from Mr. R. W. Starkloff, member now in the armed service; Burton Saxton, Editor and Business Manager of The Numismatist; and Waldo C. Moore of Lewisburg, Ohio, who is selling his coin collection.

Since the last meeting of the Society, an active member of long standing and past President of the Columbus Numismatic Society, Michael F. Higgy, passed away. A discussion followed regarding publicity for National Coin Week and other places for displays of coins, among which were mentioned banks, public libraries, department stores, and jewelry stores.

Conn Baker gave a very interesting talk on India, showing how the coinage of India tells so much of the history of the country, and explaining that his collection is solely of historic and artistic value. He also related some of his experiences in purchasing these coins and getting them out of the country, and told amusing stories concerning the purchase of a United States 1799 dollar in Singapore, and the purchase of a United States $50 gold piece in Rangoon. There were no planned talks or displays, but a program of informal discussions of post war plans for our Club was presented. The idea of the dinner meeting was to socialize our future gatherings in order to increase attendance.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—The 193d regular meeting of the Club was held at the Hayward Hotel on the evening of April 4. Twenty-seven members and guests were present. A letter from the Regional Planning Commission was read, indicating that the club will be granted the privilege of using their hearing room at 205 S. Broadway, for meeting purposes, as soon as the Board of Supervisors has formally approved the application.

The speaker of the evening was Mr. Holger Jorgensen, the club's numismatic expert, his subject being "How to Read Chinese Coins." The subject was of particular interest owing to the fact that Mr. Jorgensen has recently published a book which he compiled from his own notes and studies made during a long period of years. The purpose of the book is to simplify the identification of Chinese coins from earliest times, and the author illustrated the ease with which this can be accomplished. Ancient, medieval and modern coins are fully illustrated on many plates, and such matters as emperors, cities, mint marks, etc., taken care of in such a way that a novice can easily identify and classify his material. Mr. Jorgensen exhibited many varieties of the early knife money, "Pu" money, Manchu and other coins, and described and explained the ancient Chinese script, Mongol inscriptions, various characters, etc., found on the coins.

—EARLE K. STANTON, Secretary.

EAST LIVERPOOL COIN CLUB—The regular monthly meeting of the Club was held at the Y. M. C. A. on Tuesday, March 21st, at 8 p. m., with eighteen members and five guests present. The meeting was called to order by Pres. Laitsch.

A discussion regarding the holding of a hobby show in commemoration of National Coin Week resulted in the appointment of a committee to complete the necessary arrangements.

Rev. Macdonald introduced the guest speaker, Rev. Arthur E. French, Jr., a former China missionary, who exhibited coins and bills and gave a very interesting talk on Chinese money. Rev. French said that the Japanese have debased the Chinese money in the occupied provinces by issuing paper money of Japan, which is worthless.

Meeting was followed by an auction.

—L. J. PIKE, Secretary.

NUMISMATIC AND ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY OF PHILADELPHIA—

A stated meeting of the Society was held by invitation of Dr. McFarland and Mr. Wood on March 27th, in the Boy Scout Building of the Pennsylvania School for the Deaf. The group assembled at 8:30 P. M., and in the absence of the President Mr. Lawrence Morris took the chair.

Mr. Norris, Curator of Numismatics, presented an interesting exhibit of coins which he had purchased at the Treasury Department on a recent visit to Washington. Our Vice President Mr. Garrison also exhibited a set of coins sent to him by the Athenaeum. The Secretary was requested to write to the Athenaeum suggesting that possibly they would be willing to present these coins to the Society.

The Program Committee reported that while a speaker was available for the next meeting he would be glad to hear from members who wished to serve as hosts for the remaining meetings of the season.

The meeting then adjourned to listen to an instructive paper presented by Dr. McFarland in regard to the great yellow fever epidemic in Philadelphia and its effect upon Benjamin Rush. Many members present expressed themselves as unaware of the information which Dr. McFarland had quoted, and stated that they found the paper both interesting and informative.

Seventeen members and six guests were present.

—W. WISTAR WOOD, Secretary.

NEW YORK NUMISMATIC CLUB—

The 424th regular meeting of the Club was held on Friday evening, April 14, Mr. Thomas F. Morris, President, presiding. Twenty-three members and one guest in attendance.

The regular order of business was suspended and the Secretary announced the death of one of the Founders of The New York Numismatic Club, Past President and Life Member, Elliott Smith, who died on March 29, 1944. The following Resolution was adopted:

"Almighty God, in His Infinite Wisdom, has seen fit to take from us our dear friend Elliott Smith.

"The New York Numismatic Club wishes to record with profound sorrow the passing away of our Founder, Past President and Life Member, who died on March 29, 1944, at the age of 77.

"Elliott Smith was one of the five organizers of our Club and up to recent years attended the meetings regularly. Through the death of Elliott Smith the Club has suffered an irreparable loss and the Numismatic fraternity a genial friend."

On motion, the President directed that a Memorial Page be set aside in the records of our Club, and a copy of the Resolution be sent to the widow.

Topics for the evening: Roman Coins of Severus Alexander, A. D. 222-235 to Philip I and II, A. D. 244-249; United States Eagles; an illustrated address on Money Novelties by Mr. Farran Zerbe; Greek Coins of Syracuse; Coins of Russia.

Exhibits were made by 19 members—an excellent showing, as usual.

The Executive Committee suggested as the topics for the May meeting: Pioneer Gold; Cob Money of Peru; Roman Coins from the Rule of Trajan Decius to Gallienus; Coins of Scandinavian Countries; Greek Coins of Carthage and Rhodes.

The Publication Committee, Mr. Farran Zerbe, Chairman, read the following report (condensed):

Reference was made in our February report to Hobbies Magazine editorial statement that counterfeit U. S. Government notes were commonly exhibited at A. N. A. conventions. Inquiry as to the correctness of the statement and emphasizing that the A. N. A. was zealous in conforming with the law, and at no time exhibited counterfeits, brought a thankful reply from the Editor stating that it was seeing obsolete notes on display that led to the misstatement. . . . Progress is reported in international preparation for currency stabilization following the war. . . . Bracelets, pins and earrings with coins of friendly Allied nations are on the New York market. . . . Millions of U. S. dollars are estimated to have been lost in war activities in the Pacific, the largest single loss to date was more than $400,000 sunk with the Cruiser Chicago, off Guadalcanal in January 1943. Great amounts are carried by some of the large ships. The U. S. S. Saratoga carried $800,000 when it headed for home after fourteen months at sea, most all of which was dispersed on the trip's first pay day. . . . Washington reports that the U. S. is producing coins for Australia to reduce the strain on the Australian mint for extraordinary coin demand caused by the influx of American troops with money to spend and want change. . . . Financial writers are discussing the ultimate redemption of U. S. war currency and the probable increase in variety and quantity as Europe is invaded. It is stated none has been authorized by Congress, all up to now having been handled by the Treasury and War departments. . . . Congress has warned against the indiscriminate distribution of World War II medals and decorations. About 175,000 awards have been made so far. The probable quantity threatens to lessen appreciation of the nation's awards for valor. . . . Washington reports that the coinage of one cent pieces has been restored to the standard composition—95 per cent copper, 5 per cent tin and zinc. No more cartridge shell cents. . . . The black market in currency has made the U. S. dollar 200 to 1 Chinese. This is said to be influenced by rumors that U. S. troops would be paid in Chinese money, leading to hoarding of U. S. dollars.

—F. C. C. BOYD, Secretary.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 83rd meeting was held Monday evening, April 10th, in the Tyrolean Room of the Benson Hotel, Portland, with 36 members and guests in attendance. —RAYMOND MOULTON, Secretary.

ORANGE COUNTY COIN CLUB—The 59th monthly meeting of the Club had a rare treat in having Mr. Holger Jorgensen introduce for the first time his new book, "Old Coins of China." Mr. Jorgensen stated that Chinese coins were the most interesting and fascinating of all coins in numismatics. At the same time it is the most neglected because of the lack of understanding and inability of students of coins to interpret the inscriptions and thereby properly classify and catalogue these coins. With Mr. Jorgensen's new book, the types are very much simplified, and it should open a new and interesting field to students. It is a great honor to have Mr. Jorgensen present to the Club this valuable book, and the Club wishes to urge everyone who is interested in the coins of China to own and study this work.

It was announced that we now have 46 paid members for the year of 1944.

Refreshments were served by the ladies, and it was then announced that the next meeting of the Club would be held in Brea the third Tuesday evening in April, in conjunction with Brea's annual hobby show.

The Secretary then called attention to the National Coin Week, April 16 to 22. All members were urged to exhibit.

—C. GLENN CURTIS, M.D., Secretary.

A third display to be arranged for by Julius Windner will be shown at the Philadelphia National Bank.

ROCHESTER NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—The meeting on April 4 was presided over by Barney Bloom in the absence of President Hutchinson. Edward Meinhart, Chairman of the Coin Week Committee, stated that in addition to the exhibits which are set up at the present time, consisting of two in the Museum library, two in the Museum meeting room and the exhibit in Sibley, Lindsay and Curr department store, there would also be displays in several of the local banks and factories. He is planning to use the radio to acquaint more people with Coin Week.

A very interesting letter from the Medway Towns Numismatic Society of Rochester, England, was read by Mr. Meinhart. The R. N. A. has been corresponding with this Society for quite some time, and the members at the meeting expressed a willingness to correspond with the members of this Society in order that we might exchange ideas and answer some of the questions regarding United States coinage that are uppermost in the minds of this group.

—F. E. EICHORN, Secretary.

RACINE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

From all indications the Banquet will be a decided success, as there are 100 reservations reported to date. Exhibits will be displayed in the afternoon from 2 until 7 o'clock.

—ALFRED GROSS, Secretary.

Plans for National Coin Week were discussed and several expressed intentions of exhibiting.

Possibilities of having the annual picnic meeting in June were discussed but no definite plans were made.

Mr. Sandburg conducted the entertainment and exhibit for the evening. It consisted of a Numismatic Quiz and a showing of Buffalo Nickels.

—W. W. WILLARD, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 92nd meeting of the club took place at the Y. M. C. A. Club Rooms on March 30, President Worth presiding. There were 16 members and nine visitors present. After routine business was taken care of, the report of the Auction Committee was heard. A detailed plan was outlined of the whole procedure. Briefly their plan was as follows: presenting of materials by members designated to furnish items for sale to auction committee at least one week before meetings; Johnson's Auction Catalogue of 1943 to be quoted as a guide for values by the auctioneer; coins up for auction to be on display 15 minutes before meeting, and will speak for themselves as to classification when so exhibited; coins are displayed at owner's risk if not protected adequately against handling; time for auction limited to 30 minutes; no set opening bids, owners must protect their own lots with protective bids; one bid to constitute a sale; commissions to be 10% on amounts to five dollars and 5% on amounts in excess of that figure; any unsold lots to be held over to following meeting and have precedence in their order of sale over new lots. These rules are to apply to U. S. items only. For lots of foreign coins, owner must give full details, description and approximate value, and bidders will exercise their own judgment in bidding.

With a few minor changes the report was adopted. It was generally felt that the plan will prove to be of much benefit in making the auctions more interesting and successful.

DISPLAYS: Mr. Woods: a set of Lincoln cents, ex. fine to Unc., and all found the hard way; brilliant proof sets 1936 to date. He told a very interesting story of how he became interested in coins. His pet coin was an unusual one, also found in circulation, an 1883 Liberty Head Nickel which had been "halved" and cleverly machined together and containing an 1856 gold dollar.

Mr. Main reported a large number of coin and stamp enthusiasts at Boeing's Plant. They are planning to organize a hobby club. Mr. Main was appointed a committee of one to keep in touch with the situation and report back to the Club.

Mr. Hughes spoke on his visit to Vancouver, B. C., and new Canadian coins, of which he had many on display, and available for any member's collection at face value.

—HENRY H. ZECKSER, Secretary.

WESTERN RESERVE NUMISMATIC CLUB—The 277th meeting of the Club was held at the Carter Hotel, April 12, with 28 members and guests present.

DELUXE COIN CABINETS

Nearly all coin cabinets are now off the market for the duration, as government priorities prohibit the manufacture, due to the hardware, and other materials needed for defense. Fortunately, we have been able to obtain a contract to purchase a LIMITED NUMBER of cabinets, as specifications below, just what every collector is looking for, and unable to locate. Most cabinets that hold 1,000 coins or more usually sell for $20 or upward, and these are priced at practically pre-war prices. If you are in need of a nice cabinet, you will not delay your order, for these will sell very quickly.

A CHOICE COLLECTION OF PATTERN CENTS

We offer a group of 19 all different U. S. Pattern cents. All are brilliant and perfect. Each is mounted on an individual card with full description listing the rarity number and quantity struck.

Several of the cents have less than 100 pieces struck; some as few as 25 to 50 pieces, and two show only six to eight in existence. It took the former owner 8 years to accumulate this group of cents, and to the collector who desires a representative showing of these interesting coins, here is his opportunity.

Price for the collection is only $300

ONE OF THE RAREST PIECES IN FRACTIONAL CURRENCY

Number 56 in the catalog, with the autograph signatures of ALLISON and NEW, is considered one of the rarest of all. The 1943 catalog price is $600.00. We offer one in perfect crisp condition for only $390.00. A splendid item for investment as well as rarity.

UNCIRCULATED SILVER DOLLARS

In all the field of Numismatics, the uncirculated U. S. silver dollar probably stands today as the least inflated item. Although cents, nickels, dimes and quarters of comparable age and condition are selling at ten, twenty and one hundred times face value, the good solid uncirculated silver dollars of twenty, fifty and sixty years ago may be bought for only two to three times face value. Dollar collections carefully bought offer unusual possibilities and make a beautiful display at a small expense above face.

Start your silver dollar collection now with these choice uncirculated coins. The best investment you can make.

THE COINAGE OF NEW GUINEA

By SIDNEY V. HAGLEY, President

Association of Australian Numismatists, Renmark, South Australia

The introduction of a distinctive British coinage for the Territory of New Guinea is of fairly recent date and, disallowing the abortive essay in 1929, did not commence until 1935.

During recent years the economic importance of the island has been gradually growing, and with this growth came the need for greater attention to the currency.

However, lying as it does as a buffer between Australia and the turbulent Pacific Ocean, it has assumed an importance far exceeding its economic resources.

Politically the island, the largest in the world, is divided between Dutch and British influences. The Dutch section comprises a little more than half the island and occupies all that part west of 141st degree latitude; its area being 150,000 square miles.

The whole of the eastern half is British, and is divided for administrative purposes into the "Territory of Papua" in the south east, and the "Territory of New Guinea" in the north east.

Of the Dutch section little need be said as the currency is linked with that of the East Indies, no special coinage being struck.

British influence dates from 1884 when Papua, then called "British New Guinea," became a British Protectorate. In 1888 its status was changed to that of a Crown Colony, and in 1906 a dependency of Australia, and the name was changed to "Papua."

The "Territory of New Guinea" comprises the former German New Guinea, control of which passed to Australia under mandate from the League of Nations in 1920. This includes the north eastern part of the mainland together with the numerous islands of the Bismarck Archipelago, New Britain, New Ireland etc., and the northernmost islands of the Solomons group.

Under the German administration, 1885 to 1914, the well known and attractive "Bird of Paradise" coinage was issued. These were all struck in Berlin and consisted of 20 and 10 Mk in gold, the 5, 2, 1 and $\frac{1}{2}$ Mk in silver, and the 10, 5, 2 and 1 pfennig in bronze. The gold is dated 1895 and the silver and bronze 1894 only. The obverses of all these pieces are the same, a beautiful representation of the bird of paradise, perched with its wings outspread and tail displayed. The obverses have no legend. The legend on all the reverses is "NEU GUINEA COMPAGNIE," with the value within a wreath of palms, "20 NEU GUINEA MARK 1895," etc., in four lines.

These continued in circulation for some time after the Territory was occupied by Australian troops in 1914. The silver coins were accepted on the basis of eleven pence to the mark but were gradually withdrawn by the Commonwealth Bank, a branch of which was established in Rabaul, and replaced with Australian currency.

The acceptance of the mark, except from natives, was made illegal by Ordinance No. 23 of 1922, and British and Australian coins were the only currency until 1929, when an attempt was made to introduce a distinctive low value coinage.

The Currency, Coinage & Tokens Act 1928 (dated Oct. 8th) provided for the issue, by the Administrator, of nickel-bronze pence and half-pence.

The coins were required to be of the size of 6d and shilling respectively, with plain edges and perforated in the center, and were to be legal tender up to 5 shillings.

Draft designs were prepared at the Melbourne Mint by Colonel Law, with the native art of New Guinea as the motif. The designs, with certain modifications to suit the special requirements of coinage, were modelled by Kruger Gray at the Royal Mint, London, and matrices and master punches prepared therefrom.

The first of these coins was struck in the Melbourne Mint in November, 1929, and the completed coinage was sent to New Guinea by the end of the month. The coinage was a small one, only £261 in pence and £51 in half pence, both dated 1929.

During the experimental striking at the Melbourne Mint, a few specimens of each were struck in silver; these are very rare. In cupro-nickel a few specimens were also struck with the obverse die of the Australian shilling and the reverse of the New Guinea penny. These are not perforated.

This 1929 coinage was not put into circulation, owing to certain unforeseen difficulties which arose. One of the principal difficulties was the local business practice of banks and commercial firms and persons, of enclosing in a sealed roll, shillings to the value of £5. These rolls were used extensively in the business of the Territory, and were almost universally accepted as currency to the value of £5.

The nickel penny was of the same dimensions as a shilling, and it was found, as a result of a trial, impossible to distinguish between a roll containing 100 nickel pennies and a roll containing 100 shillings.

Although most of the 1929 issue was melted down, specimens can still be obtained fairly easily and cannot be considered rare.

No further attempt was made to introduce a distinctive coinage until 1935. Under the "Currency, Coinage & Tokens Ordinance 1935," (of New Guinea) a more ambitious set of coins were provided for. These were the florin, shilling, sixpence, threepence, penny and half-penny, although up to the present the florin and half-penny have not been struck.

The designs of the four denominations already issued are the work of Kruger Gray, of the Royal Mint, London. The shilling was adapted from the design of the 1929 penny, which it closely resembles.

Of a silver fineness of 925, this coin is remarkable in being the only silver coin in the British Colonial series to be perforated in the centre.

The perforation, which is a characteristic of the New Guinea coins, was insisted on by the Administrator as an essential convenience for the pocketless natives.

The shilling was the only denomination struck in 1935; the sixpence and threepence, although dated 1935, were struck in 1936. The latter two coins are of cupro-nickel.

The description of these three pieces is as follows: shilling: Obverse: An Imperial crown above the hole, two Royal sceptres crossed below the hole, a necklet of dogs' teeth entwining the sceptres, a seven-pointed star between the bases of the sceptres, and in the margin the inscription "GEORGIUS V. D. G. REX ET IND. IMP." Reverse: Four oblong representations of a native carving extending from the hole in the form of a Greek Cross, interspersed by four narrow, pointed representations of a native carving, and in the margin the inscription: "TERRITORY OF NEW GUINEA ONE SHILLING 1935."

Sixpence: Obverse: An Imperial crown above the hole, the Imperial monogram "G.R.I." below the hole, and the date across the coin, divided by the hole. Reverse: Symmetrically surrounding the hole, a representation of the stone head of a native war club in the form of an eight-pointed star, and in the margin the inscription "TERRITORY OF NEW GUINEA 6 PENCE" and the date. Threepence: Obverse: similar to the sixpence. Reverse: Symmetrically surrounding the hole, a square with sides horizontal and vertical and surmounting a representation of the stone head of a native war club with four points, one point projecting symmetrically from each side of the square, and in the margin the inscription "TERRITORY OF NEW GUINEA 3 PENCE," and the date.

The penny has the distinction of being the first of the limited series of British Colonial coins struck which bear the reference to the brief reign of Edward VIII.

Dies for all four denominations were received in Melbourne from the Royal Mint, but owing to the abdication of Edward, the other three denominations were not struck bearing his name.

The description of the penny, which is of bronze, is as follows: Obverse: An Imperial crown above the hole, the Imperial monogram "E. R. I." below the hole, and, on either side of the hole, representations of ornamental carvings on native war canoes. Reverse: Surrounding the hole, representations of native ornamental carving, and, in the margin, the inscription "TERRITORY OF NEW GUINEA ONE PENNY 1936."

The only two denominations struck since the accession of King George VI to the throne in 1936 are the shilling and the penny.

The shilling is exactly similar to the 1935 issue, except for the change in the inscription to "GEORGIUS VI. D.G. REX ET IND. IMP." and the date 1938.

The type of the penny is altered slightly by the replacement of the monogram "E. R. I." by "G. R. I." and the date 1938; otherwise it is similar to the 1936 issue.

The type of the 6d and 3d has been changed slightly, to obviate the repetition of the date on both sides, and by the substitution of the words "Six" and "Three" for the numerals 6 and 3 respectively in the inscriptions.

Although dies for these two denominations are held in the Melbourne Mint, no coins have, as yet, been struck from them.

Australian and British coins are not actually legal tender in the Territory of New Guinea, as Sections 10 and 12 of the "Currency, Coinage & Tokens Ordinance" prohibits the use of British or Australian florins, shillings, sixpences, threepences and pennies.

Likewise, the coins of the Territory of New Guinea do not circulate as legal currency in the Territory of Papua. The Currency Ordinance 1911 of Papua provides that a tender of payment of money made in coins which are legal tender in Australia under any law for the time being of the Commonwealth of Australia, shall be legal tender in Papua.

NATIVE CURRENCIES OF NEW GUINEA

Whilst native currencies are outside the province of this paper, some notes of these may be of interest, particularly as one form was made legal tender.

Section 7 of Ordinance No. 23 of 1922 ordains that "In that part of the coast of New Guinea lying between Cape Merkus and Cape Dampier and in the hinterland adjoining that coast, the shell known as goldlip (Meleagrina Mergeretifera) may be used by any person at the rate of twelve shillings a pair in place of legal tender for any purpose except for the purchase, sale, barter or exchange of Trocas shell."

In common with most of the islands of the Pacific, shells of various types and varieties are used extensively by the natives of New Guinea and the islands of the Territory.

The transition from this form of currency to the introduced coinage is fairly complete in the more developed centers, such as Rabaul.

In these places, the shilling, still called "mark" among many of the natives, has replaced the old forms of barter and shell money. Paper money is also acceptable and, to some of the more enlightened natives, the function of the cheque is familiar.

However, in the outlying districts and islands, the primitive native currencies are still in use; the varieties and modes of use of these are extensive.

The principal money of New Britain is the "nassa immersa," obtained from the North Coast. Threaded onto short lengths of bamboo, these shells have a standard value for most commodities. These short lengths are joined together in coils, a man of great wealth possessing as much as 200 fathoms. Black shell money is also used in Mioko island.

In the Aitape section of Tepik, the money varies from porcelain, glass or ground clam shell rings to cowries and beads.

The red shell money of the Kieta district, obtained from the Solomons, is rare and has a fairly high value, the "subsidiary coinage" being white shell money.

Madang favours a general barter system, but tortoiseshell, esteemed as an ornament by the natives, has a fairly constant currency value, as also has the cowrie.

The "monetary unit" of Manus is the dog's tooth, a rope of 100 being equivalent to at least £1—the approximate value of a pig. Shell money has a fixed value of 5 shillings per "pram," and together with coconut oil and various barter items, fulfills a currency need.

Pigs' teeth and tusks and shell money are used in addition to dogs' teeth on Morobe.

The New Ireland money consists chiefly of red and white shells and, in the Sepik district, trochus, mother of pearl shell and pierced cowries. Salt is also used in the bush. The shells take the form of rings, or on strings for use as body ornaments.

HOW BAD WAS NERO?

By EARLE K. STANTON, Los Angeles, California

For almost two thousand years Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus, much better known as the Roman Emperor Nero, has been held up to public censure as the horrible example, par excellence, of all wickedness. There seems to be little doubt that he did his best to justify this reputation and the writer has no desire to detract from it or to attempt to white-wash the character of this very bad boy who was emperor from 54 to 68 A. D. A boy he was in fact, for Nero was only seventeen when he became emperor.

In order properly to answer the question, "How Bad was Nero?" it is necessary to separate the inquiry into two parts, dealing respectively with his moral character, and with his numismatic activities. Speaking generally we may say that Nero was so bad that his most notorious escapades cannot well be related, and for the lurid details recourse must be had to Suetonius' "Lives of the twelve Caesars." Some of this ancient scandal, in expurgated form, has found its way into the pages of "Quo Vadis" and "The Sign of the Cross." Since Suetonius quite impartially besmirched all of his characters it is questionable just how much of it we should believe. It seems, however, that bad as he was, Nero was probably no worse and perhaps a shade better, than several other Roman emperors; for example Caligula, Domitian, Commodus and Caracalla were all close runners-up in any contest concerning iniquity. There were several others whose goodness was not particularly outstanding.

Nero's persecution of the early Christians is well known and in one of the first pagan references to Christ and his followers, the Roman historian Tacitus says: "In order to drown the rumor (that Nero had set fire to the city) he shifted the guilt on persons hated for their abominations and known as Christians, and punished them with exquisite tortures. Christ, from whom they had derived their name, had been punished under Tiberius by the procurator Pontius Pilate. Checked for a time this pernicious religion broke out again, not only in Judea but in Rome."

Nero's murder record is, to say the least, quite noteworthy. The year following his accession to the throne, that is in 55 A. D., he administered poison to his step-brother, Britannicus, and four years later, after several unsuccessful attempts he sent soldiers to murder his mother, Agrippina. He likewise murdered his aunt, and two of his wives, Octavia and Poppaea, the latter being kicked to death while she was pregnant. He drove his tutor, the great Seneca, to suicide, sent poison to his other instructor Burrus, murdered Antonia the daughter of Claudius, and caused the death of the poet Lucan. His stepson Crispinus, he ordered to be drowned, and this by no means completes the roster. Suetonius relates that Nero had many other ambitious designs, such as poisoning the entire Roman Senate.

From this horrid background we can turn to a brighter picture, for the Neronian period, numismatically speaking, was one of the best, and one author (M. Soutza) says that "the monetary system of Nero is the most important known to us from ancient times." Rev. Sydenham in his "Historical References on Coins of the Roman Empire," calls attention to the fact that, before all else, Nero was an artist, and that the die engraving of his time was the finest since the decline of Greek art. Previous to becoming emperor Nero had studied nothing except art, music, drawing and poetry, and he was an ardent collector of statues, pictures, bronzes and beautiful slaves throughout his entire reign. It is therefore not difficult to understand his interest in producing beautiful coins.

The coin portraits of Nero are particularly interesting and are divisible into two or three general styles. His first coins were struck under Claudius, his stepfather, between the years 51 and 54, before Nero became emperor, and show us a very youthful face without the fat neck which distinguishes his later coinage. On the gold and silver coins struck between 54 and 63 A. D. the portraits present a slightly older but still youthful countenance. However the Nero which we know best is that shown on his coins of the period between 63 and 68 A. D. Here we have portraits of the finest style but with the heavy, mature face and neck with which we are most familiar. The historian Ferrero describes Nero as "a precocious debauche, frightfully selfish, erratically vain, full of extravagant ideas," and it is not difficult to read in his coin face, some or all of these characteristics.

At seventeen Nero is said to have been fat and short sighted. In his mature years Suetonius describes him as being about average height, "his body marked with spots and malodorous, his hair light blond, his features regular rather than attractive, his eyes blue and somewhat weak, his neck overthick, his belly prominent, and his legs very slender. . . . And he often appeared in public in a dinner-gown, with a handkerchief bound about his neck, ungirt and unshod."

Nero possessed no proper qualifications for his high position, and became emperor solely by reason of the fact that he was of royal Caesarian lineage and a great, great grandson of Augustus, the first Roman emperor. His mother, Agrippina, Jr. was directly responsible for his signal elevation, and actually reigned with her son during the first five years. The mother and son are shown together on several of the earlier coins. Although there exists a difference of opinion as to her character Agrippina was an able leader, and the Emperor Trajan who ruled from 98 to 117 is reported to have said that the first five years of Nero's reign excelled the government of all the emperors. Sydenham says that Nero's coins show that he was attempting to continue the successful policies of the great Augustus, and that during the period 54-63 he waived his right to issue gold and silver coins, permitting the Senate to do so, these coins being marked by the inscription "Ex S. C."

In the year 63-64 Nero instituted a far reaching reform of the coinage system which is of considerable interest. From the time of Augustus the gold aureus which was comparable to the British pound or our own half eagle, had weighed $1/42$ nd part of a Roman pound, and Nero now had this weight reduced to $1/45$ th part of the pound. Likewise he reduced the weight of the silver denarius from $1/84$ th of a pound to $1/96$ th, and also increased the alloy in the silver coins from 5% to 10%. In his monograph on "The Coinage of Nero," Sydenham notes that various suggestions have been made to account for this reduction in weight of the coins. It has been regarded as the first step in a process of debasement which during the succeeding three centuries finally diminished the gold to almost half of its original weight. As to the silver, the author says that the Neronian reform "offered the most obvious means of perpetrating this organized fraud on the national credit, necessitated by the periodic exhaustion of the imperial exchequer in consequence of court expenses and ever increasing demand for military payments." Other suggestions offered were that the gold and silver were reduced in weight in order to restrain the increasing flow of precious metals to the East, oriental goods being in great demand; or that Nero was attempting by his reform, to unify and harmonize the standards of coinage throughout the vast Roman Empire. These considerations are, however, largely in the realm of conjecture, although it is entirely possible if not probable that they had had considerable weight in determining the advisability of making the so-called reform.

The brass and copper coinage was also affected by the reform although Nero does not appear to have made any change in the weight of the sesterlius, traditionally fixed at approximately one ounce. In the smaller denominations such as the dupondius of brass, and the as and quadrans of copper, Nero proceeded to strike these coins in both brass and copper as and likewise added further confusion to the picture by putting out a semis in both metals. The relative value of brass and copper in these coins seems to have been fixed at $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 although the coins remained equal as to their face value. The value of silver relative to bronze was enhanced. The exact scope and purpose of Nero's elaborate monetary system is not fully understood, but whatever it was, the fact remains that as far as the brass and copper coinage is concerned, it was discontinued after his death and his successors were content to fall back upon the simpler, if less complete system of Augustus.

Many of Nero's coins were directly commemorative of important historical events which occurred in his reign. Perhaps the best known of these ancient commemoratives is the sesterlius which pictures the arch or so-called Temple of Janus, its doors closed, indicating that the empire was at peace with the world. These coins were struck in 63 after the close of the war with Parthia. The end of the Parthian war was also commemorated by the reverse of another bronze showing the Arch of Nero while many other coins make use of a Victory reverse which probably refers to the Parthian victories. Another event of note was the Quinquennialia or Neronian Games which Nero extravagantly celebrated in 60, striking for the occasion a semis decorated with a gambling table on which rests a vase and a crown.

The great fire of July 19, 64, which Nero blamed on the Christians and which the Christians attributed to Nero himself, resulted in an almost complete rebuilding of Rome, and Rev. Sydenham considers that the coins picturing the goddess Roma refer to this rebuilding. On other coins Nero is portrayed as a musician singing to his own accompaniment on the lyre, and it is probable that this representation refers directly to his own theatrical debut at Naples in 64. The often heard statement that Nero "fiddled while Rome burned" is of course incorrect, but Suetonius relates that the emperor exulted in the beauty of the flames, and dressed in stage costume sang of the sack of Troy, accompanying himself on the lyre.

It should not be imagined that Nero was an isolated example of iniquity for the times were bad and society decadent. Prof. Dill, in his "Roman Society from Nero to Marcus Aurelius" affirms that at this time society was divided between "the idle, luxurious rich and the lazy, hungry poor, too proud to work but not ashamed to borrow or beg." Nero was merely the product of his time, but as the leader of the Roman Empire, his influence could hardly have been anything but bad.

In 68 A. D. there was an outbreak of civil war, led by Galba in Gaul and Clodius Macer in Numidia, and as Galba's soldiers were approaching Rome, Nero fled to the outskirts. He ordered his companions to dig his grave, and at the last moment before his pursuers arrived, plunged a dagger into his fat neck, aided by his secretary, Epaphroditus. Nero was then only thirty-two years of age, but as nearly as we can judge, had lived exactly thirty-two years too long.

THE MAN WHO MADE MONEY

If a man's word is as good as his bond, then it must also be as good as his money, reasoned Ben Carney of Crane, Missouri. And in 1933 he set out to prove it by printing five hundred one-dollar "Demand Notes," which the Bank of Crane and the town merchants agreed to clear whenever they were presented.

The slips of pale yellow paper resembled government scrip in size only, and thus did not violate the counterfeiting laws. In crude hand lettering, they bore the legend:

B. F. CARNEY WILL PAY ON DEMAND TO BEARER
ONE DOLLAR
PAYABLE AT MY OFFICE IN CRANE, MISSOURI

Soon after Carney's experiment the bank moratorium was declared, but few of his fellow townsmen clamored for redemption. Many, in fact, pleaded with him to place additional notes in circulation, for they were the principal medium of exchange in the little town for several days. But Carney refused, as he had already proved his point—that his word was as good as his money.

Although Carney has since died, over two hundred of his notes are still in circulation. Some are included in the Chase National Bank's famous Collection of Moneys of the World, but the others, which Carney's sons have tried to locate and redeem, are still missing.

THE MEDAL

A Metallic Sonnet

By E. GALLO-RUIZ, Department of Romance Languages
University of Michigan, Ann Arbor

It was Augustin Filon who first suggested, rather incidentally, in an article about the poet Robert Bridges, the striking analogy which exists between the medal and the sonnet.¹ But the richness of the idea needs analysis and clarification to be seen in its full value. We have essayed in this paper to draw out the implications of this thesis, and illustrations are provided by a medal of the French medallist Guillaume Dupré.

The medal is a self-sufficient microcosm, complete in itself, and created by the cooperation of both intellect and good taste. Since the form of a medal is given to us, it is, metaphorically speaking, a metallic sonnet, because in sonnet and medal the content is to be developed within a given shape or frame. A basic difference, however, is that a sonnet belongs to a temporal art, or to a succession of words, while a medal belongs to arts of time and space because its double participation in literature and sculpture. Thus in the appreciation of medals, or when they are read, because the peculiar and various elements found in them, two demands are to be satisfied, the intellectual and the aesthetic. The intellect demands in sonnets and medals ideas of some interest or value. In this highly concentrated art the anaemic and trite material cannot hide its petty insignificance in fourteen lines or two flat circular areas. But in addition to the high intellectual demands the imagination must find nourishment and stimulus in the beauty of the idea and in the perfect adaptation of content to form.

The medal and the sonnet, because the high demands they make upon the artist and the lover of art, are not exactly popular arts. The good sonnetiers are as rare as the good medallists, but when they appear they demand a place of honor in the history of art. They belong, in its highest expressions, to a subtle realm of artistry, where intellect and taste participate in an intense way, passing from surprise to surprise, by developing the kernel of the central theme to the culmination and the total effect. Only when all the various elements have been properly integrated, in a sequence of aesthetic causes and effects, moved by the laws of art, then and only then is this rational-aesthetic experience attained. Any stage between is an ancillary or partial vision.

The conditions for a good sonnet are the conditions for a good medal. We are confronted in both cases with freedom and compulsion, or with an unlimited number of artistic possibilities in the sphere of content to be harnessed into rigid patterns given in advance. Out of this freedom and compulsion the real artist must strike a spark of beauty. In other words the sonnetier and the medallist are confronted with three problems:

1. What is given to the artist.
2. What the artist contributes.
3. The fitting together of the given and the contributed.

The general forms of the sonnet and the medal are externally given to us. The fourteen lines of the sonnet, arranged in fixed strophes and versification, have an analogy in the medal. Here the artist is given (excluding some rare exceptions) a circular shape of some metal, with an obverse and a reverse, in a moderate size well adapted to the human hand. To the bare bones of this skeleton the artist must add flesh and blood, and artistic content. The final success of the artistic organism depends of the perfect union of form and content and the harmonious articulation of the various parts. But such perfect unions are difficult and rare, and rare are the Miltons and Pisanellos.

The strict determinatism of form in sonnets and medals is in direct contact with the almost complete freedom which the artist enjoys in choosing a theme. His range of selection is unlimited. Even when the artist is asked to develop a certain idea the imposition from without is never sufficiently rigid to fetter the unconditioned activity of the creator. The idea is shaped and reshaped in the artist's mind to make it congenial to his artistic personality. In whatever theme the artist handles, his character mingles with it, and in the final expression both appear integrated. A strict requirement for such a limited form is the concentration of its content. The weak and the unaccented is often hidden in a monumental sculpture and in a long poem, or a novel. In a medal and a sonnet, on the other hand, small blemishes are always obvious, for every element coexists in the focus of our appreciation.

The idea to be developed into a given form should appear organically growing, from seed to fruit, yet the total impression is neither fruit nor seed, but the whole tree. In a medal and a sonnet the theme is not given at once. An artistic development or commentary of the central idea takes place gradually, by means of which the implicit meaning and beauty are brought up to light, arriving finally at a culminating growth in which the artistic goal attains its final crystallization. In developing the central theme of a medal two methods are possible, corresponding respectively to the arts of space and time. The first, and the most natural, is the sculptural method, or the use of subordinate reliefs to expand the main one. The second method, proper to the sonnet, is the literary method, which consists of adequate inscriptions to explain and clarify.

A strict requirement is the consistency between the various elements. Since a medal, like a sonnet, is to be read, any abruptness or discrepancy of some element is bound to cause an unpleasant effect, because the feeling of organic growth and arrangement must be ever present. This is particularly true in linking the obverse to the reverse, a difficult task in which many medals fail to establish a smooth continuity. Although the general plan must have some clear logic, the various steps should avoid the obvious sequences if they are not to fall into the trivial and naive, and ruin the joys of surprises not fully anticipated. All good art avoids the commonplace and the explicit, for what is too clear lacks novelty, freshness and interest, and we must remember that novelty, freshness and interest are ingredients of any aesthetic experience.

Both in medals and sonnets the final effect or the complete appreciation comes only at the end, after the various elements have been seen developing from the initial theme. Once the manifold elements are split, analyzed, and put together by the logic of art, the enjoyment of the aesthetic is bound to come if the artistic quality is there, provided we have assumed sympathetic docility toward the purpose of the artist. The artistic appreciation of any aesthetic object demands attraction on the part of the beholder, sympathy for the purpose, and a high degree of imaginative cooperation with the entire plan. In the sonnets of Milton we are invited to share the soul of a great poet; in the medals of the Italian masters we can imaginatively become actors of the superb drama of the Renaissance.

Another consideration needs stress, and this is the final vision as a unitary experience. Since both sonnets and medals are to be read as a succession of beautiful elements artistically arranged, we cannot say that the aesthetic experience is attained in any particular element, nor in the mere act of reading. It is the fortune of both arts to be short and compact. This brevity demands strict uniformity in the tenor of the emotion, uniformity in their forms, and uniformity in their elements and their growth. Whatever is irrelevant to the main purpose mars the sonnet and the medal, for both arts lack space to cover deformities. When these requirements are fulfilled and the accidental avoided, an intuitive grasping of the whole, the real aesthetic appreciation, is possible. A sonnet we love is easy to remember, and we generally find ourselves loving and understanding the poetry we know by heart. The medal, being a metallic sonnet, is to be memorized visually to bring it close to our mind. Furthermore, because the impossibility of grasping its various parts at once the use of memory makes more compact the sequence of perception. Once memorized the elements are assimilated and arranged, each one in its proper place. Familiarity with the medal eliminates almost entirely the time element, until every part seems to coexist and the work of art is grasped intuitively.

After the great Italian medallist tradition had sunk to a level of mediocrity, the French Guillaume Dupré revived it to a relatively high level of technique and conception in the early years of the 17th century. Dupré, it is generally believed, does not compare with the great Italian medallists, except in technique, but "his technique, particularly his treatment of surface texture, is so marvellous, that one receives continual pleasure from his medals."² But in addition to his excellent technique the content of some of his medals is selected with care and developed organically so as to attain a convincing synthesis.

One of his best medals came out in 1603. It represents Henry IV, his wife Marie de Medici and the Dauphin. This medal gave a considerable prestige to Dupré, and a privilege from the king to make reproductions of it for a period of ten years. The medal was multiplied in various sizes, cast in different metals and expanded in 1605 into a large medalion. Some interesting documents concerning this medal have been preserved.³

That this medal could have provided the subject for a sonnet and that Dupré unfolded his theme in a sonnet-like fashion is not difficult to prove. The obverse shows the portraits of the French king, Henry IV and Marie de Medici, facing right. Here the dominant figure, the main idea of the sonnet, is the figure of the king, dressed in the vigorous elegance Dupré bestowed on his royal personages. The king is, indeed, the central idea of the medal and of the possible sonnet, but further commentary or expansion is necessary to mature the theme. At this point, in subordination to Henry IV, enters his consort Marie de Medici, sufficiently covered by the king and beautifully related so as to form a pyramidal composition. The portraits are realistic but with royal dignity. The elegance of dress and the careful treatment of the hair keep up with the royal grandeur. Thus the royal couple is sculpturally introduced. The inscription reads: HENR. III. R:CHRIST:MARIA:AVGVST, which is a repetition, for emphasis and for variety, of the same idea, but in a literary manner. The concentrated economy, within a given form, which a sonnet and a medal demand, is characteristic of the arrangement and treatment of this obverse.

The reverse gives further development of the idea. From the royal couple of the obverse the logical thing to anticipate in the reverse is royal succession, and this is exactly what Dupre gives us both in the figures and the inscription. The participants of this scene are Henry and Marie, no longer as mere kings, but elevated to the universal sphere of mythology, to Mars and Minerva, to the royal attributes of valor and wisdom holding hands. The Dauphin is the fruit of this union, the succession of a royal house. And as a wish or prayer for a happy future, the infant Dauphin (Louis XIII), playfully tries to put on the helmet of his father, while an eagle breaking through the sky descends from heaven with a crown in her beak. The inscription, once more, explains in words the represented scene: PROPAGO-IMPERI. Here the idea reaches its culmination, like the end of the sonnet, and the full significance is made clear.

Many contemporary medals could be selected to illustrate the general principles which underline the aesthetics of the sonnet and the medal. The medal of T. Edison by Sinnock can serve this purpose. Because of its concentration and artistic logic, it has been rightly characterized by the words "directness and simplicity."⁴ The well unified obverse and reverse develop there with strict economy, in a culminating growth, from the man to his works. Furthermore, the content is skillfully married to the circular disc and to the graceful spacing. Medals of this type are like a catchy melody, not difficult to retain, hard to forget, and a constant source of aesthetic satisfaction.

THE A. N. S. HONORS A MEMBER

It will be of interest to the many friends of Mr. Alex S. Hauser of 676 Riverside Drive, New York City, to learn of his election as a Fellow of the American Numismatic Society. This action was taken at a meeting of the Council, held on April 15th. Mr. Hauser was formerly an Associate member of the Society. He is at present Chairman of the Post-War Planning Committee, New York Board of Trade, Latin-American Section. His membership in the A. N. A. dates back several years, the number being 6590.

THE CORRECT COMPOSITION OF OUR PRESENT 5-CENT PIECE

W. J. McKinney, Secretary of the Albany Numismatic Society, calls attention to errors made in recent months in our own and one other publication, concerning the metallic content of our current 5-cent piece. The proportions of copper and silver were reversed; the correct figures are: silver, 35%; copper, 56%; the remaining 9% is manganese.

Mr. McKinney asks if anyone knows the significance of the small letters on either side of the red and blue ration tokens.

V. THE BALKANS

Montenegro

Montenegro, alone among the Balkan states, maintained a measure of independence during the centuries when the Ottoman Empire embraced all of southeastern Europe. After 1516 the principality was ruled by the Bishops of Cetinje, a position which became hereditary in the Petrovitch family after 1696, the inheritance passing from uncle to nephew because of the law of celibacy. In 1799 independence was formally recognized by the Sultan, and in 1851 Danilo II abolished the ecclesiastical dignity, declared himself Prince, and decreed succession to direct male heirs. He was murdered in 1860, and having no sons was succeeded by his nephew Nicholas. Under this Prince, Montenegro played its part in throwing off the last holds of Turkish power, and took its place among the Balkan nations. In 1900 Nicholas assumed the title of royal highness, and in 1910 declared himself king.

At the close of the World War the king held out against the formation of Jugo-Slavia, but was deposed by his parliament and saw his kingdom incorporated in the Southern Slav state.

The Montenegrin coat of arms has a double headed spread eagle in silver, holding a scepter in one talon and an orb in the other. On his breast is a small shield with a golden lion passant.

Rumania

The territories forming modern Rumania seem to have been the prey of every ambitious ruler of Austria, Poland, Russia, and Turkey for centuries. Nationalistic movements in the early nineteenth century were subject to Russian and Turkish pressure, and the hospodars (Princes) of Walachia and Moldavia by 1850 needed the approval of those two countries. The union of the two provinces was virtually achieved in 1859, when Prince Alexander John Cuza became ruler in both. The Prince's regime proved enlightened but despotic, and he was removed in 1866.

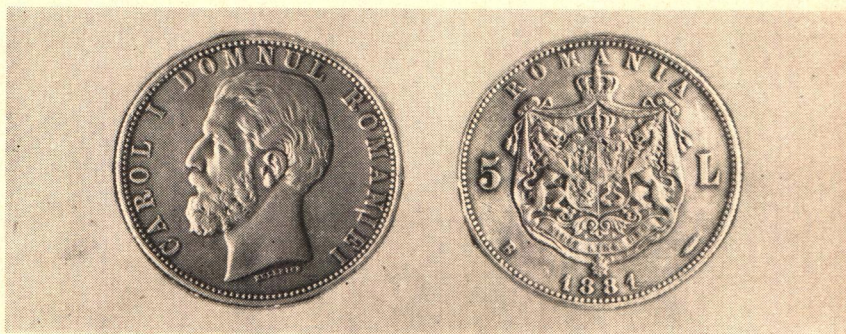

In the same year Prince Charles of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen was selected as sovereign. Times were difficult, and the king kept his throne on several occasions only because his opponents could not agree among themselves. Rumania joined Russia in the war against Turkey, 1877-78. Following the Treaty of Berlin, the Great Powers recognized the complete independence of Rumania. In 1881 the government was changed from a principality into a kingdom, and Charles was crowned king. Internal strife was balanced by fairly uneventful foreign relations, and Charles celebrated his fortieth anniversary as ruler in 1906. He lived to see Rumania aggrandized by the Balkan Wars of 1912-13 and died just as the World War was getting under way in October of 1914.

The Rumanian coat of arms is crowned, canopied, and supported by two lions. The first quarter has a golden lion on blue, for Walachia; the second a lion's head in gold on red, for Moldavia; the third a golden demilion issuing from an antique crown on red, for Transylvania; and the fourth two dolphins in gold on blue, for Dobrudja. A small shield of pretence is quartered in white and black for the Hohenzollern dynasty. Below is the motto, "Nihil sine Deo" (Nothing without God).

Serbia

The Serbo-slavic peoples have occupied their present site since the ninth century. Several kingdoms and dynasties struggled with factional and political rivalries and a dissension in the two Catholic churches before the battle of Kosovo in June, 1389, put them under Turkish sovereignty for four hundred years. After 1718 part of the territory came under Austrian rule and part looked to Russia for guidance. The Serbian war for independence, 1796-1807, under the leadership of Karageorge brought about international recognition in 1812. Though reconquered in 1813, a revolt in 1815 again established independence. This last successful undertaking was headed by Milosh Obrenovich, who had his rival Karageorge assassinated, and thus instituted a century of rivalry between the two families.

After Milosh's abdication in 1839 the short reigns of his two sons were followed by a return to power of the Karageorge dynasty in the person of Karageorge's son Alexander, Prince of Serbia from 1842-1859. His deposition was followed by a return of Milosh and his son until the latter's murder in 1866, when the throne went to a distant cousin, Milan I. This able yet pleasure-loving schemer succeeded in obtaining the complete independence of his nation during the Turko-Russian war of 1878. In 1882 he had himself proclaimed king. His unprovoked attack on Bulgaria in 1885 lost him prestige both at home and abroad, and he was forced to abdicate in 1889. His thirteen year old son Alexander succeeded him, and by a coup d'état in 1893 the young king threw off the regency which had been established, and became actual ruler. He found himself handicapped by a hereditary taint of instability inherited from his father, and by a poor education. Complete separation from his subjects came in 1900, when he suddenly married his mistress, Draga Mashin, a widow much older than himself. In June, 1903, a Palace revolution overthrew the dynasty with the very brutal murder of both king and queen.

Karageorge's grandson Peter became king in time to celebrate his family's centennial in 1904. Trouble with Austria developed, continuing through the Balkan Wars into the first World War.

Jugo-Slavia

The demand for a great southern Slav state, long the dream of the Serbians, found a realization at the close of the World war in 1918, when Jugo-Slavia was created by uniting Serbia, Montenegro, and parts of the old Austro-Hungarian empire. Alexander, who had been acting as regent of Serbia for his father since 1914, finally became King of Jugo-Slavia on Peter's death in 1921. He made himself dictator in 1929 and was assassinated in Marseilles in 1934.

Jugo-Slavia took over the Serbian double-headed crowned eagle. The small shield on breast contains the arms of Serbia, Croatia, and Slavonia.

TOBACCO IN NEW GUINEA

(From National Geographic Bulletin)

American twist tobacco is doing double duty in southwest Pacific areas—passing from hand to mouth as “chews” and from hand to hand as money.

Through lend-lease channels 700,000 pounds of dark Kentucky twist was recently sent to Australian troops for use in bartering with islanders who know nothing of the British pounds or the American dollars. The twist carries its own password. Suppose an airman has to bail out, and plops down among the cagey bushmen. He will need food and a guide. With a few bits of coveted twist he can make a deal and be on his way to rejoice in his unit.

Just how New Guinea's back country islanders learned about tobacco is loosely indicated by the names of varieties grown in some parts of the island—“China,” “Java,” “Manila.” The trail goes back to the Seventeenth Century.

Variety now in demand is made from dark leaf, twisted in rope fashion, cut in seven inch lengths, then flattened into sticks one fourth inch thick and one-half inch wide.

Use of tobacco as money is about as old as its cultivation. Colonial Virginians saw it match gold as legal tender. It became common currency, freely passed in payment for goods and services, was accepted for taxes, fines and other dues. Stores and taverns usually had a special warehouse as a till for Nature's fragrant “coinage.”

A LINCOLN EXHIBIT

More than 1,000 Lincoln medals, 19 of them solid gold, were exhibited in February at Jamestown, New York, by T. James Clarke, Past President of the A. N. A. Mr. Clarke is a Lincoln enthusiast, and his collection includes a wide range of items relating to the Great Emancipator.

COMMUNICATION

My article, "Uncirculated, With Practically No Signs of Circulation," which appeared in the December issue of The Numismatist, has apparently served to identify me as a Numismatic Wailing Wall.

I have so far received 23 letters in response to this article. All of them are well meant and generally in agreement with the import of my observations. . . .

Among the constructive minority of letters received was one from a collector who has been seriously and studiously working on a new and improved code of coin condition classification. As far as the classification of proofs and uncirculated specimens was concerned, his outlined scheme struck me as excellent and workable. But his plan of classification for circulated coins was featured by the addition of some further grades of condition to those we are now using. This approach does not impress me as being logical or workable. I contend that when we haven't thoroughly defined and established the grades we now work by, we'd better not complicate the matter by getting some more with which further to confuse ourselves.

Still another letter offers a classification scheme which is completely based upon clarification, standardization, and embellishment of the one we now have. This scheme not only embodies all of the basic principles which I suggested were desirable in my original article, but goes far beyond them. The author of this classification code has not quite completed his work on it, and prefers not to have its principles presented for general consideration until he has achieved such completion. When he has finished with it, I am very sure that he will have the answer to the problem under discussion.

The writer of this same letter does offer one interesting phase of classification which I don't believe has been discussed, and which he doesn't mind being presented for consideration. From his letter I quote:

"The lack of uniformity in the abbreviated forms of terms of condition is most surprising indeed (or perhaps it is not surprising—it depends upon the reasons why this is so). Take the advertising pages of the December number of The Numismatist, and what a hopeless array we see! [Here follow more than 50 different designations of condition.—Ed.]

Three of the letters which I received spoke enthusiastically about the plan of having the A. N. A. officially select and classify the condition of some common coin specimens, seal them in holders, supply them to dealers at cost in order to guide these dealers in their classification, and so on. I will grant that there is nothing to be lost in trying out such a scheme, but I will offer 9 to 5 odds that there wouldn't be much gained by it, either. True, it might settle some squabbles among the fillers of Lincoln cent cards. But, I can't give voice to glad huzzas at the idea of some dealer—I have one particularly in mind—trying to classify one of my choice 1794-1803 U. S. silver dollars by comparing it with a 1935 buffalo nickel, even though this nickel had been given the blessing of the A. N. A. Somehow, that ain't for me. And, I rather imagine that a numismatist specializing in tetradrachms of Syracuse might be even more aghast at the idea than I am.

I present all of the foregoing observations only because I believe they might inspire more of the same. But don't send them to me. Send them to the Editor of The Numismatist. If their import is sound, he will see to it that they are published and thus presented for general consideration, which is as it should be. I have long been under the impression that not enough collectors voice their opinions, wants, likes, or dislikes, through The Numismatist. After all, this publication is not a house organ of a coin selling firm. It is designed to be of, by, and for the collectors, but it can't completely serve in any of these capacities unless the collectors are heard from.

VICE PRESIDENT BELT TO LEAVE WATERLOO

V. Leon Belt of Waterloo, Iowa, First Vice President of the A. N. A., has announced his retirement from active business, and will locate elsewhere in the near future—the exact destination yet to be determined.

On Friday evening, May 5th, the Waterloo Coin Club gave a farewell dinner in his honor at the Y. M. C. A., their usual meeting place, with twenty-five members and guests present. Mr. Belt is a former President of the Club, and has been one of the moving spirits in its development from the beginning. The members have expressed sincere regret over his impending departure.

ELLIOTT SMITH—1866-1944

We regret with profound sorrow to announce the death of Elliott Smith at the age of seventy-seven years. He died on March 29th, 1944, at St. Luke's Hospital in Newburgh, N. Y., after a short illness.

A prominent collector of coins of the United States, Mr. Smith was Life Member No. 1 of the American Numismatic Association, having joined the Association in 1904. He was an honorary member and one of the founders of the New York Numismatic Club, becoming its president in 1914. He became a fellow of the American Numismatic Society in 1913, a patron in 1925, and was recently made an honorary member of the Council. He was also a member of the Masonic order and of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The medal illustrated was struck by the New York Numismatic Club in honor of his service as their president.

AUGUST C. GIES

Notice has been received of the recent death of August C. Gies of East Liberty, Penna., at the age of 89. Many of our older members will remember Mr. Gies, whose A. N. A. number was 287. Born January 29, 1855, he was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gies, and had been a lifelong resident of the Pittsburgh district.

He moved to East Liberty in 1879, entering the employ of the late Adolph Siedle, jeweler. In 1883 he started his own jewelry business, retiring in 1941.

He was a charter member of the Western Pennsylvania Numismatic Society, a member of the United Presbyterian Church, and had been active in both York and Scottish Rite Masonry. Mr. George J. Bauer, who sent in the notice, states that Mr. Gies had disposed of practically all of his collection in recent years.

NATURALLY

King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy, according to the weekly Italia Libera, was asked what pained him most when he had to leave Rome. Mourned he: "Having to leave my collection of coins."

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Editor. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

ADDITIONAL LIGHT ON BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

The famous name of Benjamin Franklin is identified to some extent with our early coins and medals, and with even the Great Seal of the United States. While the Washington pieces, far greater in number, it is true, have had more attention, nevertheless Franklin well deserves to be studied by those to whom any numismatic item relating to him appeals. All of them are historically important, and our appreciation of them will be intensified as the figure of Franklin emerges more clearly from the shadows of the past.

An ideal source is found in a recent publication by The Viking Press (New York), a Life of Franklin written by Carl Van Doren. His closing words are significant:

"And sometimes, with his marvelous range, in spite of his personal tang, he seems to have been more than any single man: a harmonious whole."

This summation by the author must reflect the inevitable feeling of the careful and sympathetic reader as he finishes this great biography of a great man. The literature dealing with Franklin is, of course, large; but, with few exceptions (such as Parton's Life), only a partial portrait is given. In this new volume we watch his persistent development from boyhood on, amazing not only in its progress but even more in its diversity of interests, until finally the whole tremendous personality is revealed, and we can understand why. Franklin is numbered among the Immortals.

One would need far more space than is here available for an adequate review. It should be noted, however, that a large portion of the material is new because of access to hitherto unpublished correspondence, manuscripts, and notes; and some widely scattered bits of important information have been here collected for the first time and fitted into place.

It is a common belief that no man is indispensable; but in Franklin's case it is certain this nation would have been vastly poorer in many respects had he not lived. No one would be rash enough to attempt to picture our colonial times without him, for his deep insight, his sense of justice, his vision of possibilities, his superb common sense, and his unequalled influence both here and during the thirty years he spent in England and France on behalf of his country, all so profoundly affected the course of events that it is impossible to imagine the history that would be ours today had it never known Benjamin Franklin.

Through nearly eight hundred pages we follow Franklin's unique career as printer, publisher, man of letters, scientist, philanthropist, inventor, soldier, philosopher, statesman, ambassador, Deputy Postmaster General of North America, President of Pennsylvania, member of the committee to draft the Declaration of Independence, member of the Constitutional Convention—by no means the full list of his interests, but enough for a dozen lesser men. And the author says, "Let the record stand, and explain itself. It has meant to make clear that Franklin was not one of those men who owe their greatness merely to the opportunities of their times. In any age, in any place, Franklin would have been great. Mind and will, talent and art, strength and ease, wit and grace met in him as if nature had been lavish and happy when he was shaped."

"Sir," said Dr. Johnson, "the biographical part of literature is what I love most." As one reads this masterly record of Franklin, he is tempted to agree with that rich old character who had his own biographer in James Boswell to such good purpose that both achieved lasting fame.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

The Coin Collector's Journal (Raymond, Inc.). March-April. An important article of great interest is furnished by Shepard Pond, Curator of the Massachusetts Historical Society, giving an illustrated history of the case of Washington's eleven silver medals in the Society's cabinet. The last two shown are the celebrated LIBERTAS AMERICANA (Loubat No. 14), and a fine medallic portrait of Franklin (Loubat No. 16), under whose direction the first named was struck. (See "Editorial Comment," this issue.)

H. F. Bowker reviews "An Inscribed Ingot of the XII Century A. D.," No. 103 of the American Numismatic Society's Numismatic Notes and Monographs. R. I. Nesmith continues his article begun in the November-December number on "The Coinage of Charles and Johanna For Spanish Colonial America."

Numismatic Review (Stack's). March. Quarterly. Cornelius C. Vermeule, III, writes "A Biographical Sketch of Henry Cohen." Any authentic information on the life of one so important to the numismatic world should be indeed welcome. Cohen's monumental work on Roman coins, with its revisions, has been of highest value in the more than eighty years that have elapsed since its first appearance. It is gratifying to have this sketch of the career of the man himself.

Joseph B. Stack continues his "History of Counterfeiting," with special reference to American coins.

BOOK REVIEW

AN INSCRIBED CHINESE INGOT OF THE XXI CENTURY A. D.
by Nai Chi Chang. No. 103 of Numismatic Notes and Monographs.
9 pp. and 2 plates. 1944. 50 cents.

SYCEE SILVER by Phares O. Sigler. No. 99 of Numismatic Notes and Monographs. 37 pp. and 24 illustrations in 6 plates. 1943. $1.00.

Both published by The American Numismatic Society, Broadway and 156th Street, New York.

The fact that the second title given above was not noticed in this magazine at the time of its publication necessitates its being briefly reviewed in connection with a requested review of the first-mentioned title. It is regretted that the authors could not have collaborated in the preparation of a single authoritative work on the subject of Chinese sycee silver, for I am sure Mr. Sigler's enthusiasm for the subject complemented by Mr. Chang's knowledge and years of experience as a collector of Chinese coins in his home country would have produced something more worthwhile than the sum of both brochures. We note with pleasure that Mr. Chang can make this valuable contribution to our knowledge of an obscure point in Chinese numismatics at a time that the combination of world-wide war conditions and ill health require his residence in this country, so far from his beloved home and collection. His present publication, we hope, is a promise of further contributions when that happy day arrives when he can return to his home in China and have immediate access to his collection as the basis for other articles.

Sigler's booklet can be rated only as a compilation of data which has been published elsewhere, but due credit is hereby given for his having gathered together much which was originally published in many widely scattered publications. Chang's collaboration would have obviated errors in the dating ascribed to two of the ten-tael specimens which are illustrated and plainly marked with conventional Chinese dates. The most valuable feature of Sigler's work is the excellent illustrations which depict most of the principal shapes in which Chinese sycees are found. The inclusion of figures 12, 18, 19, 20, 21, and 23, which picture felicitous presentation pieces for weddings or other celebrations cannot be condoned, as they were certainly never made for exchange or monetary purposes.

Chang's booklet is in effect a footnote to an inadequate description of the most ancient and interesting inscribed sycee piece pictured by Sigler as figure 8, supplemented by an uninscribed specimen of similar shape, and contains a surprising amount of corroborative data from Chinese historical and literary references in support of his ascription of a date in the twelfth century and a promise of an even closer dating by reference to a particular historical work, which unfortunately is not at present available in this country.

—H. F. BOWKER.

NATIONAL COIN WEEK

Report of Committee

The Committee met on May 6, 1944 to review the reports submitted by the various participants in activities during National Coin Week, which was celebrated this year during the week beginning April 16.

Individual displays were not as numerous as in the past, possibly due to the fact that a large number of our members are in the armed services or engaged in other war work. However, the reports received from clubs were more than gratifying. This year a greater number of clubs participated, and in addition to the many fine exhibits reported, a large volume of publicity was obtained through local press notices and radio broadcasts. Because of this fact, the work of the Committee in judging the prize winners was particularly difficult. The reports of the first three prize winners showed outstanding activities and displays, and after much discussion, we feel that we have judged the prize winners as fairly as was possible without personal inspection of the exhibits.

Awards were made as follows:

Coin Clubs

First Prize: To the Milford Coin Club. This Club, in the second year of its existence, with a membership of forty-three, had a Coin Week Committee of thirteen members. Twenty-three members and three non-members furnished material for eight displays, two of which were in the lobbies of local banks, and six in stores. The Club held "open house" for its monthly meeting falling during Coin Week and was host to about 100 visitors. At this meeting, the motion picture "The Model Maker" was shown, refreshments were served, and souvenirs were given each visitor. Awarded first prize blue club banner and a two-year subscription to the Numismatic Review.

Second Prize: To the Boston Numismatic Society. This Club had a large display in a window of Raymond's Department Store, four banks, Massachusetts Historical Society, Museum of Fine Arts, and the Boston Public Library. In addition to the exhibits, Mr. Shepard Pond made a radio address over station WEEI. Awarded second prize club ribbon and Beistle's "Die Varieties of U. S. Half Dollars."

Third Prize: To the Columbus Numismatic Society. This Club had twenty-five window displays throughout the city. The material for these exhibits was supplied by sixteen members. Awarded third prize club ribbon and Ward's "Greek Coins and Their Parent Cities."

Fourth Prize: To the Richmond Coin Club. This Club had a large display in a window of Thalimer's Department Store, which was removed to a case on the main floor for a second week. Additional publicity was gained through a two column article by O. L. Lewis, the President of this Club, and notices of the exhibit were incorporated in the Thalimer advertisement. Awarded fourth prize club ribbon and a copy of the Adams-Woodin book on Patterns.

The following Clubs were given honorable mention: Philadelphia Coin Club, Akron Coin Club, Springfield Coin Club, Wilkes-Barre Coin Club.

Second Individual Prize
Aldine E. Kohli (A. N. A. 9811) Bluffton, Ohio

Individual Members

First Prize: To Frank J. Katen of Milford, Connecticut. Mr. Katen had a large general exhibit in a window of the McAuslan & Wakelin Company store at Holyoke, Massachusetts. Publicity was gained through a series of articles in the Holyoke, Massachusetts Transcript-Telegram, and in the advertising of McAuslan & Wakelin Company. Awarded first prize blue ribbon and an 1805 half eagle.

Second Prize: To Aldine E. Kohly of Bluffton, Ohio. A general exhibit was made in the best display window in Bluffton, Ohio. Publicity was obtained by front page articles in the local papers as well as in articles in papers of surrounding cities. Awarded second prize ribbon and copies of both the Newcombe and Pearl works on large cents.

Third Prize: For an exhibit made jointly by Loyd B. Gettys and Lester S. Wright of Davenport, Iowa. The coins were exhibited in a window of the Simon & Landauer store in that city. Awarded third prize ribbon and Gutttag's "Latin American Coins" and three Croteau pamphlets on Canadian Tokens.

The following members were given honorable mention: William Brimelow of Elkhart, Indiana; Morris Klaif, of Brooklyn, New York; Chief Petty Officer W. Audish, Mississippi College, Clinton, Mississippi.

The banner and the ribbons are the official awards of the Association. The banner and the ribbons awarded to prize-winners will be individually inscribed with their names and will indicate the prize for which they are awarded. The other participants will receive uninscribed ribbons. These prizes will be forwarded to the winners as soon as possible. The order for their manufacture could not be prepared until the prize-winners were determined.

The other prizes are those most generously offered by coin dealers, and are as follows:

A. Kosoff: The Gutttag Collection of Latin American Coins; Adams-Woodin "United States Pattern, Trial and Experimental Pieces;" Beistle's "Die Varieties of United States Half Dollars;" Ward's "Greek Coins and Their Parent Cities;" Catalog of the Pearl Collection of Large Cents.

Joseph and Morton Stack: An 1805 gold half-eagle; two year subscription to The Numismatic Review; Howard R. Newcomb's "United States Cents 1816-1857."

Hans M. F. Schulman: Three copies of Croteau's books on Canadian Tokens.

There were several other prizes offered and distributed directly by the donors for outstanding participation in National Coin Week. The details on these prizes were not available to the Committee at the time this report was prepared.

The Committee takes this opportunity of thanking most sincerely these dealers for their interest, cooperation and generosity, and all others who assisted in any way to make this year's National Coin Week a success. Our congratulations are extended to the prize-winners, and our thanks to all those who participated.

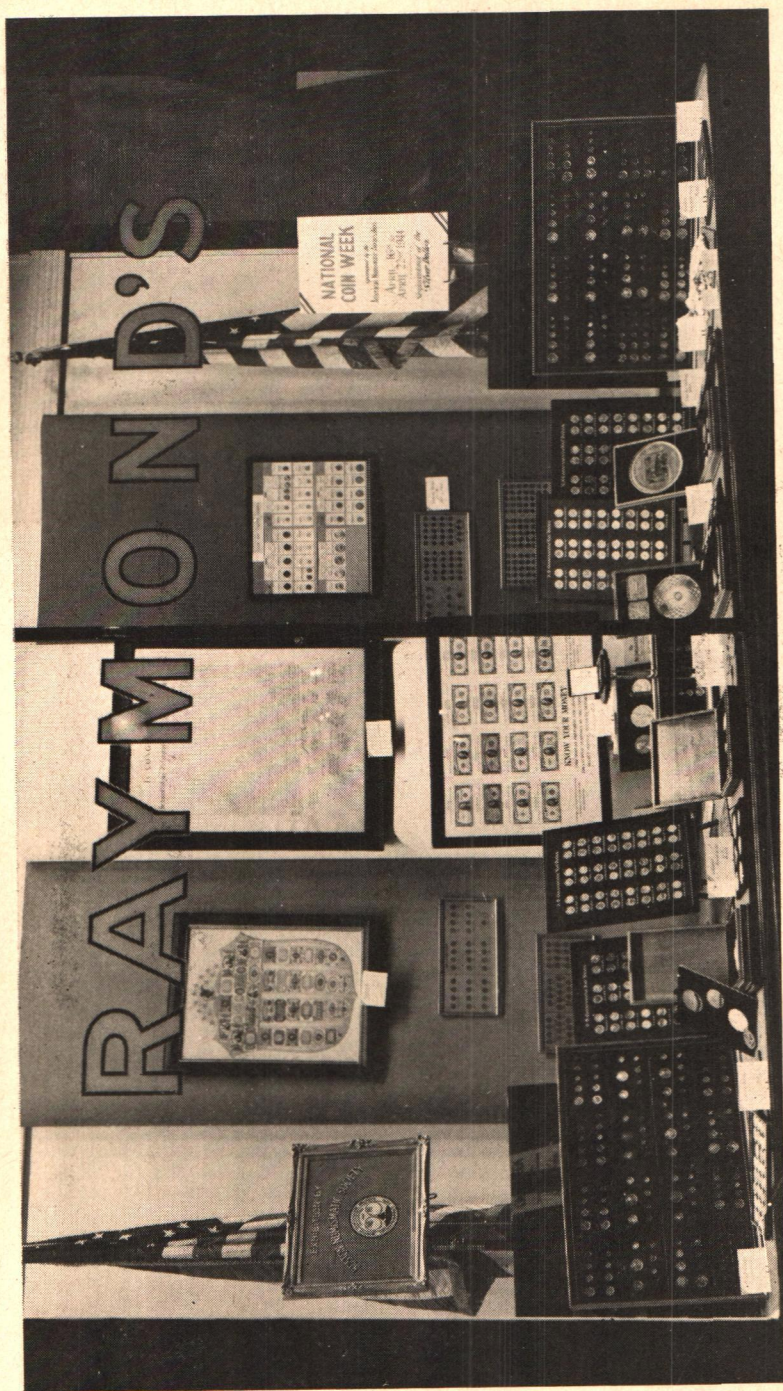

CHARLES P. KNOTH, General Chairman,
A. KOSOFF, Chairman of Dealer Committee,
LEWIS M. REAGAN, Director of Publicity,
LOUIS S. WERNER, Awards Chairman,
MARTIN F. KORTJOHN, ex-officio, President.

MEMBER KOEPEL IS AWARDED PRIZE

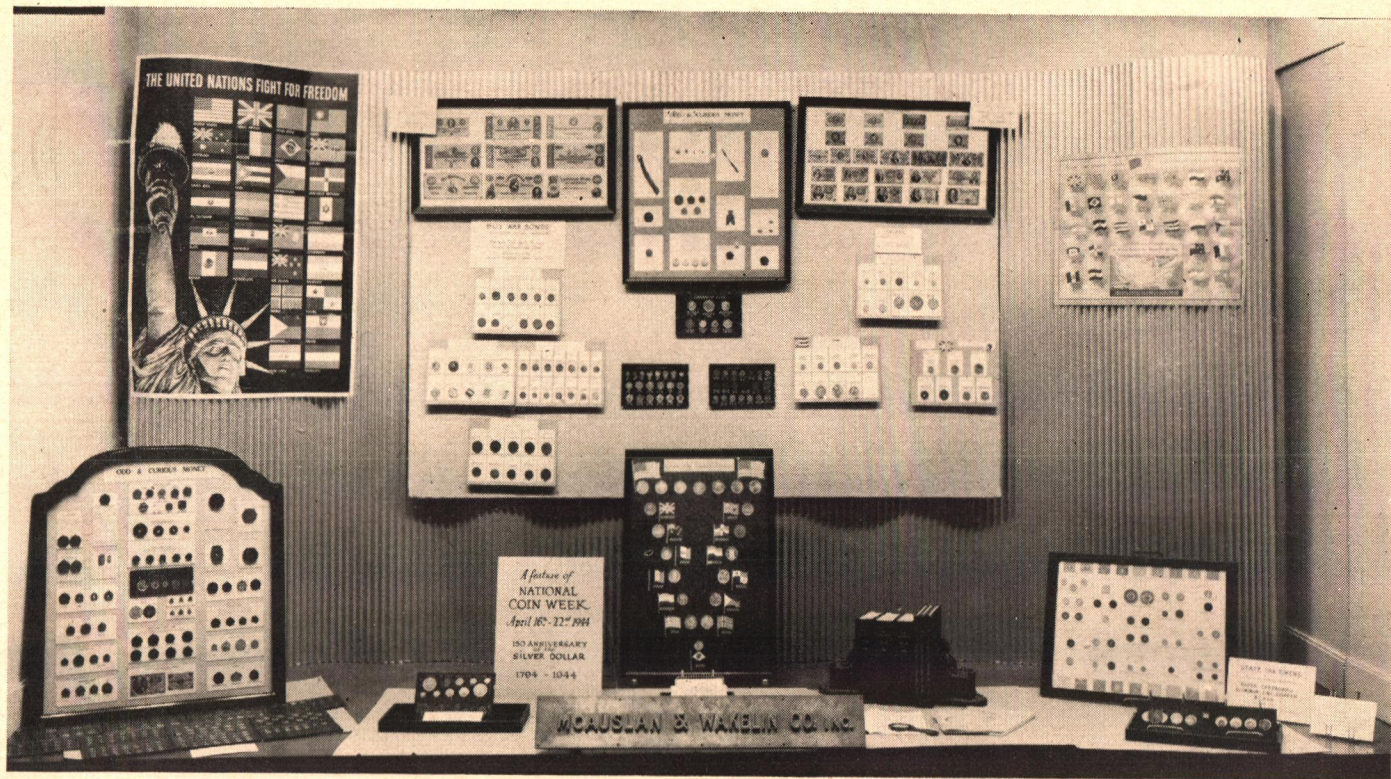

At the Brea (Calif.) Hobby Show, sponsored by the Orange County Coin Club during National Coin Week, S. M. Koepfel was awarded Second Prize for his exhibit, from his personal collection of U. S. fractional currency and large bills. The exhibit was later placed in the First National Bank of Fullerton, where it is said to have attracted much interest.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

BROOKLYN COIN CLUB—The 131st regular meeting was held on Wednesday, May 3, at 174 Montague St., Brooklyn. President Charles P. Knott presiding. Fifteen members and six guests were present.

The President reported on the activities and success of National Coin Week and exhibited a number of photographs of the various exhibits. The Brooklyn Club participated in a number of outstanding exhibits and activities but the report is not entered in competition with other Clubs for any of the prizes since all members of the National Committee are members of this Club.

It was a real pleasure and a privilege to have as the guest speaker of the evening Mr. Homer Stephens, who read a very splendid and scholarly paper on the Conder Tokens. The paper was illustrated with an extensive and outstanding exhibit of these tokens. (An abstract of this paper appeared in the May issue of The Numismatist).

Mr. Charles N. Schmall postponed the reading of the second part of his paper on the Bungtown Colonial Copper Series, but read a copy of an original bill presented to the Continental Congress in 1786 authorizing the establishment of a United States Mint. The bill evidently failed to pass for the mint was not established at that time and it required further legislation in 1792 before the mint was actually established. However, the details of the 1786 bill were very interesting and it constitutes an important numismatic document.

The topics of the meeting were: Conder Tokens, Colonial coins struck for New York, U. S. coins dated from 1830 to 1840, medals pertaining to Mother's Day and to Memorial Day, and German Porcelain coins. The following exhibits were made:

Mr. Douglas: Collection of Firemen's Badges.

Mr. Douglas: Three Obol of Dyme.

Mr. Downing: Forty large cents 1793-1814 in superb condition.

Mr. Friedman: Complete proof sets, 1936-42.

Mr. Kimpfer: Denarii of Marc Antony and Octavian. Solidus of Valentinianus and of Valens.

Mr. Knott: Three varieties of Nova Eborac cents, Immunis Columbia, and two varieties of Talbot, Allum & Lee tokens.

Mr. Kortjohn: Proof half cent of 1836 (restrike), both varieties of 1836 half dollar, three Australian threepence of 1942 (D mint, S mint, and without mintmark), two Australian shillings of 1943, S mint and without mintmark.

Mr. Martin: Complete set of two cent pieces, matched proofs.

Mr. Reagan: Collection of 30 pieces of German porcelain coins, 20 pieces of German inflation coinage in denominations from 500 marks to 50 million marks.

Mr. Schmall: Collection of Colonial coins including six struck for New York. Some early Mass. Colonial paper money.

Mr. Schwartz: Nova Eborac cent 1787. Merriam copy of George Clinton "Non Vi Virtute Vici" cent; two varieties of "Am I Not A Man and A Brother" tokens; four varieties of Masonic half-penny tokens of 1790; Mother's Day token.

Mr. Sghia: Eight varieties of New York cents.

Mr. Stephens: Ten trays of Conder tokens.

—LEWIS M. REAGAN, Secretary.

—ALFRED HUTTER, Secretary.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The regular meeting of the Society was held Monday evening, April 24th, at the Burroughs Foundation, Boston, with President Chell-Frost in the chair, and ten members and one guest present.

Mr. Schuhmacher spoke briefly on what had been accomplished by his committee in regard to the displays which were made for National Coin Week, and that his full report would follow at the next meeting.

The regular meeting of the Society was scheduled for May 29 at the Burroughs Foundation, and members were instructed that this would be the last meeting held before the summer months.

The balance of the evening was allotted to Mr. Newell of Rochester, N. Y., who gave a very interesting talk accompanied by picture slides of a great number of rare and interesting coins. Mr. Newell's efforts were heartily appreciated by the members and the Society by a rising vote extended its thanks.

The San Francisco mint has completed minting of 30,000,000 coins for the Australian government from bullion provided by Australia. As reported the coins are 3 pence, 6 pence and florin denomination. . . . From Naples, Italy, comes word that heavy fines have been imposed for illegal trafficking in U. S. blue seal notes which are in greater confidence than the yellow seal issued for North Africa. The blues being prized as U. S. A. obligation; the yellows, not legal tender in Italy, and considered as only Allied Military currency. . . . Treasury Department now supplying, not over two each to an applicant, mint condition 1921 Morgan Type Silver Dollars and most all coins of the various mints for 1943-1944. Doubt is expressed regarding the Treasury Department's statement that a dollar note lasts nine months. Some say most of them will not last nine minutes. It is stated no proof coins will be struck this year and none for the duration. Proofs of prior years are not available at the Mint. Mint facilities are now overtaxed producing coins and service medals. . . . New top prices are to be noted for most series recently offered at auction. . . . The Leshner Referendum 'Dollars' have been dormant since rivalry for varieties disappeared a few years ago. New competition in this interesting series is evidenced by auction reports. . . . Twenty cent size foreign silver coins gold plated and mounted as ear ornaments are offered on Fifth Avenue."

NUMISMATIC AND ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY OF PHILADELPHIA—

A stated meeting of the Society was held by invitation of Mr. Thomas Evans and Dr. James W. Wister at the Mask and Wig Club on April 24th. There were 31 members and two guests present. Before the meeting a very delightful supper was served.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Mr. Howard Longstreth, at 8:15. As Mr. Wistar Wood, the Secretary, was absent Mr. Alfred D. Norris was appointed acting Secretary for the meeting.

Curator of Numismatics, Mr. Norris, exhibited a number of Civil War Tokens, and an 1807 half dollar with head facing to the right. Mr. Longstreth exhibited a bronze medal struck for one of our former presidents of the Society, Mr. Charles E. Dana. Mr. Longstreth is under the impression that we have some duplicate medals of this issue that have not been all sold, and has requested Mr. Norris to look these up, as there were several requests from members desiring to buy them. Mr. Norton, the former Curator of Numismatics, turned over the balance of his funds, amounting to $42.53, to the new Curator, Mr. Norris.

Mr. Castor called attention to the recent Franklin Institute award to Mr. J. Stogdell Stokes of the Edward Longstreth medal of merit, and asked Mr. Stokes to exhibit this medal at the next meeting. Mr. Castor also stated that Dr. McFarland had been awarded a degree by the Government of Costa Rica.

Mr. Clifford Lewis, Jr., extended an invitation to the Society to meet at his residence on Monday, May the 22nd.

The meeting took a recess to listen to Thomas Hart, Esq. speak on "The Schuylkill Fishing Company, also known as the "State of Schuylkill." This is thought to be the oldest existing club in the world, and is rich in Philadelphia historic traditions.

Twenty-eight members and three guests were present.

—ALFRED D. NORRIS,
Acting Secretary.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The 84th meeting of the Society was held on Monday evening, May 8th, at The Benson Hotel in Portland. There were in attendance 22 members and one guest, with President Baranovich in the chair.

Stephen Bibler discussed the fake Grant with star coins: certain unscrupulous parties had stamped or impressed a star on the regular or plain Grant coin. One of these recently turned up in Portland but was detected before anyone was harmed. Leonard Trythal told about receiving a similar coin in 1937.

George Pipes gave a short talk on the patina on the old coins caused by the oxidation of the metal. He showed a Roman coin of Hadrian issued in Egypt, with green patina (about 120 A. D.), and a Dutch coin of Gelderland (1720) with black patina. Bibler showed a Massachusetts cent (1788) with black patina, and a Rosa Americana one penny of 1722 with beautiful golden patina. The patina is not to be confused with the verdigris so often found on Indian head cents having been exposed to dampness.

Displays for the evening were as follows:

Howard Hughes: Mormon gold $20.00 1849; good condition. Brazil bar of 1811 from Savara mines, stamped by Portuguese Government. Blank gold coin used by the Boer army in 1901.

Stephen Bibler: War coins from Iceland, Azores, and British Africa.

David Beetem: Display of 56 Lincoln cents of 1909-S V. D. B.

—STEPHEN H. BIBLER, Secretary.

PACIFIC COAST NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—340th regular monthly meeting was held at the Hotel Whitcomb on April 26th, with 18 members and five guests present.

The Secretary moved that the Society should go on record to indorse the movement of President M. F. Kortjohn of the A. N. A. for issuing Commemorative silver dollars by the Government, and urged all members to write to their Congressmen to sponsor the issue.

The program of the evening, conducted by Mr. Redfield, consisted of different talks on coins from Siam, Sicily and San Marino; most of the members made good displays. It was decided to make our next meeting in May "CHINESE NIGHT," to be conducted by Lt. Commander H. F. Bowker and A. F. Williams. Both promised a great display of Chinese coins and different odd and curious pieces which were used by the ancient Chinese.

—EDWARD FOGLER, Secretary.

Secretary Cunningham had on display various items, including a Lindbergh medal on his first flight across the Atlantic, and a Roosevelt-Wallace third term medal.

President Gibbs had his usual fine display; he showed siege coins from Amsterdam, Aire, Breda, Brussels, Audenarde, Saxony, Dordrecht and Schlick; Cob 8 real counterstamped N. E. as a trial piece for a New England 5 shillings; and a very rare Bombay rupee.

Mr. Gaede invited our Club to be his guests May 17th, and the invitation was accepted.

National Coin Week is being celebrated in Pittsburgh by a display by our President Gibbs in the office window of the Pittsburgh Coal Co., 409 Wood Street, Pittsburgh, Pa. This was given good newspaper publicity.

Mr. Gaede offered a $5.00 prize to the best display of coins, next to that of Howard Gibbs, in Pittsburgh during National Coin Week.

—J. EDGAR CUNNINGHAM, Secretary.

President Lewis read a letter from Mr. Zug regarding the price of coins and bills at present.

Mr. Nielsen, our member from Washington, made a brief talk on his experiences as a collector which was very interesting and most entertaining.

Mr. Lewis then turned the meeting over to Mr. Howe, who presented a most enlightening and instructive talk entitled "U. S. Patterns and Trial Pieces," a subject upon which our members have very little if any information.

—MRS. HELEN G. LEWIS, Secretary.

ROCHESTER NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—The 724th meeting of the R. N. A. was called to order by Vice President Judson at 8:35 P. M. with 18 members and four visitors present. SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 93rd meeting of the Club was held at the Y. M. C. A. April 27, with Pres. Worth presiding. There were 15 members and four visitors present. Mr. Wagner reported arrangements for a display window in the National Bank of Commerce, Central Branch, are progressing satisfactorily. It was decided to hold meetings regularly for the summer.

DISPLAYS: Mr. Fouts exhibited a very unusual piece, a 1943 cent struck about 4/5 off center, in silver. Mr. Glickert until recently possessed a perfect 1943 S "steel" cent, also in silver, and believed to be unique. The question naturally arises: Has the Mint erred in their choice of metal and owing to great similarity in appearance, struck an unidentified number of these silver cents? Perhaps we shall hear more from other members on this subject.

Mr. Morrison, Jr., spoke on his type set of dollars and 3c silver which he had on display.

Mr. Campbell gave a short but very interesting talk on what he says is his favorite coin, a Sesterius of Galba, Roman Emperor who followed Nero and who was assassinated after a very short rule of only 3 months.

—HENRY H. ZECKSER, Secretary.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular meeting was held May 1 at the Hotel Washington. There were twenty-five members and five guests present. The meeting was called to order by President Atwood.

The Secretary read two letters from Mr. Henry Grunthal, a well known numismatist of New York City, who had accepted our invitation to be our guest at the meeting of June 5th, when he would address those present on "The Origin of the Thaler."

As there was no further business to discuss the President turned the meeting over to the Auction Committee. There were 88 lots disposed of and the auction was conducted by our genial member, Mr. Charles E. McCormick, a member and past President of the Baltimore Coin Club.

There was an exhibit by Mr. Edward S. Conger of the following:

A $2.00 Gold Seal Invasion note. A type set of Liberty Head, U. S. gold with motto, and a type set of the St. Gaudens design of U. S. Gold.

By Mr. Hodge, a complete set, with the exception of the 1856, of small cents in proof and uncirculated condition, including all mint marks.

—FREDERIC E. HODGE, Secretary.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB—The regular meeting of the Club and a Coin Exhibition in commemoration of National Coin Week was held Wednesday, April 19, in the Central Y. M. C. A.

Coins, paper money, and various numismatic oddities were on display at 8 p. m., and many people were on hand to view the exhibition and make queries about coins in general.

The meeting of the club, with 19 members and three guests present, was opened at 8:45 with President Arthur G. Fuller in the chair. William L. Wilson, chairman of the program committee, stated that on a recent trip to New York, he had contacted Mr. Joseph Stack, and Mr. Kosoff, eminent numismatists, and that they both would like to talk before our Club in the near future. This is to be arranged as soon as possible.

The question of a Ladies' Night was brought up and, after some discussion, it was decided to leave all arrangements to Hugh G. Funkhouser, chairman of the arrangements committee. The question of entertainment was finally decided with a motion by Charles Morris that the Ladies' Night should be as usual (cards, etc. by Club members and their wives), and that Mr. Stack should be invited to the June meeting of the Club. This meeting would be an open meeting for all persons interested in coins. This motion was heartily approved. Hugh Funkhouser announced that the Ladies' Night would be held at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club Thursday night, May 18, at 6:30 p. m.

Fred Keyser gave a talk, illustrated by his complete (aside from a few of the lesser known varieties) collection of large cents in very fine to uncirculated condition. He spoke on each date and the varieties of that date, and, in almost all cases, a coin was in the collection to illustrate his talk. The earlier varieties, he stated, were largely due to inexperienced help at the mint, and the over dates to economy (redating a still good planchet). Change from the large to the small cent was made through economy and convenience. It is Mr. Keyser's opinion that the 1856 small cents were composed of copper and nickel to increase their bullion value, to be more nearly equal to the large cent. The 1856 issue was of a small mintage and was for circulation to acquaint the public with this smaller type coin. When accepted generally, the small cent was fully adopted in 1857. This talk was of immense interest to the Club members.

The meeting was adjourned at 10:15, and the members and their guests viewed the displays further. A gold coin auction of a very fine gold dollar was won by Martin Johnson.

DISPLAYS:

Martin Johnson: Alaskan and Californian gold. Sets of Mexican, Cuban, South and Central American coinage.

Holmes Cessna: Complete 1936 to 1942 proof sets. Complete set of uncirculated two cent pieces. Uncirculated and proof Indian Head cents. Encased postage stamps.

—F. BRUCE FABLE, Secretary.

There is a strong demand for commemorative half dollars once again. These coins have been overlooked by many collectors during the past few years and the popularity in this series is growing daily with the demand greater than ever before. Many new auction records have been set in the commemorative series and prices are rising rapidly. This is not an inflationary appreciation as the coins have been underpriced for the past few years.

In view of the small number of coins issued and the large following, many new price advances will be noted in the months to come. These coins are better than money in the bank. Buy now and avoid higher prices later. One year from today these prices may look like real bargains.

WE WISH TO BUY COMMEMORATIVE HALF DOLLARS

Our stock on commemoratives needs replenishing. Please let us know what you have for sale in circulated or uncirculated varieties. We prefer having you place a price on your coins and if your offer is satisfactory we shall instruct you to submit your coins. Our 30-page booklet entitled "Before you Sell" giving further information will be submitted promptly upon request.

A CHOICE COLLECTION OF PATTERN CENTS

We offer a group of 19 all different U. S. Pattern cents. All are brilliant and perfect. Each is mounted on an individual card with full description listing the rarity number and quantity struck.

Several of the cents have less than 100 pieces struck; some as few as 25 to 50 pieces, and two show only six to eight in existence. It took the former owner 8 years to accumulate this group of cents, and to the collector who desires a representative showing of these interesting coins, here is his opportunity.

Price for the collection is only $300

ONE OF THE RAREST PIECES IN FRACTIONAL CURRENCY

Number 56 in the catalog, with the autograph signatures of ALLISON and NEW, is considered one of the rarest of all. The 1943 catalog price is $600.00. We offer one in perfect crisp condition for only $390.00. A splendid item for investment as well as rarity.

COMMEMORATIVE HALF DOLLARS WANTED

Am now paying the highest prices in years for uncirculated Commemorative Half Dollars. What have you to sell me? I can use complete or incomplete sets, small or large quantities, one to one hundred or more of a kind. Send me a list today of what you have, for my offer by return mail.

Also, I want to buy nice collections of other U. S. coins, such as Cents, Nickels, Quarters, Half Dollars, Silver Dollars, most everything from Half Cents to Gold, preferably in uncirculated or proof.

It pays to get my offer before selling, and if you really plan to sell, then we most likely will do business.

ATTENTION ALL COLLECTORS

In my long search for National Bank Notes of Oklahoma, I have finally run across something really of interest, regarding the money panic of 1907. We did finally uncover a little Script. Most of this is in pretty nice condition. First orders received will get the nicest pieces. This Script is printed on light brown paper, same size as the Legal Tender Note of that period, printed in red ink. All are stamped paid by Guthrie Savings Bank, Jan. 10, 1908 or various dates during the year 1908 and were issued during the year 1907.

50-YEAR INDEX, $1.00

tacked by the Spaniards in 1572, the buxom Dutch women organized the housewives of the city into small battalions. Each was armed with boiling water, which they kept boiling during the entire siege of the city. One group of women captured Spanish soldiers who had climbed up the walls, and another boiled them alive. The Dutch were numerically much less strong than the Spaniards, and although they lost the ten southern provinces called Belgium, the northern part managed to hold its own, under the leadership of the Prince of Orange and Nassau, who is known to history as William the Silent. It was a desperate war.

Crown of William I

Philip succeeded in 1584 in having William the Silent murdered by bribing a Dutchman with 25,000 guilders, an enormous sum for that time. But his son, the successful Prince Maurice of Nassau, who turned out to be a military genius, brought matters to a less desperate state.

Prince Maurice won three great victories and recaptured eight cities from the Spaniards. As he had no qualifications for statesmanship, the civil government passed over from the Stadtholder (as he and his father were called) to the State-General, a kind of Parliament, with a Prime Minister, a genius named John Oldenbarnevelt.

Silver Medal—John Oldenbarnevelt

Differences arose, of course, between the military and civilian authorities, and Maurice, the one commanding the army, succeeded in having Oldenbarnevelt murdered. This murder, in some way, led to the downfall of the Dutch some hundreds of years later; because at that time there began a long struggle between the civil government and the House of Orange. Maurice was followed by his youngest brother, Frederick Henry, a military genius also. But the Dutch had not the ambition to become another military power, even though these two brothers had created the best military machine of the time, enabling them to drive the Spaniards out of the country. But it was precisely the fact that the civilian and military governments were divided that the merchants of The Netherlands formed an aristocracy, free from courts and the too strict legislation.

Silver Medal—Frederick, Prince of Orange

As fate would have it, during the 80 years through which the Dutch were cut off from Europe by war, they had to take to the sea. They developed an efficient merchant and naval fleet, and they also gave important help to England in the defeat of the Spaniards at sea. Becoming a sea power, the Dutch conquered other empires in the Pacific. As history shows, the Dutch were the civil engineers of that day. They drained marshes in England and built canals in Germany. They organized the first transportation on canals, with time tables even as our own railroads of today. The historic Dutch windmill introduced many machines in many factories.

The domination of the sea was not at all pleasing to Charles I of England, who found his country at a disadvantage with The Netherlands. Several wars with England occurred, in not all of which The Netherlands were successful, but with a general happy ending. Also because of the genius of Admiral Tromp, the Dutch were getting so sea-conscious and so self-satisfied that they neglected the army—which suited the Dutch population as it lessened the danger from the House of Orange since they were military leaders.

Silver Medal of the Famous Dutch Admiral Maarten H. Tromp

Silver Medal Commemorating the Peace of Westminster

In 1672, Louis XIV of France was very conscious of the strength of The Netherlands on the sea, and its weakness on land. He invaded the lowlands, and the House of Orange was asked to take charge of the situation, as they were the only ones able to save the country from destruction. The Prince of Orange in power was the famous William III, later king of England. He was one of the world's greatest politicians, and saw at a glance that Holland was doomed to be slaughtered by the French army. Therefore he took part in English politics, and here, I think, I come to one of the most interesting parts of my story.

William III landed a small Dutch army in England to support the rebellion which opposed King James II. King James' armies broke into a rout and most of the support was passed over to William. The British Parliament wished to name Mary, daughter of James II and wife of William, Queen of England; but upon William's clever insistence, named the couple king and queen. He was now the head of two great empires, and was easily able to oppose France in the invasion.

If William had possessed an heir, it is quite possible he could have left both empires to him, and history would have taken a different course. He died childless, however, and left the government of both countries to the Duke of Marlborough, who was really the one who destroyed the power of Louis XIV. It is interesting to know that England's Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, is a direct descendant of this Duke of Marlborough.

In the Dutch republic after this time no great statesman became Prime Minister, and the clumsy political situation could have been handled only by a first class genius. Nor did the House of Orange produce any military experts; and no great political philosophers, such as produced the American Constitution, ever arose in Holland. Then came the time when water power proved more efficient than windmills, and Holland had neither waterfalls nor coal.

Through the wars of England, William III had lowered the financial strength of the country. There was also the self-satisfaction of the Dutch, a state of mind dangerous to any country which considers herself on top of the world. I can also say it applies to the individual: when one becomes too satisfied with his own success, downfall is certain. We saw it in the case of Spain and Portugal. We are seeing it in this history of the Dutch republic. Today, our United States is the most important country in the world, and let us hope that we have learned from experience to preserve safely what has been so marvelously built up.

The Netherlands were a decadent state about the time of Napoleon, and he had no trouble in overthrowing and plundering the country of her riches. After the fall of Napoleon, the large countries in Europe—England, Austria and Russia—set up a kingdom under the Oranges, one of whom had fled to England during the wars and had waited to return after the defeat of Napoleon. Their reason for so doing instead of incorporating The Netherlands with another large country, was purely selfish: it was to serve as a buffer state against possible attack. For fifteen years The Netherlands and Belgium formed one kingdom, but Belgium finally insisted on separation. It is an interesting fact, that of all the great countries that tried to set up republics, only the United States succeeded, and to an extent that surpassed all others in history.

Now let us see what happened when these United States were small, and these tiny Netherlands of today were big and strong. We go back to the year 1780, when the Declaration of Independence was four years old. The American nation, at war with the British was looking for support in Europe, and looked to The Netherlands and France as the most logical supporters of her fight for freedom. A part of the population of The Netherlands and, as my research has shown, the greater part, was greatly intrigued by the remarkable courage of the Americans, and wanted openly to support them. However, they were familiar with the fact that any open support would immediately involve a declaration of war by the English, and would therefore lessen the help they might otherwise give. But an extremely complicated situation evolved in which Benjamin Franklin played one of the most clever diplomatic roles. Many a time in The Netherlands there was open hostility between the so-called American and English factions, and if the Dutch Constitution had not required a unanimity of votes on any action, war would have resulted immediately with England. That it finally resulted, nevertheless, we will see later.

One of the American commissioners in Europe wrote back to Washington: "Don't worry, Gentlemen; if this Dutch republic will not declare herself our friend, she cannot be our enemy on account of the unanimity required by the Constitution. Therefore, this should persuade us to assist the faction that is in favor of us by all our means."

Britain, of course, tried to get the Dutch to declare war on them, which would divert attention and hamper the Americans. They even went so far as to search Netherland ships on the high seas for contraband materials. Amsterdam, which was very influential in Dutch politics, wanted to make an unofficial treaty with the Americans, and William Lee was sent over from Washington to meet the representative of Amsterdam. The Dutch figured that if the city of Amsterdam would make a treaty with the Americans, it was just a personal matter, which would never involve a war with England, because it was not the Dutch republic that was handling the matter. The representative of Amsterdam, Mr. Van Berckel, planned to draw up the treaty in such a way that when the time would have arrived Holland was to make an official treaty, and that this same treaty would serve as such, with additional signatures. The treaty had thirty-four separate articles relative to Netherland-American friendship, shipping, travel and diplomatic relations.

William Lee sent a copy to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and he made a serious mistake of writing to Washington that: "This is a copy of the treaty between The Netherlands and the United States." This copy fell into the hands of the British, and they declared war on The Netherlands. As William Lee had sent two copies by separate ways of transportation, one copy reached Washington before they knew that England had declared war on the Dutch.

Congress sent a minister to Holland. His name was Henry Laurens, former President of the Continental Congress. He sailed from Philadelphia in 1780 on the Mercury, commanded by Captain Rickels. If we here have thought convoying was invented during the present war, we will see that the Mercury was convoyed by two sloops of war. After the sixth day, they returned to Philadelphia and the Mercury continued on alone.

Three weeks out of Philadelphia the British ship Vestel ordered the Mercury to stand-to. Laurens immediately threw his diplomatic papers overboard with an iron weight, unfortunately not heavy enough to prevent the British capturing the pouch. They took Laurens prisoner, despite his claim of diplomatic immunity, and he was confined to the Tower of London, which, as we know, was not a very nice place to stay. His health suffered greatly and he got back to the United States only because the English wanted the release of the British General Cornwallis. The British also used this pouch to justify their declaration of war on The Netherlands.

However, one by one the provinces recognized the United States. Popular sentiment was extremely favorable, and meetings all over the country expressed an admiration for the American nation. Finally the State-General of the Dutch Parliament ratified the treaty, and John Adams signed it in 1782. Van Berckel, whom we mentioned before, became the first Dutch Minister to the United States. He died in 1787 in Newark, New Jersey. And so started a long friendship between the United States and the Netherlands.

Holland Recognizes American Independence (Silver Medal)

It was also a Hollander who was the first foreigner, and therefore The Netherlands was the first foreign power, to have saluted the United States flag. This was on November 16, 1776; that date a brigantine entered the harbor of St. Eustace, a tiny Dutch island in the West Indies. It was a strange ship—strange because it flew a strange flag. It had 13 stripes of red and white and no corner field. The man in the harbor, as any polite Dutchman would have done, fired a cannon. But as soon as he had done so he felt seriously disturbed. He arranged to see the Governor of the tiny island and, as the story goes, he said,

Silver Medal—City of Amsterdam Commemorates the Recognition of American Independence

"There is a ship flying a flag I don't know. I think maybe it is the flag of those new United States." The Governor, who was very familiar with Dutch ships smuggling arms to the Americans, said, "I hope you gave the salute."

As you know, in the West Indies, island after island are adjacent to each other. St. Kitts, a British island not far away, heard about this incident. The Governor was furious, and sent a messenger with a complaint to the Dutch Governor. But the latter refused to receive this messenger, and wrote a letter to the Governor of the British island in which he said, "Any salute given by me concerns only me and my master in The Hague, and is none of the business of His Excellency, the Governor of St. Kitts." It is amusing to know that the British Governor was called "Greathead" and this Greathead sent another letter (the correspondence is in the archives of The Hague) in which he said, "History will teach you, my dear sir, whether this salute, given to a rebel, was or was not an insult to His Majesty, the King of England."

We have just learned from the previous part of my address that England declared war on Holland in 1780, and one of the few things she did was to send a fleet to capture the island of St. Eustace. The English Admiral Rodney found tremendous booty, for as many as 1400 ships had docked in the harbor and supplied the American nations. He was not as good an Englishman as he should have been because he settled down for six pleasant, lazy months and started to auction off his riches. He was still there in 1781, when the encirclement of Yorktown was threatened and Admiral Hood had received word that the French fleet had escaped from the West Indies and was streaming up to help the Americans.

Admiral Hood wrote Rodney tearful letters, begging him to forget the lovely Dutch island with its beauties, and to please help capture the French fleet. If Rodney had known American slang, he would have said something caustic, but he didn't, and was satisfied where he was.

St. Eustace was returned to the Dutch and today is a desolate little island, with a small American garrison. The names of the two Admirals—Rodney and Hood—are today names of British war ships, one of which was sunk. And a portrait of the Dutch Governor, who was the first to order a salute to the flag of the United States, hangs in the State House at Concord, New Hampshire, where it was placed by one of his relatives.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Knoxville, Tennessee

VI. DENMARK

Denmark emerged as the great Baltic and Scandinavian power under Valdemar IV (1340-1375). His daughter Margaret and her successor Eric of Pomerania ruled the three northern kingdoms under the Union of Kalmar (1397-1448). Then the old line died out, and the new king, Christian of Oldenburg, maintained his authority in rebellious Sweden only intermittently. He also became Duke of Schleswig and Holstein. Strengthened by the results of the Reformation, Christian's successors grew powerful, reaching their zenith about 1645, after which the royal powers and the nation's territories were reduced. This process of attrition continued until a little over a century later the morbid, degenerate, and half insane Christian VII (1766-1808) mounted the throne.

Fortunately for Denmark this reign was a period of great Danish statesmen, and when the young Prince Frederick seized nominal control in 1784, affairs progressed smoothly until the Napoleonic wars engulfed Europe. Hostilities with England culminated in the bombardment of Copenhagen in 1801, and in 1807 England compelled the surrender of the entire Danish fleet. In anger Denmark fell into Napoleon's camp. There were two currencies during this period, one for Denmark proper and another for the Schleswig-Holstein duchies. The species daler, with a current value of 60 schillings in the duchies, was backed by the national government. The rigsdaler species, issued and guaranteed by the National Bank, was coined for Norway and circulated experimentally in Denmark before finally being adopted by that country in 1819.

Christian's death in 1808 brought the Crown Prince to the throne as Frederick VI (1808-1839). He was forced to cede Norway and Heligoland in 1814 as punishment for aiding Napoleon, and a very difficult period of twenty-five years followed. Frederick died without children and was succeeded by his cousin Christian VIII (1839-1848) whose reign was complicated by the increasingly vexatious Schleswig-Holstein problem and by a rising demand for a more liberal constitution.

Both difficulties were still unsolved when Frederick VII (1848-1863) succeeded his father. However, in 1849 the liberalized new constitution and government were established. The problem of the duchies was extremely involved and not so readily settled. The solution hinged upon the succession to the duchies with the approaching extinction of the Oldenburg line of Danish kings and upon the relationship of the territories to Denmark and Germany, Holstein being a part of the Germanic Confederation. The succession to the throne was finally settled upon Prince Christian, youngest son of Duke William of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, a very remote cousin of the king.

This Prince, when he ascended the throne in 1863 as Christian IX (1863-1906), found himself almost immediately embroiled in war with Prussia and Austria with the subsequent loss by Denmark of both duchies and Sonderburg and Glücksburg as well. The large silver pieces come to an end in 1872 with the formation of the Scandinavian Monetary Union, after which as in Norway and Sweden the largest coin is the two krone piece.

The coat of arms on the issues up to 1820 represent the combined arms of Denmark, Norway, and Sweden. After that a more complicated shield prevails. In the first quarter are the Danish arms, three blue lions crowned on a golden ground powdered with red hearts; in the second the arms of Schleswig, two blue lions on a golden ground; in the third four sets of arms—three gold crowns on a blue field for Sweden, a silver hawk on a red ground for Iceland, a silver goat walking on a blue ground for the Faroe Islands, and a silver polar bear on a blue ground for Greenland; the fourth quarter has a blue lion at the top of a gold ground with ten red hearts below for Jutland, and a golden dragon on a red ground for Vandalia. Two superimposed shields contain six more minute coats of arms, making a total of fourteen.

61 Species daler (60 schillings) 1800-1801, 1804, 1807, 1808.

Type originated in 1787, struck especially for the provinces of Schleswig and Holstein.

The initials are for the engravers; the B on the obverse for Johan Ephraim Bauert and the M F on the reverse for Michael Flor.

The 1800 has a variety with P. G. for Peter Leonhard Gianelli on the obverse die and no initials on the reverse.

Edge: ornamented.

62 Rigsdaler species 1801.

Type originated in 1791, struck for Norway but circulated in Denmark.

Engravers the same as the 1801 piece No. 61. Very rare.

Edge: Ornamented.

FREDERICK VI (1808-1839)

63 Rigsdaler species 1819.

Obverse die by Johannes Conradsen (I. C. F.) and reverse by Johan Frederick Freund (I. F. F.).

Edge: slanted reeding.

64 Rigsdaler species 1820, 1822, 1824-1829, 1833-1835, 1837-1839.

The obverse die is again by Conradsen (I. C.) and the reverse by Freund (F. F.). In addition, varieties of the dates 1820, 1822, 1824, 1825 have the initials of the mintmaster C. F. G. Conrad Frederick Gerlach (1821-1831) instead of Freund's; and 1835, 1837, 1838, 1839 have those of George Vilhelm Svendsen (W. S.), mintmaster from 1835 on. The 1838 has a third variety with the initials reversed S. W. The 1833 and 1834 for varieties substitute KM, the Copenhagen mintmark, for the engraver's initials.

CHRISTIAN VIII (1839-1848)65 Species daler 1840-1841, 1843-1848.

The engraver's name H. (Harald) Conradsen appears on the ground line on the reverse. Likewise F. F. for Freund on the 1840. The 1843, 1845-1848 have V. S. for the mintmaster Svendsen (compare W. S. on earlier issues). The obverse of the 1840 and 1841 come with and without a heart under the head as a mintmark for the Copenhagen mint. In 1843 a crown is substituted. The 1844, 1845, and 1847 were minted at Altona and have a symbol and the F. F. initials beside the date. The former date was apparently minted only at Altona.

Edge: reeded.

FREDERICK VII (1848-1863)66 Species daler 1848.

On the death of Christian VIII and the accession of Frederick VII.

F. K. under the head for the engraver Frederik Christopher Krohn and V. S. for Svendsen by the date on the reverse.

Edge: reeded.

67 Species daler 1849, 1851, 1853-1854.

Die by Krohn (F. K.) again. The 1849 reverse die has the Copenhagen crown mintmark and V. S. for Svendsen. The 1851 the Altona mintmark and F. F. for Freund. The 1853 has both varieties and the 1854 has neither indication.

Edge: reeded.

F. K. for Krohn as before. The 1854 and 1855 come from both the Copenhagen and Altona mints with marks and initials as on No. 67. The 1856 comes only from Altona, and the 1863 only from Copenhagen but with R. H. instead of V. S. for the new mintmaster Peter Rasmus Hinnerup, 1861-1868.

Edge: reeded.

69 2 rigsdaler 1863.

For the death of Frederick VII and the accession of Christian IX. H.C. on the neck of Christian for Conradsen. F.K. for Krohn under the head of Frederick. Mintmark for Copenhagen and R.H. for Hinnerup on either side of the date.

Edge: reeded.

H.C. on the neck as before. Copenhagen mintmark and R.H. for Hinnerup on 1864 and 1868; and on the 1871 and 1872 the crown and C.S. for the new mintmaster Diderik Christian Svendsen, 1868-1893.

Edge: reeded.

A CORRECTION

Member Arlie Slabaugh of Oakland, Maryland, calls attention to a statement in Sidney V. Hagley's article on "The Coinage of New Guinea" in the June issue, to the effect that this island is "the largest in the world," quoting the comparative area: New Guinea, 229,000 square miles—Greenland, 827,000.

CHICAGO'S OPEN DOOR

The Chicago Coin Club is making preparations for a notable celebration of its 25th anniversary in connection with the annual convention of the A. N. A. to be held there on August 26-27-28. Their committee have for some time been at work on plans which should mature into a distinctive and long remembered event.

The Club is to issue an appropriate silver medal, and prizes of substantial values are to be provided for those holding the lucky numbers at the banquet, which is to be held in the Century Room of the La Salle Hotel, convention headquarters, on Saturday evening, the 26th.

The opening session of the convention is scheduled for 9:30 Saturday forenoon, in the Illinois Room, opposite the American Room where the exhibits will be installed.

Further official announcement will be made in the August issue.

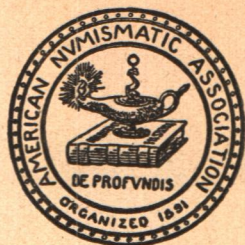

SOME RECENT AUCTION PRICES

Sol Kaplan reports some interesting prices realized at his auction of June 5th: $2½ gold, 1854-5, $900; Saint-Gaudens double eagle, 1907, $101.50; Flying Eagle cent, 1856 proof, $135; same but uncirculated, $105; silver dollar, 1858 proof, $118.50. He adds that all proof coins brought higher than catalogue.

HOW YOUR POSTAL ZONE NUMBER CAN SPEED UP DELIVERY OF THIS MAGAZINE

The best argument for the use of the zone number on addresses has been given by the post office. With so many trained clerks in the armed forces, untrained clerks have to sort mail. In order to use these inexperienced clerks, a simplified method of distribution was adopted which is known as the delivery unit plan or the zone system. The zone numbers you place in your addresses take the place of many months of study by a postal clerk. A new man can sort zoned mail with the speed of a veteran but if you fail to add the zone numbers in the addresses, he is helpless. This unzoned mail must be put aside by him and distributed by a trained clerk, when he can get time, and this is bound to cause delay in delivery.

WHAT BECAME OF THIS "1804"?

To the Editor:

With early U. S. silver dollars being my favorite numismatic concern, I am naturally more than casually interested in the widely studied and conjectured about 1804 issue. Anent this interest, I recently encountered a catalogue listing which suggested that there might be at least a slight possibility that there exists one specimen which has not figured in the listings of the Chapman brothers, Max Mehl, et al.

The catalogue to which I refer is one issued by Bangs & Co., 656 Broadway, New York City, for a sale held October 25-26, 1877, offering the collection of a Dr. Grotefend of Hanover, Germany, as catalogued by S. K. Harzfeld, of 1713 Park Avenue, Philadelphia.

Along with a group of several other U. S. early silver dollar specimens, this catalogue offers, as Lot 815, "1804, a good specimen of this rarest American coin."

There, in its entirety, is the only mention made of this 1804 dollar in this catalogue. The booklet's preface, giving highlight mention of the rarest and choicest specimens being offered in the sale, touches on Masonic medals, Colonial and U. S. cents, and Greek and Roman coins, with no reference being made to this "rarest American coin."

This Bangs sale specimen's listed condition of "good," together with the date of its being offered at auction, indicate that it could not be one of the Big Six of the recognized 1804 dollars as listed by the Chapmans and Mehl.

I would appreciate any information which Numismatist readers might be able to supply on this piece; who purchased it, and at what price; if it was ever recognized as an original, or if it was a restrike or an altered date; where it is today; how it came to be offered with so little fanfare if it was genuine; history previous to its being offered at auction in 1877, etc., etc.

MICHAEL J. A. MOLONY.

DEATHS

DR. W. H. OWEN

The Rev. Dr. William H. Owen, Rector Emeritus of the Holy Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church in New York City, died at Natural Bridge, Va., on May 28, at the age of 69.

Dr. Owen was an enthusiastic numismatist, and at one time owned a fine collection which, in 1927, he presented to Yale University, with which he was connected up to the time of his death under the title of Associate Curator of Coins. He was long connected with the A. N. A., his membership number being 643.

HENRY E. EWART

Through the courtesy of member F. Bowman of Montreal we learn that Henry Edward Ewart, Master of the Royal Canadian Mint, died in the hospital at Ottawa on April 28, 1944. He was born at Ottawa on March 11, 1878, and received his education in the local schools.

A son of the late David Ewart, a former chief architect of the Department of Public Works, Canada, he followed the family tradition, and in the nineties was associated with the late John Askwith of Ottawa in the contracting field. Mr. Ewart's architectural work took him to Halifax for some time where he supervised the construction of the Halifax Armouries from 1896 to 1899.

Returning to Ottawa, he became assistant to T. W. Fuller, and was sent by the Department of Public Works to Dawson Territory in the Yukon, where construction of Government buildings had been necessitated by the Klondike gold rush. He remained in the Yukon as chief officer of the Public Works Department for some five years.

Shortly after his return to Ottawa, Mr. Ewart was appointed to assist in the purchase and installation of new equipment in the Royal Canadian Mint building on Sussex street, and in 1907 was named the first senior clerk of the permanent staff of the Mint. He was promoted to posts of increasing responsibility, and became the first Canadian to be Master of the Mint in 1938.

Mr. Ewart was an Honorary Member of the American Numismatic Association.

GEORGE SIMEON BATTERSON

From the Syracuse Coin shop of Syracuse, New York, comes word of the recent death of George Simeon Batterson at his home in Hartford, Conn., at the age of 76. Mr. Batterson had been identified with the A. N. A. for many years, his membership number being 4300.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Editor. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"LOOK WELL TO THE SOUTH"

In the May issue of this magazine we urgently suggested one post-war activity which, in our opinion, deserves the serious attention of all who are desirous of expanding the influence and usefulness of the Association: a well considered and sustained effort to convince various colleges and universities of the value of coins in connection with the study of history, art, economics, political science, and a number of related subjects. We venture to commend that editorial to the thoughtful consideration of those who may not have read it.

We present another suggestion. In the present conflict which has engulfed the entire world, the United States and most of the countries of South America have, through a common cause, been drawn closer together than ever before. Let us hope that the friendly ground thus gained may be held and developed in mutual respect and understanding.

As a part—even a minor one—in this evolution of international relations, why should not the numismatic interests of both continents become aware of one another, regardless of distance and language differences? An interchange of information on numismatic societies; an exchange of publications; permission granted by the numismatic press in, for example, Brazil to similar journals in the United States to translate and publish such articles as they desired, the latter of course reciprocating in kind: all these and other means later to be discovered could be employed to foster better relations as well as to increase the knowledge of all concerned.

Following the war numismatic activity will be resumed in England, Australia and New Zealand; our relations with collectors and societies in these countries should be easily reestablished; we have already so much in common, and we speak the same language. But what difficulties may exist with respect to South America can be overcome, and we believe the effort should be made when conditions warrant.

In the meantime, a survey could be started to learn the situation in detail, and if proper encouragement is found, such a plan as is here indicated in principle may eventually prove desirable and practical, with resulting benefit to collectors in both continents.

FOR COLLECTORS OF ANCIENT ROMAN

Twenty-three years ago Arthur E. R. Boak, Ph.D., Richard Hudson Professor of Ancient History in the University of Michigan, brought out the first edition of his "A History of Rome to 565 A. D." In 1929 appeared the second edition with much new material and some revisions. Last year The Macmillan Company published a third edition with substantial revisions because of "the discovery of new and important evidence and the fruitful reassessment of the old." Certain portions of the text have been completely rewritten, the maps improved and new illustrations added.

This as a brief preface to a word of keen appreciation; any collector interested in ancient Roman coinage will find in the more than 500 pages of this History a wealth of historical material that admirably supplements his more technical treatises; it is perfectly adapted to that rare combination in which each clarifies and enriches the other.

Within so brief a scope a history of Rome from the birth of the Republic to the death of Justinian in 565 must of necessity be condensed—and this has been done with exceptional skill. For the purpose suggested it is ideal: neither too much nor too little. Of especial value, we believe, will be found that section which carries the story of the Empire through its first two and a half centuries. After that the coinage rapidly loses much of its former interest for the average collector, and the history of the next three centuries is completely devoid of “the grandeur that was Rome.”

Many evenings of solid enjoyment await the collector who adds this volume to his library.

BOOK REVIEW

RARE COINS OF RUSSIA. By Anatol Soohodolsky. San Francisco, 1944. Privately printed by the author. 40 pp., illus. 4½" x 5¾", 50c.

It is a pleasure to record a publication such as this which is the fruition of years of study and research carried to completion, in every sense of the word, by the author alone. In order to produce it he has acquired and learned to operate a small printing press. The booklet has been laboriously run off by hand, a task of no mean proportions. While the finished product cannot be compared with those from other famous San Francisco printers, such as Grabhorn Brothers or Nash, the author-publisher need not feel other than proud of his work. The small price asked can never recompense him for the great amount of time, labor, and expense which he has expended on the brochure and we bespeak the collecting public's interest and patronage.

This forty-page pamphlet is in no sense a catalog or check-list of the coins of Russia, but is a listing of the rare copper, silver, gold and platinum coins of Imperial Russia. They have been separated into four categories, of “scarce,” “rare,” “very rare,” and “extremely rare,” indicated by the use of one, two, three, or four asterisks respectively. A profuse use of Cyrillic characters where required will be found of great assistance to the collector in attributing and appraising his coins. A list of the mints of Russia is given with their respective mint marks, and a list of the sovereigns of the Romanoff dynasty with the dates of their reigns. The specimens listed are classified by the materials from which they were struck and by denominations.

SPRING CONVENTION OF THE I. N. A.

The Iowa Numismatic Association held its semi-annual convention at Cedar Rapids on May 20-21, the Cedar Rapids Coin Club acting as host, with the registration almost touching 100. Headquarters were at the Roosevelt Hotel, where the exhibits were installed Saturday; these were fully up to the usual high standard, ample in number and distinctive in quality.

A dinner was given Saturday evening, with Ray Harman, President of the Cedar Rapids Club, presiding. This was followed by an hour of pleasing entertainment.

The usual banquet was held at one o'clock Sunday, with the Editor of THE NUMISMATIST acting as toastmaster. The main address was given by Hans M. F. Schulman of New York, dealing with the many similarities between the early history of both the United States and The Netherlands, touching upon a number of interesting and little known incidents, some of which have been commemorated in rare and attractive medals struck in The Netherlands, and illustrated in his condensed paper appearing elsewhere in this issue.

The annual business meeting was held Sunday forenoon, President M. A. Radke of Des Moines presiding; the results of the election follow: President, Loyd Gettys of Davenport; 1st V. P., C. David Pierce of Ottumwa; 2nd V. P., Harry Winn of Cedar Rapids; Secretary-Treasurer, Lester S. Wright of Davenport.

The convention was happy to welcome several officers of the A. N. A. Martin F. Kortjohn of New York, President, who spoke at the dinner Saturday evening; V. Leon Belt of Waterloo, 1st Vice President; M. Vernon Sheldon of Chicago, General Secretary; Henri Ripstra of Chicago, member of the Board of Governors; Ted R. Hammer of Burlington, Librarian and Curator; and Lewis M. Reagan of Brooklyn, Director of Publicity.

A number of the dealers were also present throughout the convention: James Kelly of Dayton, B. Max Mehl of Fort Worth, F. K. Saab, of St. Louis, J. B. Stack of New York, Paul Kagin of Des Moines, A. Kriesberg of the Numismatic Gallery, New York, J. G. Macallister of Philadelphia, and Jake Simon of Davenport. The Whitman Publishing Co. of Racine was represented by R. S. Yeoman; they very generously donated a sufficient number of their type coin folders and handbooks to permit giving one to each outside registrant.

The convention was definitely a success, and the Cedar Rapids Club sincerely appreciated the privilege of acting as host.

AN INQUIRY ANSWERED

Member J. P. Palmer of Cincinnati supplies the information requested in the June issue by member W. J. McKinney, concerning the significance of the small letters on the ration tokens: they simply represent die and punch codes. As the dies are worn out they are replaced, the new dies bearing different letters.

A SUPPLEMENT TO HETRICH AND GUTTAG'S LIST OF CIVIL WAR TOKENS AND MERCHANTS' CARDS

By JOSEPH BARNET, Brooklyn, N. Y.

(Series began in issue of April, 1943)

CIVIL WAR TOKENS AND CARDS

Also Known As

COPPERHEADS AND REBELLION TOKENS

These very interesting pieces were privately issued from 1861 to 1864, and most of them were current, owing to the scarcity of minor coins.

They were issued in 23 states and 396 towns, and struck in copper, brass, nickel, copper nickel, white metal, lead, zinc, tin, silver and german silver, but copper was chiefly used.

There are 9,041 different varieties known at present (1,318 tokens of patriotic design and 7,698 cards). There are 114 with the head of Washington, and 47 tokens and cards with the head of Lincoln.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

ATLANTA COIN CLUB—305th meeting of the Club was held Wednesday, June 7, at the Henry Grady Hotel. After disposing of the regular business, our president, Mr. Paul S. Johnson, presented a very interesting "Double or Nothing" quiz program on old coins, letting the contestants choose questions from a list of ten subjects relating to coins.

There were 27 members and four visitors present.

The Society held its regular monthly meeting at Burroughs Foundation on Monday evening, May 29, with President Chell-Frost in the chair, and 12 members and two guests present.

Mr. Schuhmacher informed the Society that the BNS had been awarded second prize for its display during the National Coin Week, and spoke of the efforts of the members in making this a success for the past two years, also of the fact that both 1st and 2nd prizes coming to New England for the first time in history.

Sage's Numismatic Gallery in the early '70's commemorating the first two Presidents of the Boston Numismatic Society, namely Winslow Lewis, M. D., and Jeremiah Coburn (Nos. 5 and 3 respectively). These he presented to the Society's growing cabinet. A vote of thanks was given Mr. Pond.

Mr. Katzen also presented to the Society watermarked paper which is being used in Italy and the several invasion fronts, upon which the currency for these invaded sections will be printed; also check lists of Canadian currency to each member. Mr. Katzen received the usual vote of thanks from the Society.

Mr. Pond called the attention of the members, that in a short time the annual convention of the A. N. A., would be held, and thought it would be an

An exhibit consisting of dies used for striking medals, and copper plate engravings which were used by banks for printing their notes (now termed broken bank notes). This fine display was prepared by Mr. Philip G. Straus and Mr. Elmer A. Schmidt.

Mr. Schmidt addressed the Club on the topic, "A Brief History of Die-Sinking and Engraving." In his talk he brought out many interesting facts about die-sinking, such as the earliest known dies were made of stone. These stone dies were not practical as they were placed between two blocks of wood, and when they were struck a few times the stones shattered. This led to experimentation, and the adoption of metal dies.

—ALFRED HUTTER, Secretary.

COLUMBUS NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

The 150th regular meeting was called to order by President Head on June 12 in the Birch Room of the Nell House, with twenty-four members, thirteen guests and twenty-three Juniors in attendance.

President Head announced the winning of the third prize by the Columbus Numismatic Society in the National Coin Week Contest, presenting the book by Ward, "Greek Coins and Their Parent Cities," and also distributing ribbons to the various members who had displays.

President Head also announced that there were forty-nine paid memberships for 1944.

In conjunction with the planned Junior meeting, President Head stated that he had written seventy-five letters to schools and thirty-seven letters to Junior numismatists. He also suggested a revision of the Constitution so that we may have a Junior membership or a Junior auxiliary in connection with the Columbus Numismatic Society.

The program for Juniors was opened by Mr. Rodecker. Mrs. Henderson first talked to the Juniors, displaying and describing a set of Lincoln cents, all dates, taken out of circulation, emphasizing that this was a cheap way to start a collection, and explaining to the children the educational features of collecting coins, and that they should forget profit and know what they are collecting.

Mr. Fred Jewett also talked to the Juniors and told how he started his collection and enumerated the advantages of collecting coins.

Mr. Kabealo introduced each Junior and had him draw a coin from a hat, to be kept as a gift from the Society.

Mr. Kabealo then introduced four children whom he termed the "Whiz Kids." Billy Wendt, age 10, talked on large cents and displayed several. Andy Spieker, age 11, told something of the types of United States silver dollars, and also talked on the Carson City Mint. Bobby Schmidt, age 14, talked on commemorative gold coins and displayed his own specimens.

A question and answer game followed, in which the three above-mentioned children participated together with Nils Miller, age 10, the fourth member of their group.

George Andrews concluded the program by explaining how Boy Scouts could obtain the merit badge for numismatics. He also talked about the Mormon note issues in connection with the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Joseph Smith, and also displayed some of these notes.

Coin displays at the meeting and comments thereon were made by Mr. Melvin Geiger: "Coins of the World." Mrs. Henderson: "Lincoln Cents and Half Cents." Sam Kabealo: "Silver Commemorative Half Dollars." Mr. George Warner: "Army Insignia." Mr. H. Rodecker: "English Threepence." Mr. Depew Head: "Type Sets."

—JACK F. BURNS, Secretary.

—J. L. STACY, Secretary.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—One of the finest meetings in the history of the Club was that held on the evening of June 6, attended by 52 members and guests from various points in Los Angeles and Orange counties. Several well known members were present who had not been able to attend since the outbreak of war, among them being Dr. Chas. Harbeck, and Dr. A. F. Pradeau, who has just returned from a numismatic visit to Mexico, on whose coins he is an acknowledged expert. Pres. Harry L. Canann of the newly organized Bay Cities Coin Club at Santa Monica was present and reported that his Club had a charter membership of 20, and that their attendance was almost 100%.

The distinctive feature of the evening was the presentation by Dr. C. Glen Curtis, secretary of the Orange County Coin Club, of a most unusual screen display of coins, photographed in colors by himself. After much expensive experimentation, Dr. Curtis had finally evolved methods of photography and lighting which produced enlarged pictures of gold, silver and bronze coins showing their inscriptions, patination, condition, and all other identifying characteristics in the utmost detail. In addition to the screen presentation, Dr. Curtis had on exhibition the original coins from which the photographs had been taken, which included a comprehensive collection of ancient Greek and Roman, Chinese coins ancient and modern, Byzantine and medieval pieces, Mexican silver, and many other numismatic items of all periods. Conspicuous in the collection were gold staters of Syracuse and Macedon, gold aurei of Julius Caesar, Tiberius and other ancient rulers, Mr. Holger Jorgensen, who had assisted in assembling the exhibit, commented briefly upon the slides as they were being shown and identified the various coins as to dates, rulers and historical association.

Mr. Height of the Orange County Coin Club had assisted Dr. Curtis in achieving the unusual photographic results, and spoke briefly concerning the methods of lighting which were used and of the difficulties encountered. Apropos the matter of coin photography Dr. A. F. Pradeau exhibited some excellent results which he had obtained in preparing the material for his work on Mexican coins. The secretary was ordered to record a unanimous vote of thanks to Dr. Curtis and his associates for presenting such an unusual entertainment.

—EARLE K. STANTON, Secretary.

NEW-YORK NUMISMATIC CLUB—

The 426th regular meeting of the Club was held on Friday evening, June 9, 1944, Mr. Thomas F. Morris, President, presiding, with 23 members and five guests in attendance.

The topics for the evening: Roman Coins from Postumus A. D. 259 to Numerian A. D. 284; Hard Times Tokens; Double Denomination of U. S. Notes; Greek Coins of Aegina; Colonial Coins of Massachusetts.

Many notable exhibits relating to the evening's topics were made.

The Secretary reported the death of Rev. William H. Owen on May 27th, and spoke of Dr. Owen's numismatic activities going back to 1890. Dr. Owen was Associate Curator of Coins at Yale University, and in 1907 presented to Yale his collection of 10,000 coins, consisting of a most complete series of United States coins up to the $1 denomination; an excellent collection of Colonials, and within the past year a brilliant proof 1827 quarter dollar, an 1823 brilliant uncirculated quarter dollar, and the Ten Eyck specimen of the famous Brasher dubloon. His collections of European coins and Spanish coins were very complete and are now the property of Yale University. Dr. Owen was an indefatigable collector and was a real numismatist. Although not a member of the Club, the members expressed their regret at the passing of this fine gentleman.

The Executive Committee suggested as the topics for the July meeting: Roman Coins of Emperor Diocletian to Constantine the Great; Modern Coins of Italy from Napoleon to date; State Coins of Vermont and Connecticut; Political Medals of Daniel Webster. (Approved.)

Mr. Farran Zerbe, as Chairman of the Publication Committee, read the following report:

"A new book, 'Counterfeiting,' by Laurence Dwight Smith was exhibited with approving comments. . . . Illustrations of two recent medals were shown: A bronze star with ribbon, approved by the President for meritorious achievement to be worn in lieu of various awards and decorations; and a portrait medal of the late noted editor, William Allen White, designed by Youone Forrest Hagen, awarded by the American Society of Newspaper Editors. . . .

Washington reports the Allies are supplied with millions of dollars worth of invasion money—francs, guilders and other western European currencies. Rates of exchange have not been announced for a par with the local money. There has been secrecy to protect against advance counterfeiting. Price regulation and rationing will be tried to avoid inflation. . . . Reports from China are that those there with U. S. money for exchange have their pockets bulging with almost worthless Chinese money. A 500 yuan note may be had for 25 cents. Many are purchased for souvenirs and handfals are given to those leaving for home. In an Oriental crap game millions of yuan are on the floor with a scattering of dollars, francs, liras, piastres and rupees. Coin is out of circulation and difficult to obtain even at fancy prices. . . . In the South Pacific jungles during a barrage ears have been stuffed with paper money to protect against concussion, the only paper handy. . . . Originals of many sculptures by the late Augustus Saint-Gaudens, whose designs we have on the late coinage of $10 and $20 gold pieces, were recently destroyed in the burning of the famed Saint-Gaudens' studio at Cornish, New Hampshire. . . .

U. S. Monetary authorities will meet with Treasury experts June 15th, probably at Atlantic City, to be prepared for post-war monetary planning at the conference of Allied and Associated Nations, arranged to start July 1, at Bretton Woods, New Hampshire. . . . Change of coin designs, mostly dated for a few years ago, specimens of which are just being reported in this country, come from various directions. Notable are those from India and China. . . . Today via London comes word that complications and uncertainty will prevail in France as it is gradually liberated, for the reason that no French leader has been recognized as 'head' by the Allies.

This particularly relates to a circulating medium for the French people. Allied invasion francs are introduced at fifty to the dollar without any French authority."

—F. C. C. BOYD, Secretary.

NUMISMATIC AND ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY OF PHILADELPHIA—A stated meeting of the Society was held by invitation of Mr. Clifford Lewis, Jr., and Mr. Clifford Lewis 3rd, at 240 So. Fourth Street on May 24th. A delicious dinner was served at 6:30 P. M., after which Mr. Clifford Lewis, Jr. explained to the members the significance of the handsome portraits arranged around the banquet hall.

Shortly thereafter the meeting was called to order by the President.

Mr. Morris advised the members that hosts have been finding it extremely difficult to provide entertainment in view of the fact that approximately twenty-five members failed to send back their reply cards. This problem was discussed quite widely by the members, and all agreed that in these difficult times the courtesy of a reply should be expected. Before starting next fall, hosts will be urged to provide entertainment only for those who accepted in advance of the meeting.

The Curator of Numismatics offered a number of medals belonging to the Society in commemoration of Mr. Dana and Mr. Brinton, former presidents, for sale. It was moved, seconded and carried that the receipts should be applied to the Curator's Coin Fund.

Mr. Tatnall exhibited a Coolidge medal and a Lindbergh medal which were also for sale, but belonged to a non-member of the Society.

The President then exhibited a medal presented by the Franklin Institute to our member Mr. Stogdell J. Stokes for outstanding achievements.

Mr. Tatnall then told of a medal which had been awarded some years ago to Cooper Jones and Cadbury by the Franklin Institute for a very useful invention.

The Librarian, Mr. Clifford Lewis 3rd, reported receipt of several exchanges and presented his resignation. He agreed, however, to continue to serve until his successor, Mr. Symington P. Landreth, Jr., should be able to undertake the duties of the office.

Mr. Castor reported postponement of the proposed publication until after the war. He now has on hand sufficient material to comprise a book of nearly 1000 pages. The cost of publishing all of this material at one time seems prohibitive during war time conditions.

The President announced our next meeting was scheduled for the 4th Monday in November.

The meeting then adjourned to listen to an extremely interesting address of Mr. Clifford Lewis, Jr., on historical material which appeared in old Philadelphia newspapers between Yorktown and the Peace. This material included complete correspondence between General George Washington and Lord Cornwallis, which led to the surrender of the British forces at Yorktown.

Several members expressed their profound appreciation to our hosts for the delightful and instructive entertainment of the evening.

Thirty members and two guests were present.

—M. WISTAR WOOD, Secretary.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—On Monday evening, June 12, the Society held its 10th banquet at the Benson Hotel, in Portland; 60 persons were in attendance, including members and guests.

Hugh Davenport, our Vice-President, turned guidance of the evening's entertainment over to our toastmaster, Dr. J. R. Talbert, who proceeded by welcoming all, and then gave a brief account of the founding and growth of our organization from an original membership of 13 to our present roster of approximately 75; also the purpose of such an organization as ours.

The banquet and entertainment were all that could have been desired, reflecting careful planning, and fittingly marking the tenth anniversary of the Society.

Henry Perry's display of U. S. coins and Verl Bonebrake's Foreign coins, filled to overflowing the display space provided, and from a type standpoint left little to be desired.

—J. R. SLUSHER, Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—President Richard T. Hooper called the 108th regular meeting to order at 8 p. m. on June 8th, in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel with 36 members and guests present.

Richard B. Farley announced that two new books on the coins of India were added to the Free Library of Philadelphia.

M. F. Kortjohn, President of the A. N. A., was the honored guest of the evening. We were indeed glad to have him with us and welcomed him most heartily. Among other items of interest which he presented to the club was the movement which he has sponsored for issuing commemorative silver dollars by the Government, and the fact that the executive committee of the A. N. A. had purchased $25,000 worth of bonds in the fifth war loan drive. He urged everyone present to buy as many bonds as possible to help put this present bond drive over the top.

Lewis M. Reagan, Director of Publicity of the A. N. A., announced that the Philadelphia Coin Club had been given honorable mention for its coin displays during National Coin Week.

The exhibits of the evening follow:

Julius Windner: A very comprehensive display of gold ducats of various sizes in mint condition.

A. Sipe: Various types of so-called pin money. The book on "U. S. Cents, 1816-1857" by Howard R. Newcomb.

Julius Windner presented an interesting and informative paper on the ducat, explaining the beginnings of this European coin and how it grew in importance in the monetary system of Austria and other countries.

—ARTHUR SIPE, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 94th meeting of the Club was held Thursday evening, May 26th at the Y. M. C. A. Club Rooms, with 20 members and six visitors present. After a short business meeting the evening was devoted to informal comments by members and visitors, and discussions on the unusually fine displays that were on view. Dollar size coins of the world were featured. The exhibits follow:

Mr. Wagner: A really marvelous display of dollar size coins dating from 1539 to 1940, with those of China and England predominating. There were 20 different Chinese, and nearly all of the English and representing practically every ruler. The display totaled 121 pieces, from the large English penny to the double thaler of Saxony dated 1539. A few other notable pieces were the Salzburg crown, New Zealand dollar of George V in proof, and complete set of Canadian dollars 1935 to 1939. Mr. Wagner stated his favorite was the Cromwell crown.

Mr. Fouts: An interesting display of Central and South American coins. A collection of Brazilian coins representing all rulers and governments of that country. His favorite and most interesting piece was an eight real of the Republic of Central America, a country that had a very short life.

President Worth: Collection in individual holders—of China, Japan, France, England and American Trade dollar. Most interesting, perhaps, was the Chinese dollar with birds flying and rising sun—since discontinued. The reason it was called in by the Chinese government is said to have been because the flying birds reminded them too vividly of Japanese planes flying over their country. The rising sun was objectionable for obvious reasons. The collection also contained the new issue of China.

Mr. Saemon: Pieces of eight, Joachim thaler, Maria Theresa thaler, Peter the great of Russia, Napoleon (1815), and several Unc. Japanese dollars.

Mr. Glickert: 4 pieces—Mexican, Canadian, Japanese and English trade dollar. "Glick" is strictly a U. S. series collector, and a foreign display of this size by him astonished everyone.

Mr. Talmadge: Collection of Canadian large cents in two new type holders, each holding 28 pieces. Also set of American type dollars, including a nice Unc. 1836 Gobrecht (on base).

Mr. Main: Proof 1839 Gobrecht Flying Eagle dollar. Each contributor was called upon to give a short talk on his exhibit.

Next month: "Commemorative Coins."

—HENRY H. ZECKSER, Secretary.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular meeting was held at the Hotel Washington on June 5th. There were twenty-two members and nine guests present. In the absence of Mr. Atwood, the President and Mr. Cullen, the Vice President, due to illness, Mr. Shirley Leachman, former President, presided.

There were remarks by Lt. Col. P. O. Sigler on his finds of Indian and early Colonial Artifacts on the River Farm of George Washington. Lt. Col. Sigler is stationed at Fort Belvoir nearby this farm.

Among the visitors was Mr. Joseph P. Smyth, Vice President of the Baltimore Coin Club, who spoke of the Club in general and especially their meeting place, the Rembrandt Peale museum, which was the home of Rembrandt Peale, son of the celebrated American Artist, noted for his portraits, especially of George Washington.

The Secretary was called upon to introduce the speaker of the evening, Mr. Henry Grunthal of New York City, formerly of Berlin. In his introduction he spoke of Mr. Grunthal's father, who was known in Continental Europe as an authority on European coinage, the speaker having been closely associated with his father for many years.

Mr. Grunthal had selected as his subject for the evening the origin and evolution of the thaler, the ancestor of our American dollar. In his remarks he traced this celebrated coin from its inception about 1484 to the present time, illustrating his remarks with a representative collection from 1484 to date. Mr. Grunthal has visited nearly every country in Continental Europe and thereby became familiar with the evolution of each country's coinage.

At the conclusion of this address, Major Joseph Moss asked for a rising vote of thanks to the speaker.

—FREDERICK E. HODGE,

U. S. Quarter Eagles

1796 Without Stars. Obv. Very Fine; Rev. Extremely Fine. Struck—897 pieces	$225.00
1796 With Stars. Obv. Fine; Rev. Very Fine. Struck—66 pieces	250.00
1797 Very Fine. (Mint record says not over dozen specimens known) This is undoubtedly the rarest early quarter eagle. Only	400.00
1798 Obv. Fine; Rev. Fine. Struck—614 pieces	135.00
1804 Obv. Extremely Fine; Rev. Very Fine. Struck—3,327 pieces	57.50
1806 over 1804 Very Fine. Struck—about 800 pieces. (One at the Roach sale brought $210)	175.00
1807 Very Fine. Struck—6,812 pieces	55.00
1808 Very Fine. Struck—2,710 pieces. (Only year of this type)	125.00
1824 Very Fine. Struck—2,600 pieces	85.00
1826 over 1825 Extremely Fine. Struck—614 pieces	350.00
1831 Extremely Fine. Struck—4,520 pieces	55.00
1844 D Very Fine. Struck—17,332	17.50

The number of pieces struck on the above coins, are taken from the "Mint Record and Type Table" and lists the original total of pieces as issued by the government. It does not mean that there are this many available today, however. Thousands of these early coins were melted by jewelers and smelters around 1834 and 35, when the new small size and lighter weight Quarter Eagle was issued. Thus the true rarity of many pieces is actually unknown.

We are one of the largest Numismatic concerns in the entire world. We own our own building, and occupy nearly 5,000 square feet of floor space, devoted to commercial philately and numismatics exclusively. We employ nearly thirty people, including some of the best experts in our field.

LARGE SALES OUTLET

Our sales are nearly $200,000 annually, and in order to replenish our stock, we must purchase a tremendous amount of material annually. We mail catalogues to more than 12,000 collectors annually—one of the largest numismatic mailing lists ever assembled!

LIBERAL PRICES PAID

Our reputation for paying liberal prevailing prices is widespread. Someone in nearly every town or hamlet in America has had very favorable dealings with the Tatham Stamp & Coin Company.

PROMPT SERVICE

It is our policy to answer all inquiries, (enclose 3c stamp for reply) and make most appraisals within twenty-four hours. We are noted for our promptness in handling transactions.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

We guarantee absolute satisfaction on all transactions, whether you buy or sell. We realize that this is the most essential element in modern business on which to build and create good will.

FREE APPRAISALS

We extend a free appraisal service to the public who may wish to call at our office. We also extend this service to our patrons by mail. This service places the seller under no obligation whatsoever.

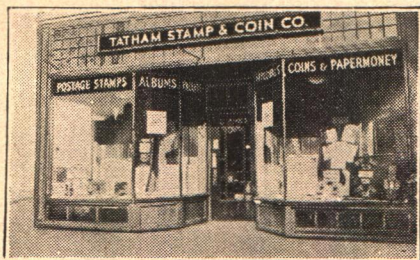

If you wish to have an appraisal by mail, first send us a complete description of the material for sale. We can not assume the responsibility of appraisals on miscellaneous shipments submitted voluntarily contrary to our instructions.

RELIABILITY

When submitting your collection to the Tatham Stamp & Coin Company, you can place the utmost confidence in our reliability. We are members, in good standing, of the leading National and International Philatelic and Numismatic Societies, with ample financial backing to handle your transaction without delay. For reference we refer you to Dunn and Bradstreet.

SECURITY

When your material has been placed in our hands you are assured of complete security. Everything you submit for an appraisal is carefully placed in our vaults, fully covered by fire, and burglary insurance, while in our possession. Furthermore every employee of our organization is bonded, just as the employees at your bank, in which you place your money for safe keeping.

FREE BOOKLET OF INFORMATION

We will send you FREE upon request, our 24 page booklet of information entitled "Before You Sell." Send for your copy today, for it may mean considerable profit to you.

You will seek far for a better investment for value appreciation and can't go wrong by investing your money in Commemoratives.

PRICES SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE.

UNCIRCULATED SILVER DOLLARS

Uncirculated Silver Dollars offer collectors unusual investment opportunities at low cost above face value. Choice dollars are getting scarcer by the day, many being almost unobtainable. We have a very limited quantity in the scarcer dates and cannot guarantee delivery after our current stock is exhausted, even at higher prices. We thank our many customers for their reorders. We have been able to restock one of our scarcer dates with a few coins, but only at three times the former premium value.

FIFTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

AN ABERNETHY "ROCK": A MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE

By STEPHEN H. BIBLER, Portland, Oregon

There was recently donated to the museum of the Oregon Historical Society a most unusual specimen, representing the money or medium of exchange here in Oregon a hundred years ago. And yet it is only a rock bearing pasted thereon a small bit of paper with inscriptions. Not much to look at—but it is what it represents that counts, for it represents the money of those pioneer days when a good horseman could know the names of every individual in the entire Oregon Country. And with it is more or less connected the story of the man who made it—George Abernethy.

In order to have a better understanding of the subject, let us first consider the historic conditions and period when this took place. In the early 1840's, there was no supply of money in the Willamette Valley. There already existed here a settlement of French-Canadians, being former employees of the old Northwest Company and its successor, the Hudson Bay Company, who had left the companies' service, intermarried with the Indians and settled down; these people used a drawing account or credit with the Hudson's Bay Company store at Vancouver, or the various fur-trading posts throughout the Willamette Valley, as the company brought no cash West for their business. The American fur-traders and immigrants brought little, if any, cash with them, and what they did bring was soon used up in the purchasing of supplies.

This lack of money is well illustrated by excerpts from an address by Colonel J. W. Nesmith before the Oregon Pioneer Association in 1880 in which he related that "Until the latter part of 1848, when we began to receive returns from the California gold mines, there was no money in circulation in the country. During the first five years of my residence in Oregon, three Mexican dollars was all the money I received or handled." He came here in 1843 and served as a judge under the Provisional Government. Again, in speaking of the success of Crawford,

Cook & Newell, who engaged in the transportation business in the Oregon City district for several years, he said "Their jointly acquired wealth must have amounted to $500. or $600. in trade. I say trade, because there was no money in the country. It consisted of beaver skins, buckskins, wheat, shingles, hoopoles, salt salmon and saw logs."

George Abernethy was born in New York City in 1807. He left the metropolis to come to Oregon in May, 1840, with a Methodist Missionary Expedition aboard the ship Lausanne. He was selected for the important office of missionary steward and in charge of all financial books and accounts. He thereafter acquired the store and stock of goods of the Methodist Mission at the falls in the Willamette, which grew into the settlement of Oregon City, and became a proprietor on his own account.

He is given credit for being the first merchant to go into business and operate a store in competition with the Hudson Bay Company monopoly. His experience with the Methodist Mission was a leading factor to his success, as well as his personality as a leader of which we shall see more later.

Trading was conducted with whatever cash was to be had, but principally by bartering and trading, and accounts or orders. These orders on merchants came to be a medium of exchange and one of the first acts of the Provisional Legislature in 1845 was to make them, that is, orders on solvent merchants, along with gold, silver, treasury drafts and wheat, a lawful tender for taxes and judgments; this in effect practically constituted making a banker out of the merchant without any security for his solvency. Apparently these orders had a different value on the market and were worth as much as the standing or reputation of the merchant. Abernethy orders were subject to a small discount, as they were not good for some of the scarce articles, such as salt; his stock of goods in the first years was not large or well-graded and he would sell certain articles only for cash, even though his own notes were presented. The Hudson's Bay Company orders were practically equivalent to cash as they had the largest stock of goods in the country; however, instances are known where the company unscrupulously charged a substantial premium when asked to convert their own store orders into cash. When metallic money became more plentiful in 1848-49, these store orders fell into disfavor as may be seen by quotations for fares on the riverboats between Oregon City and Champoege: one dollar in orders, or fifty cents in cash.

One writer in the old Oregon Native Son magazine states that as late as 1844 the only stores in Oregon were those maintained by George Abernethy and the Hudson Bay Company. S. A. Clarke in "Pioneer Days of Oregon History" indicates that Abernethy was later in partnership with a man named Clark, and issued merchant orders under the name of Abernethy and Clark. Another writer in Bancroft's works also mentions merchant orders on Couch without specifying a date; this must have been subsequent to 1844.

Abernethy soon found that he had need for fractional money necessary to make change in his store. The inconvenience of trading for the full amount of a merchant order, or occasional cash, or the farmer's produce, was annoying both to the merchant as well as the customer. He overcame this difficulty by creating his own makeshift money. There was a fairly large Indian population attracted to the salmon fishing at the Willamette Falls. In their passing time these Indians would make arrow heads and spear heads out of the flint rock. Abernethy gathered from these work piles of flint rock a number of small pieces about the size of a domino, or about half the size of a man's thumb, only thinner. He shaped these pieces of rock to proper size and glued around them short strips of tough paper, onto which he inscribed in ink by longhand the year date, his last name, the word "change," and the denomination or cash amount. These were then used and passed out for change in his store for the sum as indicated thereon.

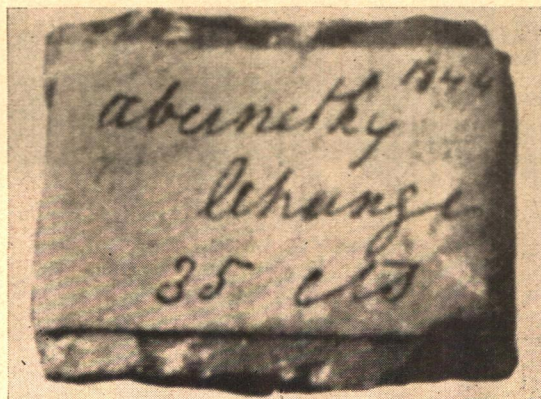

There is no information available as to the amount or volume of these "rocks" issued. It is known that there were different denominations and they are shortly mentioned in various history books. The only known existing specimen is the 35c denomination in the collection of the Oregon Historical Society.

These Abernethy "rocks" and merchant orders were generally accepted on account of his standing in the community. He was the business manager for the Methodist Mission. He was elected to be the first governor of the Provisional Government in 1845, and was re-elected and served thereafter until the United States finally took dominion and sent a Territorial Governor, General Joseph Lane, who arrived in 1849. He was one of the backers of the Oregon Exchange Company, which successfully made gold dust into coin during that critical period when returning miners were being practically robbed by large discounts on gold in the form of dust.

Abernethy must have been successful in his business, as the records show that he had a brick store building in 1848—the only one mentioned! He contributed to the defense against the Indians and entered into public undertakings. During his long residence in Oregon, he followed mercantile pursuits almost steadily. He resided on the Willamette, below Oregon City, until he went to Portland shortly after 1861 where he died in 1877.

This use of flint rocks as tokens for money, as one accumulated several pieces, led to the expression "a pocket full of rocks" when one was worth a bit of money, for a dollar a day was a good wage in those days. Although a colloquial term limited to use among the pioneer Oregonians, it was commonly used as late as the 1890's.

The Abernethy "rock" in the Oregon Historical Society museum was received on May 3, 1943, as a gift from Mr. Robie L. Reid, K. C., a prominent coin collector of Vancouver, British Columbia. It has a clear record. It was positively identified and vouched for in 1899 by pioneers who recalled its actual use in trade; it was photographed at the same time. This "rock" was presented by Governor Abernethy to his friend Hon. S. S. White many years ago; it passed from a descendant of White to a Mr. J. C. McLennon, and then in turn to Mr. Reid, the benefactor. The specimen is a greyish colored flint rock of a rectangular size, approximately 1 inch by three-fourths inch by slightly more than one-quarter inch, and bearing tightly glued thereon the paper and writing as previously described.

These pieces of rock money were used for a number of years. They passed freely from hand to hand and served the purpose of money throughout the Willamette Valley. Writing from Salem (38 miles away) under date of March 18, 1848, Reverend William M. Roberts, Superintendent of the Methodist Mission, refers in his letter to the "chips and whitestones which is the currency of the country."

In a story told of a Yankee sailor, Clement Adams Bradbury, of his adventures in the Oregon Country, it is related that his first work was at a sawmill at Cathlamet Point on the Oregon shore of the lower Columbia River. Although he worked hard felling many trees, he was sorely disappointed when he found out his wages were to be only twenty dollars a month payable in "scrip and grindstones."

AN INEDITED AUSTRIAN TWENTY DUCAT COIN OF 1655.

By HENRY GRUNTHAL, New York City

Through the courtesy of Mr. Paul A. Straub of Summit, New Jersey, I am able to describe the twenty ducat gold piece of Ferdinand III, Holy Roman Emperor, 1637-1657, which is illustrated above. The standard works on the coins of the Holy Roman Empire, namely those of Miller von Aichholz and of Major Josef Cejnek, list only one variety of twenty ducat piece of this ruler, and that was struck at Breslau in Silesia with the date 1645. The description of the newly found coin is as follows:

Obverse. (a) FERDINANDVS:III:D:G:ROM (b):IM:SE:AV:GE:HV:BO:REX. (in this description "(a)" is a star of six points, and "(b)" is a mark consisting of a dot within a triangle within a circle). Within an inner border of dots the laureate and armored bust of Ferdinand to right, beneath the shoulder the date .16.5.5. Outer border of dots.

Reverse. ARC:DVX:AVSTD - - BVR:S:K:C:C:TVR Crowned double eagle holding sword and sceptre, bearing the elaborate Austrian shield surrounded by a jewelled collar with small shield of Austria-Burgundy below. (The collar is that of the Golden Fleece.) Outer border, plain line, inside of dots.

Gold. 43mm. 69gr., 20 ducats; probably unique; formerly in the collection of the late Colonel Green, who owned so many treasures unknown to the numismatic world. Mint, Vienna.

The dies of this coin are already known from pieces of lesser denomination struck from them. These include a ten ducat piece from the same dies, in the sale catalogues of Rainer, Helbing, March 1922, and Schulman, May 1925; a five ducat piece, listed in an old price list issued in 1897 by Fischer of Vienna; double talers in silver (Schulthess, 340); and silver talers, (Madai, 6023). The primary purpose of the dies was presumably to strike talers, and the reason for the issue of the larger denominations is not known exactly, although it was a custom to make very large gold pieces occasionally in the old days for special occasions, and presentation to important persons. The mintmaster at Vienna at the time was Conrad Chaos, Baron von Richthausen. He had been made a baron in 1653, and was finally securely installed as mintmaster in 1655. Perhaps he wished to show his gratitude to his Imperial patron by the production of this outstandingly heavy and magnificent coin.

NOVELTIES RELATING TO COINS

By FARRAN ZERBE, Past President A. N. A., New York City

(A paper recently delivered before the New York Numismatic Club)

Over the years I have found considerable interest in utility, ornamental and other items relating to money and have picked up a few along the way, over one hundred items on display. I have seen many that I desired but, prized by the possessor, I could not obtain them. Many that I have are not here. They have been in storage for several years and not conveniently obtainable.

For many years Europe has produced various items, some beautiful, ornamented with actual coins. To me there is little novelty associated with items of the kind. They can be reasoned and produced to order. It is the curious and unusual that appeals to me. Many novel items have come from the Orient. Mostly made with coin reproductions for sale to tourists and for exhibition purposes. We find them from "swords" made of Chinese cash to massive panels and screens embellished with fine reproductions of obans and other odd shapes of Japan.

Coin novelties relating to our country are limited and scarce on account of our protective laws relating to the reproduction of coin devices. One of the most ambitious products in the class was coin glassware produced for sale at the Columbian Exposition, held in 1893, about every adaptable popular item of the glass family was represented, particularly table ware. Most all are ornamented with our silver coin designs of 1892, the anniversary date and intended year of Exposition. Production and public sale were promptly checked by the Government. It is stated there was confiscation and destruction. Coin glass like other novel coin items is scarce.

The specimen on display is a tumbler with silver dollar device 1879 in the bottom. Most all are with date 1892. This tumbler, the only specimen at hand, is from a collection of over twenty pieces ranging from a tooth pick holder to large cake stand, water pitcher and lamps.

Dimes, quarters, halves and dollars are used, the large pieces having all. Most all are frosted, a few amber. This tumbler shows the dollar in clear glass. The frosted is much more attractive.

Small trays in porcelain of an earlier period have covers picturing fractional currency.

Coin paper weights would be popular if allowable, particularly groups or low piles of gold type coins in base metal gilt. The first I noted was in Buffalo during the Pan American Exposition period, 1901. Buffalo had its dollar saloons. "The Silver Dollar" had coins in the floor and top of the bar. There was evidence of trying to pry them out. Those in the floor were worn smooth.

"The Gold Dollar" had some gold on display and the "paper weights" for entrance and pillar ornaments. Always wanted but never obtained one of these paper weights until years afterwards while in the office of a friend in the Treasury Department I observed a perfect one on his desk. I picked it up and said that was something I had always wanted. "You know I cannot give it to you. It is our business to gather them up. But if it disappeared some time when you had been around I would not ask any questions." At that he left the room. When he returned the item had disappeared. In recent years I showed it to one of our members and told him the story. After he left I looked for it. Have not seen or heard of it since. He must have been influenced by my story, but there was no license associated.

The largest and finest made coin paper weight I have seen was brought to my desk at the Chase National Bank. The gentleman said he was an import agent, showed his sample, made in Germany, just received, and asked my comments. I was surprised when he said he was seeking orders for them. He doubted my statement that sale would not be permitted. I suggested that he call on the Secret Service, tell them what he expected to sell; "don't show it, you may not get it back; I would like you to report back to me." He returned later, thanked me for the check-up. He was disappointed. Any distribution was prohibited. I got a promise regarding his sample which I later purchased for $10. It is about eight inches in diameter, a fine casting showing a pile of all denominations of U. S. gold coins, probably the only one in the country.

I have seen but few fabrics with coin designs. A neck tie here is one.

Some time following the Free Silver—Sound Money campaigns while I was exhibiting in Paterson, New Jersey, a man asked to see a silk dollar. When I said I never heard of one he said I will bring you one. He did—a bit of blue satin with silver thread dollars, natural size. He said his silk concern had at considerable expense prepared to make fabric for campaign neckties. Dollars for the silverites and $20 design in yellow for the advocates of the gold standard. They were checked before quantity production started. I never saw the silk with the gold.

The cigarette case here with fac-simile cover design of 1928 paper money has for its companion a lighter of similar design. They are said to have been made in Japan for sale to tourists.

Spoons with coins, bowl or handle, are of many varieties and well known. Notable among them are those for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, 1904, with gold dollar and companion quarter and half size charms in handle. A novel one has a handle with Japanese bu pieces mounted at angle.

UNITED STATES PAPER CURRENCY

By PAUL E. DRAPER, A. N. A. No. 7826, Detroit, Michigan

(Mr. Draper has been Secretary to Mr. Albert A. Grinnell of Detroit for nearly twenty years, during which time Mr. Grinnell formed what was undoubtedly the largest, finest and most nearly complete collection of United States paper currency in existence, and is a recognized authority on the subject.)

Probably the main stumbling block to the collection of United States paper currency is the idea that it is too expensive. This type of collecting seems to have been relegated to the man of unlimited means. I do not believe that it is lack of interest in paper, judging from the fact that there are so many collectors of broken bank, State, Confederate, Colonial, Continental and other bills without nominal value.

The purpose of this article is to show that the way of paper currency collecting is open to the modest collector, and that he can get great enjoyment from this very interesting field. An article published in the November, 1937, NUMISMATIST, sets forth some of the outstanding features. Bills in themselves are very attractive and require quite a bit of study. The engravings are not only beautiful but meaningful. This is exemplified particularly in the Educational Series of Silver Certificates issued in 1896.

I have just received a letter from a collector who says in part: "Many of these notes are really beautiful when in choice condition, and I find they are far more interesting to non-collectors than most of my choice coins seem to be. I can really understand why Mr. G. went into paper money the way he did and it is surprising how few collectors appreciate this branch of numismatics."

"TYPE," according to the New Century Dictionary, means: model; original design; principal device on either side of coin or medal; general form distinguishing a particular group." Notes of the same denomination, printed from the same general plates, obverse and reverse, regardless of dates, seals or signatures, and on the same paper, would be considered of the same type and would come under the general meaning of the word. The signatures (and dates on the new series), seals and numbers are put on in a separate operation, or operations. There is some evidence to show that seals on some notes may have been put on first.

The following tables give all, I believe, of the notes issued by the Treasury Department in $1.00, $2.00 and $5.00 denominations, broken down in the different varieties. These tables will show how simply a type set can be secured; on the other hand how extensive and pretentious a collection can be by including all of the five classifications. And for those who possess larger means, or have greater ambitions, these can be augmented by the addition of the higher denominations, also by the addition of cut, reconstructed and uncut sheets; notes with low or attractive serial numbers; low plate numbers; freaks and specialties. In the field of National Bank notes alone in the seven different varieties or series there are almost unlimited possibilities. For example, collection by states; cities; charter numbers; special titles of banks or cities such as prominent personages, peculiar names, etc.

The first table shows the type collection. This includes the first note of each denomination of the different types. Mr. Wayte Raymond in the January-February Coin Collector's Journal (q.v.) shows 21 different $1.00 bills, and he has not included National Bank and Federal Reserve Bank notes. However, he has included some dates and seals which, at least according to my interpretation, are varieties.

The next division includes all of the series dates not incorporated in the type set. With the addition of this division the collector would have not only one of each type, but also a note representing each date issued in the different denominations.

I have taken up the matter of seals in the third table, and this affects only the $5.00 denomination. By adding one $5.00 note, your collection would represent not only all of the types and dates, but you would have a specimen of all of the seals issued in each of the three denominations.

The fourth table takes up the signature combinations that are not included in the three previous categories. There are no duplicates up to this point, but there are similarities. For instance, there are three specimens signed by Chittenden and Spinner in the first and second tables. The first and second specimens are distinctly types, and the third a different date.

The fifth table constitutes the balance of the notes not listed in the four former, and includes all other varieties with no duplicates.

The notes shown are the first of issue, or the next in order, in each succeeding table. It is not necessary to follow strictly these tables unless the collector desires to complete his collection. In the first table, the $1.00 and $2.00 1874 Legals, which are the originals of this type, are very scarce. In forming a type collection it would not be necessary to stick to this series. One could secure the $1.00 and $2.00 1878 Legals and have the type at lesser cost. This also would be true of the other divisions.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Knoxville, Tennessee

VII. PORTUGAL

By 1280 modern Portugal had taken shape. The monarchy, after its firm establishment, expanded during the age of discoveries until a world-wide empire was created. The old dynasty died out in 1580, and for sixty years the kings of Spain were kings of Portugal as well. When Portugese independence was reestablished in 1640, John, Duke of Braganza, was chosen king. A hundred and thirty years later his great-great granddaughter Maria (1777-1816) came to the throne. She was married to her uncle, who reigned with her as Pedro III until his death in 1786. Two years later the Queen was declared insane and her son took over as actual ruler.

John VI (1816-1826) became regent in 1799 just as Portugal became involved in the Napoleonic wars. After falling necessarily into the Emperor's orbit, Portugal at length refused to comply with Napoleon's Continental System, was invaded and conquered. Acting upon the advice of the English admiral, Sir Sidney Smith, the prince regent, his family and his court, packed up and under the protection of the British fleet sailed for Brazil in 1807. From here the Prince exercised little influence in European affairs until after the Congress of Vienna. In 1815 Brazil was made an independent empire, and in 1816 upon the death of his long-mad mother, John became king of Portugal as well as emperor of Brazil. It was not until 1821, however, that he returned to Portugal, leaving his elder son Pedro to reign in Brazil. The two countries were disassociated in 1822. The king's death in 1826 brought confusion in its wake.

John had named his daughter Isabel regent for the absent new king Pedro IV, who remained in Brazil. Pedro's brother Miguel and his mother Carlota Joachina had opposed his father's policies and now opposed Pedro's absentee sovereignty. Pedro abdicated the Portugese crown in favor of his seven year old daughter Maria, on condition that she marry his brother Miguel. He also promulgated a liberal charter for Portugal. British intervention prevented a revolution by the conservatives assisted by the dowager queen, Miguel, the Church, and Spain from overthrowing the little queen and the new constitution. Miguel submitted in 1827, became engaged to his niece, and was appointed regent by Pedro. The following year, however, supported by Spain and Austria, he withdrew the constitution and proclaimed himself king. The Liberals fled or were executed, and the queen, age ten, returned to her father in Brazil. A regency for her was set up in the Azores, and resistance to Miguel was organized. The turning point came in 1830, and in 1831 Pedro abdicated the Brazilian throne in favor of his son, Pedro II, and returned to Europe to assist his daughter to regain her Portugese throne. Affairs moved slowly, and it was May of 1834 before the ex-Emperor with allied help overthrew his brother and restored Maria. He lived only until September of that year.

Maria's reign was a tempestuous one—marked by rebellions, exiles, foreign intervention, and repeated changes in the constitution. Upon her death in 1853, she was succeeded by two of her sons, Pedro V (1853-1861) and Luiz (1861-1889).

The largest Portuguese silver coins during the first third of the century were 400 reis pieces. When Maria reformed finances in 1836, the currency was put on a decimal basis. For nine years 1000 reis coins were issued, and then for a fifty year period the largest piece was of 500 reis, smaller than the old 400 reis piece.

The next 1000 reis value appeared in 1898, in the reign of Luiz's son Carlos, to commemorate the fourth centennial of the discovery of India by Vasco da Gama. Carlos and his queen, Marie Amelie, daughter of the Count of Paris, are portrayed on the obverse, and the Cross of the Order of Christ with rosettes on the reverse. A regular issue of 1000 reis with Carlos' head was coined in the single year 1899. A virtual dictatorship under João Franco was established in Portugal from 1906-1908, culminating in the assassination of the king, queen, and crown prince on February 1, 1908.

Carlos' younger son Manoel ruled a boiling nation for two years before a revolution on October 5, 1910 swept away the monarchy. A single issue of large silver appeared in this reign to commemorate the events of the Peninsular War waged against the French by the Portuguese, Spanish, and British under the later Duke of Wellington during 1808-1814. England's participation in these events is symbolized by the lion on the reverse of this piece.

Under the republic the currency was put on the escudo basis, and a one escudo piece dated 1910 but not issued until 1914 appeared to commemorate the birth of the republic. The regular issue with a symbolic head of Liberty appeared first in 1915.

The Portuguese coat of arms, of ancient origin, consists of a red shield charged with a smaller white one. The latter and older has five blue shields arranged in cross form, each with five white roundels arranged in saltire. The shield originated to commemorate the great victory at Ourique in July, 1139, by Alfonso Henriquez, first king of Portugal, over five Moorish Princes, represented in the five shields. The five white roundels in each shield symbolize the five wounds of Christ in whose name the Christian king overcame his infidel enemies. After his marriage with the daughter of Alfonso the Wise, King of Castile, in 1252, Alfonso III added the larger shield with its seven golden castles. The circle of gold on which both shields are sometimes imposed represents the exploits of Prince Henry the Navigator in maritime exploration.

JAPANESE INVASION NOTES FOR NEW GUINEA?

By Flying Officer S. V. HAGLEY, Royal Australian Air Force in the Pacific

The two notes described below are, at present, being found in large quantities throughout New Guinea in areas recently captured from the Japanese. Censorship precludes sending along specimens for illustration so a description will have to suffice.

I naturally value my specimens highly as I collected them on the spot in interesting—very interesting—circumstances.

Printed on good quality paper, in the manner of the gilt edged scrip of the bum-mine promotor, they are attractive and well produced. They differ from the invasion notes which were intended for Australia and presumably were meant for circulation in New Guinea. This theory is supported by the fact that the shilling is the unit of currency among the natives, and the scene suggests the above.

Genuine Australian and American notes are freely accepted by the natives. A few days ago, being short of silver, I asked a native for silver for a £5 note. To my surprise he unconcernedly handed it over and nonchalantly pocketed the note.

It is amusingly anachronistic to see the natives with bags of American and Australian notes while they still wear and value highly their various strings and armlets of Shell money, Dogs' Teeth money, etc.

Description of Notes

1. One Shilling: Color, blue: size $5\frac{5}{8}$ " x $2\frac{3}{4}$ "; THE JAPANESE GOVERNMENT over ONE SHILLING, superimposed on a tropical island scene. Surcharged O. C. in red in top right and left quarters.
2. Half Shilling: Color, purple: size 5" x $2\frac{3}{8}$ "; similar to No. 1, but Japanese characters and the surcharge is O. A. in lieu of O. C.

So many have asked me concerning the coins of New Guinea that I have prepared a list of the varieties available to aid them in the collection of a complete series; the list follows:

PRIVATE GOLD RARITY

To the Editor:

In a large collection of U. S. coins bought from a old established family in California, I found a copy of the very rare 1851 Dunbar $5.00 gold piece. This piece is in very good condition and would be classed fine by some collectors. The words "Dunbar & Co." show on Liberty's headband without the use of a glass. According to Adam's work published in 1909, only three specimens of this piece are known. I am wondering how many of these pieces are in collectors' hands now. I would like to hear from anyone having this coin, so that I may have a better idea as to its rarity, and its condition as compared to those in other collections. Was this piece struck in San Francisco or Sacramento? Some authorities say one, and some the other. How many were struck, who made the dies? I would be pleased to hear from anyone who has accurate information on this piece. Kindly communicate with Edward Fogler, Secretary PCNS, 717 Sutter Street, San Francisco 9, Calif.

THE MEDAL

The medal, faithful to its charge of fame,
Thro' climes and ages bears each form and name:
In one short view subjected to our eye,
Gods, emperors, heroes, sages, beauties, lie.

MORE ABOUT SYCEE

To the Editor:

For the sole purpose of keeping the record clear I would like to present two excerpts from reviews of Sycee Silver (No. 99 Numismatic Notes and Monographs, published by the American Numismatic Society). One, appearing in the June 1943 issue of Numismatic Review, closed with the following statement:

"The author's idea that the smaller sizes of sycee were primarily intended as souvenirs, we cannot accept as probable. True, they bear inscriptions meaning 'long life,' 'blessing,' and 'double happiness,' but Chinese business establishments often bear flowery names, or may use characters of good omen more or less as we do trademarks. Analogies can be found on Siamese porcelain tokens and in chop marks. And it is known that counterfeits of small sycee pieces occur." In a review appearing in the June 1944 NUMISMATIST the critic said in part: "The inclusion of figures 12, 18, 19, 20, 21 and 23, which picture felicitous presentation pieces for weddings or other celebrations cannot be condoned, as they were certainly never made for exchange or monetary purposes."

The basis for both of the above reviews seems to be the following statement at page 12 of the monograph which followed a discussion of the larger sycee:

"Smaller sycee, the most popular of which were those of 1 tael, were not uncommon but a later consideration of the purposes for which the sycee was used will illustrate the limited need for the smaller units, especially during the period when foreign silver coins were available. These pieces were seldom sent to the larger commercial centers, being kept as souvenirs. When they were forwarded, however, they were frequently melted down and made into the larger sycee. They were popular enough to inspire plated counterfeits, of which specimens are preserved."

Now the author accepts some responsibility for a misunderstanding because the above explanation of the use of the small sycee is admittedly none too clear. The evidence available did not justify a more positive declaration. But even then it is difficult to understand how this statement could have been so misunderstood had it been read slowly and carefully.

With respect to the propriety of including the small sycee in the monograph, it should be observed that they remain "sycee silver" regardless of whether they were employed exclusively for money, exclusively for wedding presents, or were used for both purposes. All students of primitive moneys know that many forms of native currency are employed both as money and for social and religious purposes, such as wedding gifts, dowry, burial with the dead, etc. The mere fact that these small sycee were used for wedding presents would not preclude their use as currency. Neither would the fact that they did not bear certifications as to purity and weight preclude their use as currency, as many unstamped slipper-shaped silver pieces were in circulation in China, Siam and Mongolia. They were tested and weighed each time they passed from hand to hand.

GREECE FACES RUIN IN WILD INFLATION

The worst monetary inflation in European history, writes C. L. Sulzberger of The New York Times in its issue of June 18, with the exception of the one that gripped Germany in the 'Twenties is now ruining occupied Greece.

Incredible as it may seem, the Greek drachma today is worth approximately 1/180,000th of its value on the day Benito Mussolini attacked across the Albanian border. The only money that has any value in Greece today—and this included the German reichmark—is the gold sovereign, which at present is quoted at 200,000,000 drachmas each.

By late April the value of the drachma had sunk to 180,000,000 to a gold sovereign, and Adolph Hitler's east European financial expert, Hermann Neubachen, former Mayor of Vienna, went to Athens in a desperate effort to stabilize the inflationary spiral. He closed the stock exchange for three days and succeeded in driving the price down to 105,000,000 drachmas for a sovereign. Within four weeks it has spiraled up to 200,000,000.

Counterfeit Sovereigns Seen

The Germans are believed now to be in the counterfeit gold coin business, as hundreds of false sovereigns have made their appearance.

The following are some current prices in drachmas in Athens: One newspaper, 200,000; one cigarette, 20,000; a pair of men's shoes, 500,000,000; a pair of women's shoes, 150,000,000; a loaf of bread, 2,000,000,000; one egg, 200,000; one oka (about 2¾ pounds) of sugar, 7,000,000; one oka of olive oil, 12,000,000.

Already million drachma notes are in common circulation. When the Greek war started 1,000,000 drachma was worth more than $66,000. Athens shops are refusing to accept 5,000 drachma notes in payment for goods because of the difficulty in counting them.

Gold is used openly by the few lucky people who have it. The vast majority of the population does its shopping either on a barter basis or with housewives carrying suitcases or huge peasant-cloth bags of bills. Recently a man bought an oka of meat and the money he paid for it weighed more than the purchase.

The result of this situation is that in Athens, which suffered a terrible famine during the first year of occupation, most shops are full of goods but few have sufficient funds to buy anything. Grocers are well stocked with rice, sugar, meat, biscuits, marmalade, all kinds of cheeses, ham and bacon. But not even the German occupying forces can raise money for purchases and about all the Nazi soldiers buy ordinarily are raisins at 2,000,000 drachmas an oka. Paradoxically, the German conquerors themselves are hungry now and a common sight is to see private soldiers seeking to beg cigarettes or silently staring in shop windows.

The very poor in Athens are able to scrape along peddling vegetables, bread or cigarettes obtained from black market profiteers whom they are serving, or by comprising their own pooled ration stocks. The black market is an open recognized source of supply, although the profiteers are hated.

Except on the black market all prices are fixed by the Quisling Government but supplies are rationed in quantities insufficient for subsistence. The ration price for a loaf of bread—which is a five-day allotment—is 125,000 drachmas, as compared to fifteen times as much on the black market.

Middle Class Ruined

Greece's middle class and white collar workers have been utterly and completely ruined. White-collar workers' wives and children are joining the ever-increasing hordes of peddlers. Although the terrible famine of 1941-42 is at an end, hundreds of persons in the Athens area are still on the verge of starvation and in the north and west miserable famine is spreading.

Foreign shipments of food, which have undoubtedly saved what is left of Greece, still are coming in. Everyone is eligible to receive his share free; the more prosperous get the same allotment but pay for it.

Devastated in every conceivable way, Greece is now undergoing absolute economic ruin to such a degree that it would seem impossible for the Allies to salvage it after liberation.

INCOMPLETE ADDRESS SLOWS UP DELIVERY

The best argument for the use of the zone number on addresses has been given by the post office. With so many trained clerks in the armed forces, untrained clerks have to sort mail. In order to use these inexperienced clerks, a simplified method of distribution was adopted which is known as the delivery unit plan or the zone system. The zone numbers you place in your addresses take the place of many months of study by a postal clerk. A new man can sort zoned mail with the speed of a veteran but if you fail to add the zone numbers in the addresses, he is helpless. This unzoned mail must be put aside by him and distributed by a trained clerk, when he can get time, and this is bound to cause delay in delivery.

AN UNUSUAL IMMUNIS COLUMBIA CENT

By PHARES O. SIGLER, Fort Belvoir, Va.

The above illustrated 1787 Immunis Columbia cent is struck over a New Jersey cent. The letters NOVA appear under IMMUNIS and the letters CAESA can be seen beneath the word COLUMBIA on the obverse, but the letters S and A are very faint. Likewise, the reverse shows some of the legend of the New Jersey cent, but the letters are not very distinct.

I am indebted to Mr. Damon G. Douglas of Caldwell, New Jersey, for the following technical description of this piece, which he recently examined in his studies of New Jersey cents. "The Nova Caesarea over which it is struck is Maris 26-S, two dies that are both muled into the production of (I believe) the Elizabeth-Town Mint. The letter punches with which both the Immunis and New Jersey dies were sunk are mostly identical. The diameter of the piece (29 mm) is 1 mm larger than the other (N. J.) that I've seen from the 26 and S dies but probably the 1 mm is a swelling from the second striking. The weight (131 grains) is well within the range of the Elizabeth-Town production of that run. The same die letter punches show on a number of AUCTORI VERMON's and a small group of AUCTORI CONNEC's and many of the CAESAREA's. This is the group which Crosby attributes to James F. Atlee, who probably turned out the New Jersey dies before starting production at Machin's Mill."

The colonials are one series in which a careful study of overstrikes and die varieties is apt to reveal important bits of information which are sorely needed to fill out the incomplete record of those interesting relics of our early history.

LIBERTY

What light is to the eyes—what air is to the lungs—what love is to the heart, liberty is to the soul of man. Without liberty, the brain is a dungeon, where the chained thoughts die with their pinions pressed against the hingeless doors.

—R. G. Ingersoll.

TWENTY-NINTH ISSUE—SOCIETY OF MEDALISTS

Richard Recchia, Sculptor

The artist, Richard Recchia, gives the following interpretation of the design:

The idea is portrayed in the figure of aspiring youth, standing on a pinnacle high above his fellow men, and straining his every muscle towards the stars which symbolize the future and the intense longing of his soul to reach the summits. The background of mountains and water represents the earth, and the rolling clouds and light rays are aspirational symbols. The quotation, "Too low they build who build beneath the stars," is from "Night Thoughts," by Edward Young.

The other side of the medal is the bust which shows the man's mind stretching upwards, to and beyond the flight of the wings of imagination and passing time and depicting man's dreams seeking higher realms of inspiration. The inscription is from "Ars Vitrix," by Henry Austin Dobson.

Richard Recchia was born in Quincy, Massachusetts. He studied at the Boston Art Museum School and was sent abroad by Daniel Chester French and Bela Pratt for further study in Paris and Italy. Afterwards he was assistant to Bela Pratt for nine years.

At the museum school he was twice awarded the Kimball Prize. In 1915 he received a medal at the Panama Pacific Exposition and in 1931, a gold medal and cross of honor at the International Exposition at Bologna, Italy. In 1939 he won the Lindsay Morris Memorial Prize of the National Sculpture Society. Mr. Recchia was recently awarded the Elizabeth Watrous Gold Medal in the 118th Annual Exhibition of the National Academy of Design.

His work is on the facade of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, and in the Speed Memorial Museum, Louisville, Kentucky, the Museum of Arts and Sciences, Buffalo, N. Y., the Red Cross Museum, Washington, D. C., the Red Cross Memorial, Nashua, N. H., Brookgreen Gardens, South Carolina, Davenport School, Malden, Mass., Boston State House, the Governor Guild Memorial Gate, Boston Common, Public Library, Somerville, Mass., in Harvard, Brown and Purdue Universities and the Square of Northeaston, Mass. His General Stark equestrian, in quarter size, is to be placed in the art museum at Bennington, Vermont.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Editor. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

MIDSUMMER REFLECTIONS

It seems reasonable to believe that there would be a greater diversity in collecting interests if collectors themselves had a wider knowledge of the coinage of other countries, plus a familiarity in even a limited degree with the history back of the coins, the various rulers whose portraits are carried on the obverse, the heraldry usually gracing the reverse, the significance of the inscriptions, and other related angles.

All this is logical and familiar; but we are so often prone to overlook the obvious, regardless of its importance, and it is therefore well now and then to remind ourselves that we are neglecting some things that deserve better treatment at our hands.

A striking illustration of this is found in the series which has been running for some months in this magazine under the title of Nineteenth Century Crown Size Coins of Europe, by John S. Davenport of the University of Tennessee.

The historical sketches of the various countries treated are models of brevity coupled with a skillful presentation of important facts directly connected with the coins illustrated and described. He is concise without sacrificing essentials, and the crowns of the several countries he has chosen to discuss become luminous with the story he tells.

In this issue appears the eighth installment of the series, and these are to continue for several more months. We have had many commendatory letters, and it would appear that a number of collectors have already determined to explore this (to them) new avenue of numismatics.

In this series we have tangible evidence of certain characteristics that—fortunately—are possessed by many serious numismatists: the urge to study their coins thoroughly, the ability to assemble their findings, and the willingness to share them generously with their fellow collectors. We are continually and deeply in the debt of many such, and our hobby would be vastly poorer without the contributions that have been and, let us hope, will continue to be made in the years to come.

In connection with the preceding paragraph one is reminded of the recommendation of Past President Ferguson in his address at last year's convention, to the effect that the A. N. A. annually award gold and silver (or silver and bronze) medals to the two members "whose contribution or contributions to THE NUMISMATIST are considered to have been of the greatest merit during the Association's year." What progress has been made in this ambitious plan will no doubt be reported at the coming convention by the committee appointed by President Kortjohn. It should prove a coveted recognition, one which should inspire the best efforts of a considerable number of our members. That we have many who possess the knowledge and the ability to prepare acceptable papers there can be no doubt. The fact of the award would, in itself, be a deep satisfaction to the recipient; and the medal, if "of outstanding artistic merit," would in its own right become a cherished possession.

The restrictions imposed by war time conditions might postpone the actual striking of the medal; but, as recommended by Mr. Ferguson, the award could be announced if and when decision had been reached, and the medal presented when conditions permitted.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

UNITED STATES COPPER CENTS—1816-1857. By Howard R. Newcomb. New York, 1944. Numismatic Review.

This publication by the Numismatic Review (Stack's) is of outstanding value to all collectors who find even a slight interest in the series of coins noted in the title.

The author, a resident of Los Angeles, is well known to a large section of our membership. He joined the Association in 1893, his number being 91. He writes that his greatest numismatic interest has always been in our large copper cents. In his study of these he found many varieties not previously listed, and, desiring to share his knowledge with other collectors, he published a new work in 1925, dealing with the cents of 1801-2-3.

The present volume is the result of many years of study, and the following tribute paid him in the preface by the eminent collector and authority, George H. Clapp, is assuredly deserved:

Collectors of the United States cents of the years 1816 to 1857 are to be congratulated on receiving Howard R. Newcomb's revision of the 1883 work of Frank D. Andrews. . . . For years collectors have been handicapped by the lack of an authoritative work on these years, and new discoveries were put in their collections as "Not in Andrews;" now Mr. Newcomb has gathered together all these "unknowns," described and added to them so that the present list of varieties is nearly double that of Andrews. . . . All honor to Mr. Newcomb for a great piece of work which has been entirely a "labor of love."

About 600 distinct die varieties are listed, with minute descriptions and well drawn illustrations. To these are added eleven excellent photographic plates.

The Coin Collector's Journal (Raymond) for May and June. The first of a series of articles of major importance appears in this issue under the title of "The Coins of Colonial America." The name of the author is familiar to Numismatist readers: Phares O. Sigler, Lt. Col. J. A. G. D., Ft. Belvoir, Virginia. These instalments are later to be published in book form, and we have no doubt it will be appraised as a reference work of exceptional quality. Wayte Raymond, Inc., is to be congratulated for acquiring this extended study of our Colonial coinage.

ANNUAL CONVENTION AMERICAN NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION

SILVER ANNIVERSARY CHICAGO COIN CLUB

There are few honors that can come to an executive during his lifetime that he will cherish more deeply than that of the presidency of the American Numismatic Association. Holding office entails considerable time and energy, but not without its rewards, chief among which is the close contact that he makes with a large and splendid group of unselfish men.

We extend to Martin F. Kortjohn, President of the Association, and to his staff of officers, assurance of our respect for their talents, vigor and integrity, and take this opportunity to express our gratitude to all members for their excellent cooperation.

No one person can be given credit for the high esteem the American Numismatic Association has won among the hundred organizations affiliated with the parent Association, but without the vision and energy of a man like Mr. J. Henri Ripstra, his understanding of organization problems and his steadfastness of purpose, such an achievement would not have been possible.

Our glorious Association, with its splendid record during the past fifty-three years, is most inspiring.

We, the Chicago Coin Club, extend to the officers, committees and staff of the American Numismatic Association our genuine heartfelt thanks, and to all members of numismatic organizations and their guests, a most cordial welcome to the annual convention and to our 25th anniversary celebration at the La Salle Hotel in Chicago, August 26, 27 and 28, 1944.

IMPORTANT: A hundred exhibit cases, the property of the Association, have been brought to Chicago at considerable expense, and, with the many new cases of the Chicago Club, are at the disposal of the exhibitors. All members are most earnestly requested to bring their numerous coin and currency exhibits, and we assure them ample protection. Our silver medals are most beautiful.

The Saturday morning session at 9:30 is to be held in the Illinois Room (on the mezzanine) opposite the American Room, where a wealth of coin exhibits will be on view for three days.

The Sunday and Monday morning sessions are to be held in the Lincoln Room on the twentieth floor.

The BANQUET to be held at 6:30 Saturday evening in the gorgeous Century Room, 19th floor—opposite the ballroom—at which time there will be a musical treat, and twenty-five prizes will be awarded.

Prizes donated by: James P. Randall; Ben's Stamp & Coin Co.; A. E. Bebee Stamp and Coin Co.; Lee Ronning; Frank C. Wilson; M. A. Powills; C. Lou Snyder; Whitman Publishing Co. of Racine, Wis.; F. K. Saab, and Richard Yeoman.

NEW AND RECENT ISSUES

On the opposite page are illustrated a number of recent foreign issues, and thanks are due President Kortjohn of New York, for his courtesies in sending in the coins numbered 1 to 3; to Ernest Kraus of Brooklyn for numbers 4 to 7; and to Bernard O'Hea of Norfolk, Virginia for numbers 8 to 12.

1. Egypt. 5 milliemes. Copper-nickel. 1938.
2. France (Petain). 1 franc. Aluminum. 1942.

11. Bolivia. 20 centavos. Aluminum. 1942.
12. Bolivia. 50 centavos. Bronze. 1942.

Mr. O'Hea states that in Cairo the gold sovereign is now traded at 400 piastres (\$16.68) as a valuable article for hoarding purposes; this is equal to slightly over \$70 an ounce for gold. In Bombay the sovereign is quoted at 50 rupees, or \$66 an ounce. In India, the $\frac{1}{2}$, 1 and 2 annas, formerly copper-nickel, are now made of aluminum-bronze. In Iraq the 4 and 10 fils (12 sided) 1943, are of bronze, replacing the same coin of nickel.

DEATHS

GEORGE H. KORNS

George H. Korn, A. N. A. 7501, and a member of the Western Maryland Coin Club, died at his home in Cumberland, Md., on June 23, at the age of 56, after an illness of one week. He was a veteran of World War I, serving as a petty officer 3/c on a torpedo boat. A collector for over thirty years, his numismatic interests were confined to coins of the United States.

SAMUEL W. BROWN

Samuel W. Brown, 64, of North Tonawanda, N. Y., died on June 17, after a year's illness. A native of Pennsylvania, he had resided in North Tonawanda for many years, taking an active part in civic affairs, serving as Mayor for several terms, and for ten years was a member of the Board of Education. Before leaving his native state he was employed for a time as storekeeper in the Mint at Philadelphia, and after locating in New York state he at one time was appointed a member of the Assay Commission. His former membership in the A. N. A. was acquired many years ago, his number being 808.

$25,000 PURCHASE OF GOVERNMENT BONDS AUTHORIZED

In response to the numerous requests that the American Numismatic Association invest a part of its funds in United States Government Bonds, the Executive Board has unanimously approved the purchase of such bonds in the amount of $25,000. The particular series decided upon is the 2½% 1965-1970 issue. Their purchase was decided upon not only as a patriotic measure but also as a good business proposition, inasmuch as they will yield interest at a 2½% rate as compared with the 1½% rate now paid by most of our savings banks. The treasurer was instructed to consummate the transaction during the Fifth War Loan Drive but after July 1st in order that we should not lose the semi-annual interest payable by the savings banks on that date.

MARTIN F. KORTJOHN, President.

U. S. MINT PRODUCES MANY FOREIGN COINS

The United States Mint is turning out Australian money to ease the strain on Australian mint facilities caused by the influx of American troops.

Leland Howard, assistant director of the Mint, said that while the three United States Mints produced a record coinage of more than 2,000,000,000 American coins last year, they also minted 173,023,000 foreign coins.

United States Mints for many years have made coins for countries which do not have mints or which have mints too small to take care of their needs. These countries include most of the Central and South American countries except Brazil and Argentina.

Among other places for which the United States Mint is making coins are Surinam and Curacao, in the Dutch West Indies, and Saudi Arabia.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

ATLANTA COIN CLUB—The 306th meeting of the Club was held July 5th in the "A" room of the Henry Grady Hotel.

President Paul S. Johnson presented a "Ten Years Ago Today" program, principally from Club reports in The Numismatist—issues of 1934—citing a number of very interesting items, including some of the advertisements and comparing their prices with those of today.

Past President George M. Todd had as the most interesting display a Napoleon Gilt split proof set, probably the only one in the South.

There were 21 members and two visitors present.

—PIERCE H. JAMES, SR., Secretary.

BALTIMORE COIN CLUB—President Philip G. Straus presiding at the 212th meeting, with 69 members and guests present. This being a special meeting no business was transacted, which gave the members and guests ample time to see the large exhibit of rare coins and notes.

Mr. John A. Johnston, assistant cashier of the Baltimore Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, introduced the speaker for the evening—Mr. Leland Howard, assistant director of the United States Mint.

Mr. Howard's subject was "The Production of Coin." He described the many economic problems that must be considered in planning of the amount of coin to be struck for a given year. Among the problems are the requirements of vending machines and material that would properly operate them, state sales taxes, the demand for minor coin in business, and the availability of proper metals.

Then after the economic problems have been considered, the actual manufacture of the coin takes place. As the Mint prepares its own alloys, the component metals must be mixed in proper proportions; the ingots are then made, and these are rolled until they are of the proper thickness for stamping. However, the sheets are annealed whenever it becomes necessary. The planchets are then cut from these strips, and are cleaned. After this the edges are either raised or reeded, as required by the type of coin to be made. Following this operation is the actual striking of the coin, later automatically weighed and inspected.

The speaker closed his talk by explaining how overstrikes could occur, because at one time the mint used wooden trays to hold unfinished coin, and it was possible for these to become lodged in cracks and later get mixed with ones from another year. Other oddities can occur from worn or dirty dies.

Following the talk, Mr. Howard opened a group discussion where the audience was free to ask questions or discuss matters concerning coinage.

—ALFRED HUTTER, Secretary.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—Twenty-six members and guests were in attendance at the 196th meeting held July 12, 1944, the meeting being denominated as Numismatic Question Night.

Attractive membership cards bearing the names of all members in good standing have now been distributed, each card in folded form constituting a compact directory of the club.

Among the questions discussed at the meeting were those relating to the gold coins used in Africa by the armed forces, and whether collectors will be able to procure some of these pieces. What will become of the various war currencies after the war? Will the European countries return to their former money systems when peace comes? The legal rights of collectors and the public generally to possess, sell and export gold was also a subject for general discussion, and a variety of opinions were expressed. Vice-President Wallace Todd gave an interesting and too short dissertation on the coinage of Hawaii and the little boy who caught the Hawaiian king's gold fish, based on a recent article in the Reader's Digest.

The question as to who is a bona fide collector will be discussed at the August meeting by way of a debate on the subject, "Resolved, that a person possessing one or more coins, is a collector." The affirmative will be taken by Mr. Harris, Mr. Gasser, Mr. Hanchett and Mr. Block; the negative by Mr. Miller, Mr. Mogi and others. Mrs. Block, Mrs. Hawley and Miss Kleinpell were appointed judges for the debate.

—EARLE K. STANTON, Secretary.

The committee decided that five names would be drawn at each meeting from the list of members who desire to exhibit and who would display at the next meeting. It was also announced that the exhibit committee would be the sole judges to determine the three best exhibits and award the prizes.

—C. GLENN CURTIS, Secretary.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 85th regular meeting was held Monday evening, July 10, 1944, in Benson Hotel, Portland, with 25 members and five guests present; President Baranovich in the chair.

George McLarty: 2 frames of Fractional Currency.

Stanley Seaboldt: Proof coins.

Henry Perry: Unc. and proof half dollars. Unc. and proof dollars. Unc. English crowns. Gobrecht dollars.

—HUGH A. DAVENPORT, Secretary.

PITTSBURGH COIN CLUB—On June 22nd the members were the guests of the Secretary at his home, 722 Cascade Road, Forest Hills, Pittsburgh.

No meetings will be held during July or August; activities will be resumed the third Wednesday in September.

Dr. J. F. Hepting and W. W. Reynolds will represent the Pittsburgh Coin Club at the A. N. A. Convention, to be held in Chicago.

T. B. Williams had on display a set of Cuban coins and a Wendell Willkie medal.

R. W. Bearinger: Australian coins, a penny, florin, shilling, three pence and sixpence.

A. S. Dodson: Paper dollar 1923, one dollar Clearing House check of Scranton, 5 Shillings of Bermuda, $5.00 State Bank of Virginia, $5.00 State Bank of South Carolina, and 50 centavos, paper, of Mexico.

F. W. Keeley: Commemorative half dollars.

A. Sallach: The Queen Victoria Jubilee set of coins, and some Luxemburg coins.

J. E. Cunningham displayed a complete set of stamps and coins from the over-run countries of Europe; also a nice set of the different varieties of United States coins.

—J. EDGAR CUNNINGHAM,

Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—The 109th regular meeting was held on Thursday evening, July 13th, at 8 p. m. in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, with 30 members and guests in attendance. President Richard T. Hooper presided.

Ira Reed, the curator, reported that Julius Windner's display of various types of ducats at 37 S. 18th St., Phila. was admired by all who saw them, and that this display aroused considerable interest in this coin. During the next month English silver coins will be on exhibition by Willard P. Snyder.

Roscoe F. Ballard presented the following resolutions to be adhered to at each meeting. These proposals were accepted by those in attendance.

1. That during the business meeting the entertainment, and the auction members refrain from private trading and discussions.

2. Any private trading should be done before the meeting, after the auction, or off the floor.

3. All auction lots are to be displayed before the meeting starts.

4. A full description of all lots as to date and condition is to be indicated, and prices based on the Standard Catalogue.

5. A minimum charge of five cents per item is to be levied on lots not sold at the auction.

6. The owner of any lot should have the privilege of auctioning his own items if he so desires.

The exhibits for the evening were as follows:

Richard T. Hooper: Various types of Colonial notes.

James J. McDevitt: A beautiful specimen of the St. Gaudens type twenty dollar gold piece.

William A. Schick, Jr.: Two examples of two different lots of one dollar silver certificates marked by the government "R" and "S" to determine the durability and certain technical aspects of our paper currency.

Edward B. Haden presented the subject "Over-Dated and Re-Engraved Coins" in a most interesting manner. He reviewed Dr. Royal E. LaGrange's article on "Over-Dated Large Cents" and referred to Stewart's book, "First United States Mint," published in 1924. He concluded that "over-dates" could be classified under one head rather than two; namely that of correcting poor engraving or die sinking, as it happens to be. The errors evident are not samples of poor engraving, but rather those of the man who put the letters in the die, then corrected as best he could these mistakes before the die had its final heat treatment or hardening process. The so-called 'over-dates' and 're-engraved' coins are not what they appear to be or what their names imply. They are the result of faulty workmanship, corrected to the best degree available at the time of the manufacture of the die in question."

William A. Schick, Jr. conducted a special auction and the regular one; the two consisting of well over 150 items.

—ARTHUR SIPE, Secretary.

RICHMOND COIN CLUB—The fortieth regular meeting of the Club was held at 8 P. M. on Wednesday, July 12, 1944 at the Byrd Park Club House with the President, Mr. Lewis, in the chair. There were five members and two guests present.

The displays were as follows:

Mr. Levi: Air Medal, Purple Heart, Silver Star and Merit of the Legion of Honor, all in mint condition. Mr. Levi explained the significance of each piece, and made a very interesting talk on the subject of the difference in medals and medallions.

Mr. Lewis: Large bills of all types and many varieties. Small bills and invasion bills of $1, $2, $5 and $10; Fractional currency, silver dollars, silver medals, half cents and 2 cent pieces, all of which he used to illustrate his talk on the subject "Legislation Affecting our Metallic Money—1873 to date." This talk will have to be continued at the next meeting as it had to be shortened due to the extreme heat and humidity. Much interest has been shown in this series.

—MRS. HELEN G. LEWIS, Secretary.

WESTERN RESERVE NUMISMATIC CLUB—The 280th regular meeting of the Club was held at the Carter Hotel, Wednesday, July 12th, with 25 members and guests present.

President Bell called the meeting to order at 8:30 P. M. and routine business and correspondence was disposed of.

The following exhibits were made and briefly described:

E. G. Bell: Collection of about 80 United States silver dollars in uncirculated and proof condition.

W. M. Jacka: Eight large cents, 1794 to 1853.

William Jansa: 21 English tokens, dated 1790 to 1798.

Harley L. Freeman: Six cut and counterstamped coins of Martinique, Tobago, Dominica and Guadeloupe, Wood Nos. 9-81-89-90.

Fred Hahlen: Complete set of five cent pieces, 1866 to 1912 inclusive.

A. P. Spencer: 30 coins of Republican and Imperial Rome, illustrating Rome in legend and history from its foundation in B. C. 1000 to the time of Trajan.

—HARLEY L. FREEMAN, Secretary.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular meeting was held at the Hotel Washington on July 3, with twenty-one members present. The meeting was called to order by President Atwood. A letter was received from Mr. Hans M. F. Schulman of New York City, advising the Secretary that he felt honored to be invited to be a guest of the Society at the October meeting, and would advise at a later date the subject of his address.

The members had the pleasure of greeting Corporal Herbert Price, Jr., of the Marine Corps, who was home on furlough after two years in the South Pacific. Corporal Price had a fine exhibit of primitive money used by the natives and made from coral. It was in the shape of rings cut from coral formation. The largest was about four inches in diameter and about $\frac{3}{4}$ inch in thickness. This size ring represented the value of five pounds British money. Corporal Price procured this piece from one of the natives for two packs of cigarettes. He had other rings of smaller size representing in value four pounds, etc. Corporal Price also showed two fish hooks made in the form of a spoon hook. The spoon part was made from Mother of Pearl obtained from shells and the hook was fashioned from a piece of Tortoise shell and fastened to the spoon by means of thongs. It was about four inches in length. He also showed a string of small discs fashioned from shell and coral similar in size to our own Indian Wampum used as a necklace, all of which is used as money.

Mr. Weikert read of different hoards from newspaper clippings from his scrapbook.

Col. Newton, Mr. Charles McCormick and Mr. Zug told of the hoard of gold coin found by two boys in a Baltimore cellar.

—FREDERIC E. HODGE, Secretary.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB—The regular monthly meeting of the Club was held on June 21, at the Central Y. M. C. A. with eleven members present, and President Arthur G. Fuller presiding.

Mr. Charles Morris gave a talk on the silver dollar, illustrated by a copy of the July, 1892 issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, which contained an article on Anna Williams, who was the model for the Goddess of Liberty. It also gave a description of the types of dollars since their start in 1794. This talk was well received by the club.

It was moved that a committee be appointed to draw up a resolution to be submitted to the American Numismatic Association that they give more worth while prizes and advertisement for National Coin Week exhibits. It is not to be taken from this that the prizes donated by outsiders are unacceptable or lacking in quality, but that the Association itself should allot more money for this cause.

—F. BRUCE FABLE, Secretary.

This is only one of the several very satisfactory transactions I have had with you in the past and it is very gratifying to do business with a concern that is so prompt in paying and so fair in its offer. I feel that I would probably not have gotten as much elsewhere and as I have been a collector and dealer for many years I know the stamp market thoroughly. COMMEMORATIVE
HALF DOLLARS WANTED

Am now paying the highest prices in years for uncirculated Commemorative Half Dollars. What have you to sell me? I can use complete or incomplete sets, small or large quantities, one to one hundred or more of a kind. Send me a list today of what you have, for my offer by return mail.

Also, I want to buy nice collections of other U. S. coins, such as Cents, Nickels, Quarters, Half Dollars, Silver Dollars, most everything from Half Cents to Gold, preferably in uncirculated or proof.

It pays to get my offer before selling, and if you really plan to sell, then we most likely will do business.

Palestinian numismatics,

"Jewish Symbols on Ancient Jewish Coins"

By

Paul Romanoff, Ph.D.

Late Curator, Museum of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America

With a foreword by Dr. Abraham A. Newman,
President, Dropsie College

This important work deals with the study of Jewish symbols as found on the coins of the Jews as the Jews themselves interpreted them; it covers the entire period of their coinage, from Simon Maccabaeus, 139 B. C., to Bar Kochba, 135 A. D.

The manuscript, which was Dr. Romanoff's last contribution to numismatics, from the results of his years of archeological and biblical research work, was examined by four specialists in the field, and contains their annotations and comments.

They are the late Edward T. Newell, President, American Numismatic Society; Professor William F. Albright, John Hopkins University; Professor Louis Ginzberg, Jewish Theological Seminary of America; and Professor Erwin R. Goodenough, Yale University.

This is a strictly limited edition, and the book contains 100 pages of text, with seven plates. Price $3.50.

Copies may be ordered NOW from the distributors, and checks made payable to

DIMES

How long would it take you to collect 138 dimes?

A collector spent considerable time and money to acquire this set consisting of 2 Bust Dimes, 15 Liberty Dimes, 58 Morgan Dimes, 63 Mercury Dimes, a total of 138 coins.

The oldest coin is dated 1832 and the latest 1944-P. About half will rate good to very good, fifty about fine, twenty or more are uncirculated. Some hard to get dates are included in this set.

1855, 1856-O, 1864-S, 1872, 1916-S Morgan and the scarce 1916-D Mercury dime. Only 27 coins are missing to complete the Morgan and Mercury types.

Not a bad start if you want a dime collection and not a bad lot to commence with by any means

The S. P. A. and A. P. S., our two leading national stamp societies will hold their annual convention and exhibits on the above date, I will have a booth at each for buying and selling stamps and coins. I'll have very few coins for sale as my local store absorbs them all. Maybe you can sell me something? I shall be happy to meet old friends and new and have you visit a wonderful stamp exhibition. (Local business makes it impossible for me to stay for the A. N. A.) Last month's prices still good.

FIFTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

THE EMERGENCY COINAGE OF THE CALIFORNIA GOLD RUSH

By R. S. YEOMAN, Racine, Wisconsin

(A paper submitted at the Chicago Convention, August 26-28, 1944.)

The California Gold Rush was one of the most bizarre mass migrations in history. As a setting for this colorful episode in American pioneer history we have an isolated frontier territory ill-prepared to accommodate a suddenly increased human society. Within a few short months following the gold discovery California became the focal point of treasure seekers from all over the world.

In other times great movements of peoples have been brought about by a desire to escape oppression of one kind or another. The Forty-niners, however, simply turned their backs on quiet comfortable lives, peaceful farms, successful businesses, professions and the like, to try their luck at gaining a quick and easy fortune.

Mother Nature was generous with her treasure, for she gave up over 215 millions of dollars of the precious metal during the five years following the discovery. Contrast this with the 24 millions produced in the entire United States during the preceding fifty-five years. Individuals in a short while amassed considerable fortunes in gold dust and nuggets, but soon came to realize that the necessities of life had to be obtained at sky-high prices. A day's work, it was found, brought little more than life's necessities, and likely as not a convenient bartender or gambler took the remainder. The bright yellow metal soon lost its value, and its glamour as well. The futility of the venture caused many to invest their hard-won surpluses in passage home.

Among the early arrivals at the gold fields were those skilled in the arts of trade and finance such as provisioners, bankers, assayers, and the inevitable band of speculators and gamblers. In the final analysis the business, professional and financial men came out on top in the struggle for economic supremacy. Many of them remained for the rest of their lives and became prominent in the building of the West.

At first the wild inflationary conditions which beset the pioneers were caused principally by a shortage of necessities—food, clothing, shelter, and the tools of labor. By mid-summer of 1849 hundreds of boatloads of merchandise were streaming through the Golden Gate, and the crisis had nearly passed when a new obstacle confronted the tradespeople. A bottleneck had developed at the Customs House, and consignments were piling up pending payment of import duties. The reason was soon apparent, for the Law of August 6, 1846, had been brought to bear, and all the monetary difficulties which ensued were directly or indirectly attributable to this Act of Congress. It was perhaps the greatest single factor in bringing about the California private gold issues.

This piece of legislation, known in its day as the Sub-treasury Act, was the legal authority by which the customs collector at the port of San Francisco was prevented from accepting gold dust in payment of import duties.

Ignorance of its provisions even by those in authority added greatly to the confusion and embarrassment of the tradespeople, and the citizens whom they served.

Section 18 of the Act of August 6, 1846, reads in part:

“All duties, taxes, sales of public lands, debts, and sums of money accruing or becoming due to the United States, and also all sums due for postages or otherwise, to the general post-office department, shall be paid in gold or silver coin only.”

Certain foreign gold and silver coins were acceptable under this act, for in 1834 the following were made legal tender in the United States: full weight gold coins of Great Britain, France, Spain, Portugal, Brazil, Colombia and Mexico; and full weight silver dollars (not smaller coins) of Spain, Mexico, Peru, Chile, Central America, Bolivia, and the five-franc pieces of France. All these coins were receivable at legal rates of exchange.

Certainly there was no intention on the part of Congress to discriminate in advance against the gold-seekers, for the conditions brought about by James W. Marshall's exciting gold discovery on January 24, 1848, could not have been anticipated. It is unfortunate for the pioneers, however, that our government consistently ignored the petitions of the San Francisco businessmen for relief. No serious attempt was ever made to enact special, prompt legislation which might have led the Californians out of their economic difficulties.

Prescribed coin was carefully hoarded by business houses to provide payment for imports and customs duties, and the common citizen was in turn deprived of a convenient medium of exchange. Under these extreme conditions emergency money became an urgent necessity, early in 1849.

Typical pioneer inventive genius, in this case prompted by the necessity for overcoming a legal obstacle, provides us with a most interesting chapter in the history of our nation's coinage. Numismatists have gained a rich legacy in the form of the well-known California private territorial and state authorized gold pieces. Although few of us are able to procure more than one or two specimens from the series, all may share their history.

It is an interesting fact that Marshall's discovery was made while California was still Mexican territory. News travelled so slowly that at the time the treaty of peace was signed concluding the Mexican War and making California a part of the United States, neither government had yet learned of the gold discovery at Sutter's Mill eight days before. Because of the slowness of transportation which also meant slow communication, no great numbers of gold seekers arrived before 1849.

The gold hunt was still a local affair at the time the following news item appeared in the San Francisco newspaper Alta California May 29, 1848:

"The whole country from San Francisco to Los Angeles and from the seashore to the base of the Sierra Nevadas, resounds with the cry of gold! gold! gold!—While the field is left half planted, the house half built, and everything neglected but the manufacture of shovels and pick axes, and the means of transportation to the spot where one man obtained $128.00 worth of the real stuff in one day's washing, and the average for all concerned is $20.00 per diem."

The Alta editor must have outdone himself on this bit of reporting for the issue which carried the above item was the last to appear for several months. The printers at least must have fallen victims to the gold fever. Such was the power of the American press even in that remote time and place.

As early as July 27, 1848, a group of prominent San Francisco citizens had proposed that private assayers issue gold pieces "wrought into convenient shapes" as a substitute for prescribed coin, to meet customs obligations. At the time, Military Governor Mason promptly acceded to the urgent request, but by August 8th he had become aware of the prohibitions and requirements of the Act of August 6th, 1846. Of course he immediately rescinded the order.

During the summer of 1848 Governor Mason was constantly petitioned for relief. In desperation resulting from a full realization of the emergency, he instructed the collector to receive gold dust in payment for duty at sixteen dollars an ounce. This order was withdrawn in a short while for he had learned that the Treasury Department was an inflexible authority which did not approve of the audacious meddling of any minor territorial officer in its sacred fiscal matters.

Undaunted, the persistent Governor then permitted the merchants to deposit their gold at the custom house on the basis of $10 an ounce, redeemable in 60 days for gold or silver coins. This proved to be only a temporary expedient which, delaying for a time the inevitable day of reckoning, nevertheless provided the means for release of much needed supplies from the customs warehouse. Because coin of the realm was by now being held by speculators or brokers most of the importers were unable to redeem their gold which was worth sixteen dollars an ounce and for which they had received credit for only ten dollars an ounce. They were compelled to witness auctioning of their gold at from six to eight dollars an ounce to the speculators. San Francisco businessmen soon requested the governor to extend the redemption period to six months, in the hope that some unforeseen but hoped for circumstance would provide them with legal money. The harrassed soldier governor compromised by allowing gold to remain on deposit for ninety days.

By September, 1848, monetary affairs were in such a confused state that a public meeting was called by Dr. T. M. Leavenworth, J. D. Hoppe and other influential citizens. As a result of this gathering which included miners and tradespeople from all over the state, the value of gold dust was placed by agreement at sixteen dollars an ounce. The value of gold at the Philadelphia mint was eighteen dollars, but the difference was chargeable to transportation and insurance.

Edgar H. Adams is authority for the statement that Colonel R. B. Mason, Military Governor of California sent in 25 to 30 ounces of gold to Secretary of War Marcy, who sent it to the mint at Philadelphia and requested that a quantity of the metal be used in making of quarter eagles to bear a distinguishing mark as the Director of the Mint might think proper.

The Merchants and Bankers Almanac for 1852 mentions that the first deposit of California gold dust at the United States Mint was received December 8, 1848, and was probably the consignment forwarded by Governor Mason. Some of the $2.50 gold pieces of 1848, minted at Philadelphia were counterstamped CAL. to identify the origin of the gold they contained.

Gold dust might well have been accepted for full value at the San Francisco Customs Office and delivered directly to the mint within the department, as a simple clerical operation. If the honorable W. M. Meredith, at that time Secretary of the Treasury, had been so disposed he might have employed his influence to bring about a special executive order, even a Congressional amendment to the law of August 6, 1846, to move thousands of ounces of native gold through available channels under his control. He had no legal authority to take such action, however, and apparently no attempt to change the law was ever made. The handling of huge shipments of gold instead was managed by private operators who, in many cases, exacted a shameful penalty from the miners and merchants for the exchange. Instances are on record of miners accepting as little as five dollars for their gold from speculators, who later received eighteen dollars an ounce at the Philadelphia mint.

This devaluation of gold dust brought about the fantastic inflationary conditions which are too well known to be recounted here. Hundreds of vessels, heavily laden with treasure seekers and much needed supplies arrived each month. The withholding of gold and silver coins from local trade channels for customs obligations, placed the necessities of life on a catch-as-catch-can basis. Edgar H. Adams in his famous work on the Private Gold Coinage of California makes reference to the coins of all denominations and nationalities which found their way into circulation during that trying period. "... all kinds of minor silver coins were accepted," he writes, "and an immense flood of Spanish pasetas, French francs and Austrian zwanzigers soon found its way into circulation; none of these had an intrinsic value of even twenty cents but as nothing could be purchased for less than 'two bits' or twenty-five cents, all silver approximating the size of an American Quarter passed for that amount, and because of these peculiar conditions coin speculators reaped a rich harvest."

In a book entitled "New Varieties of Gold and Silver Coins," published in 1851 and written by Jacob R. Eckfeldt and William E. Du Bois, assayers of the Mint of the United States, we find a fairly detailed report concerning the early California private gold issues. Among the specimens received were those struck by the following coiners: N. G. N.

(not identified but discovered in 1902 to have been produced by Norris, Greig and Norris), Miners' Bank, Moffatt & Co., J. S. Ormsby, Templeton Reid (both the ten and twenty-five dollar denominations, and probably the only specimen known of the latter), Cincinnati Mining and Trading Co., The Pacific Company, Massachusetts and California Co., Baldwin & Co., Dubosq and Co., Shultz and Co., Dunbar and Co., and the United States Assay Office, whose fifty dollar piece was prepared and issued by Messrs. Moffatt & Co. as contractors, "and bears the stamp of Augustus Humbert, assayer."

The various private and territorial issues were thus for the first time officially reported as to their fineness and intrinsic value. Most of these issues were worth less than the value stamped upon them. The coins of

MOFFATT & CO.

$16.00 INGOT

Moffatt & Co. were generally of true value, the others somewhat irregular as to fineness such as the Dubosq issues which showed a five-dollar piece as being worth $4.92, but a mixed parcel counting $1,000 gave the fineness 887 (standard being 900) and the close value of $1,000.20. Generally the coins were made in imitation of United States gold pieces, but in certain cases there was no attempt at pretense in this respect. The J. S. Ormsby issues for example were characterized by the large initials J. S. O. as the main device.

J. S. ORMSBY—$5.00

The ingots, which are oblong in shape, of Moffatt & Co. and F. D. Kohler, Assayer of the State of California, represent two series of interest, for they served as currency in much the same manner as the coins heretofore mentioned. The Moffatt and Company ingots were put out in various sizes and were worth from nine to 260 dollars. Eckfeldt and Du Bois found some rated too high and others too low. Those stamped under state authority by F. D. Kohler in values ranging from

F. D. KOHLER, STATE ASSAYER—$45.34 INGOT

$36.55 to $150 were worth on the average one to one and one-half per cent more than the value stamped upon them. There were private coiners other than those mentioned by Eckfeldt and Du Bois. Their coins were circulated during the latter part of the emergency period and included such firms as Wass Mollitor and Kellogg & Co., whose issues commenced in 1852 and 1854 respectively, after the mint assayers had published their above mentioned report.

KELLOGG & CO. $20.00. 1854

WASS MOLLITOR. $20.00. 1855

Financial California, published in 1916, refers to the private issues in the chapter on the Banking Record of the Early Days, by Le Roy Armstrong, as follows:

"Other intercessions at Washington developed anew the evidence that history repeats itself. As the Governor first permitted them to pay duties in gold dust and then withdrew the permit, so the Secretary of the Treasury first authorized the acceptance of privately minted gold coins, and immediately revoked that order. But in the interim between his concession and its recall a great deal of helpful activity had been recorded. The coins were marked with their weight and fineness, and as a rule were worth their face in any money of the world. There were exceptions in the case of some assayers and coiners who were not above making a profit by withholding quantity, but the rule was that the new coinage, without authorization from Washington, and even ignoring its prohibitions, possessed all the value that it claimed, and the names of Moffat and Company, Wass Mollitor and Company, August Humbert, and Baldwin and Company are assured forever of the credit due to men whose services were helpful to the community in which they lived."

Most California private gold coins, authorities have determined, were worth 3 to 10% less than the value stamped upon them. In one instance, the $5 Massachusetts and California, the coin was worth about 15% less than its stamped value.

Mr. Armstrong goes on to say, "The question naturally arises: What authority had the assayers in California to issue their coin? They had none. It is probable that their issue was a technical violation of the criminal law of the nation. And yet the thing was so urgent and the services of the unauthorized coin so valuable, that no process was ever invoked against the coiners."

U. S. ASSAY OFFICE OF GOLD. $50.00. 1852

The Secretary of the Treasury, as is the custom of those holding that office, annually presents a report to Congress. The 1849 report, as might be expected, carried reference to the gold excitement in the following manner:

REPORT
THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY
ON

The state of the finances.

December 24, 1849

Treasury Department
December 3, 1849

I transmit for the information of Congress an exhibit showing the business and coinage of the mint at Philadelphia, from the first of January to 1st November, 1849.

* * * * *

The mineral resources of our recently acquired possessions in California have opened an extensive field for the development of American enterprise. Some thousands of our countrymen, in the pursuit of profitable labor and advantageous commerce, have found their way thither; and already vast regions, heretofore unpeopled and unexplored, are contributing to the metallic wealth of the world. Constituting as they now do, a portion of our territory, it is due our fellow citizens who inhabit them, that their industry and enterprise should be cherished by wholesome laws. First in importance, as respects its commercial and financial bearing, the establishment of a branch mint of the United States at San Francisco is recommended . . .

Respectfully submitted,

W. M. Meredith,
Secretary of the Treasury.

It is evident that the electrifying excitement of the gold rush is not reflected in the foregoing report to Congress. The phrase "metallic wealth" seems, in this instance, to constitute a profound degree of inadequacy. The document contains no fiery compelling language calculated to stir the members of Congress to a frenzy about voting urgent assistance to "our fellow citizens" as a just reward for their "industry and enterprise." In any case the fact remains that through oversight, or by his allegiance to official decorum, or deliberate evasion he most certainly omitted mention of the word "gold" in his report. The restraint expressed in this report is in great contrast to the wild talk and feverish excitement which was sweeping the world at the time.

In the same document we find a report by R. M. Patterson, Director of the United States Mint, which was addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, portions of which are quoted below:

MINT OF THE UNITED STATES
Philadelphia, Nov. 8, 1849

Sir: I have sent to the Register of the Treasury estimates of the appropriations which will be required by the mint and branch mints for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1851. I now have the honor of sending you copies of these estimates with the following remarks in regard to them.

The California gold, brought to the Mint in the present year has increased our expenses, not only by its large amount (exceeding $3,200,000 in value) but by the character of the gold itself which contains combined with it a large portion of silver, which must be separated from it. This is done by a chemical process, requiring for operation upon so large a scale, a great and expensive increase in the laboratory, and the employment of additional workmen.

In consequence . . . the funds available . . . fall short of the expenses, so that . . . there will be a deficit which must be supplied by an extra appropriation . . .

It may be added that the large proportion of California gold now deposited at the mint, in the amount of which no decrease is to be anticipated has at least doubled the work in the assay department.

Very respectfully, your faithful servant

R. M. Patterson, Director.

Hon. Wm. M. Meredith,
Secretary of the Treasury.

For an appropriate conclusion to this discussion of California private gold coins we turn again to the Banking Record of the Early Days, by Le Roy Armstrong, wherein he writes, "For more than three years the unprecedented growth in commerce at San Francisco was maintained largely by the use of money which lacked the national authority. It was not until July 3, 1852, that the following law received the President's approval:

'Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled that a branch mint of the United States be established in California to be located by the Secretary of the Treasury, for the coinage of gold and silver . . .'

"It would have been impossible for business men in California to make any progress at all if they had waited for the enactment of this law. By the time permission was granted, there was a sufficient volume of clandestine money in circulation. And no harm was done, because the unauthorized coins were rapidly retired, and the genuine issues of the government mint took their place."

A SENSIBLE PROVISION

A householder wishing to pay a small bill by mail may soon be able to do so by using a new safe and inexpensive method proposed by the postoffice department.

Early action by the senate postoffice committee is expected on a house approved bill providing a postal-note system for transmitting small amounts of money by mail. The bill would permit post-masters to issue such notes in fixed denominations of 10 cents, 50 cents, $1 and in multiples of 50 cents up to and including $10. Odd cents would be included in the form of adhesive postal-note stamps. These would cost 5 cents each.

Under the new revenue act, fees for regular postal money orders up to $10 range from 10 to 19 cents. Orders may be purchased for amounts up to $100, but since 70 percent of the business is for sums of $10 or less, the new low-cost service would represent considerable saving to citizens. It would relieve the postoffice department of considerable bookkeeping.

The postoffice department hopes, too, that the new system will discourage people from sending coin, currency and postage stamps in the mails.

The notes would be valid for two calendar months from the date of issue, and could not be endorsed to another person. If their cost should exceed expectations, the Postmaster General would boost the fee to 6 cents, or, if feasible, lower it to 3 cents.

—San Jose Mercury Herald.

BOOK REVIEW

COUNTERFEITING. By Laurence Dwight Smith. New York: W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. 1944. 254 pp. $3.50.

This book is unique—a strong statement to make in these modern days of enormous and never ceasing publishing output. Nevertheless it is true. In its scope of subject matter, its detailed treatment of unfamiliar but important facts connected with our currency, some of it secured from sources heretofore denied the general public; and, above all, the official cooperation given the author by the Treasury Department, the Secret Service, the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, and the Bureau of the Mint—all combine to make it a noteworthy publication.

Its secondary title is Crime Against the People, and in order that the public may largely defeat the counterfeiter—"the meanest of all cheats, and a vicious criminal"—by the one sure means of knowing its money and exercising an alert watchfulness, the author exposes the methods and products of the one, and takes the reader on a personally conducted tour, so to speak, of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and of the Mint. The excursion is not merely one of entertainment and surpassing novelty; it includes a carefully compiled and clearly stated account of the technique of the various operations that produce our paper currency and metallic coinage. The Bureau of Printing and Engraving actually assembled certain steel engravings in one page size plate and printed it under exactly the same process used in printing notes. On the page opposite this is a photoengraving of the Bureau plate produced under the usual methods employed by counterfeiters; the contrasts are then carefully analyzed.

Collectors of ancient coins are well aware that counterfeiting is by no means wholly a modern crime; as a matter of fact, this discovery has been both enlightening and expensive in numerous instances. But our own plague of false money began back in Colonial times, persisted and grew worse during the Revolution, but attained its zenith during the 'fifties and 'sixties, reaching an appalling height. Early in the 'seventies, however, the Secret Service (established in 1865) began to function against the devastating inroads of the counterfeiters, and while the crime is far from being stamped out, the Service has made a marvelous record in its unrelenting fight. The number of convictions in cases that have been brought to trial has been consistently over 90 per cent, even in some years exceeding 98 per cent.

In his brief review of the history of the Mint, Mr. Smith gives a resumé of the coinage from the beginning. His approximate values of the old dollars prior to 1804 are, by present market prices, conservative, to say the least. His estimate of $125 to $350 for a "fine" 1794 could be increased by 50 percent and the demand would still exceed the supply.

This book deserves to be in the library of every numismatist, regardless of the size of his collection; indeed, the wider the distribution it may attain among the general public, the greater its usefulness, for it deals with a matter that is fundamentally the public's business. As to the collector, its greatest interest will naturally be found in the intimate details of the actual production of notes and coins, and in this respect also it is a reference work of exceptional merit.

MONEY OF THE REPUBLIC OF TEXAS

By A. O. THOMAS, Amarillo, Texas

On March 2, 1836, Texas declared its independence from Mexico and organized the Republic of Texas. After a short but bloody military campaign, culminating in the battle of San Jacinto, where on April 21 the Texans under Sam Houston routed the Mexican army commanded by General Santa Anna, independence became an established fact.

The currency of Mexican Texas consisted of gold and silver. Money was scarce in Texas only when compared to most newly settled countries. The large amount of gold and silver produced in Mexico and its prolific coinage by both Spain and Mexico resulted in these coins not only dominating as a medium of exchange in Texas, but also in the southwestern part of the United States. Neither the governments of Mexico nor of the United States issued paper money until many years later.

The most common coin was the "hammered dollars," valued at about ninety cents gold. These coins were old Spanish silver dollars from which the Royal effigy had been defaced by the Mexicans as an expression of hatred toward the old Spanish rulers whose profiles the coins bore. Spanish metallic coins had first been introduced into Mexico in 1520, and the first mint established at Mexico City in 1535. These were supplemented by native coinage after Mexico separated from Spain.

After the founding of the Republic of Texas, the Spanish and Mexican money gradually retired from circulation. This was at a time when metallic money was also disappearing from circulation in the United States because of a national financial depression. Private banks had flooded the country with "wildcat notes," based on their own credit which was often poor. These notes, particularly those from Mississippi, were brought into Texas in large numbers, but were difficult to use because of varying value. Many that passed in general circulation were counterfeit. No one could be sure of the value of the money he obtained. A contribution toward the conduct of the struggle for independence was received by the Provisional Government of Texas in the form of a branch post-note of the United States Bank for $1000.00. No one could be found to change the note until the committee on finance guaranteed it to be genuine by passing the following resolution on December 16, 1835:

"The Treasurer be authorized to pass said note to Mr. Thomas Gay or any other person, in exchange for cash or smaller notes; and that if the said note for one thousand dollars should prove to be spurious the Treasurer should be bound to refund the amount to Thomas Gay or whoever shall have changed the same, with interest at the rate of ten per cent from the time he may be out of the use of his money."

Fortunately, the note was good.

The Texas Revolution was financed largely from contributions, drafts on the Treasury payable at some future date, the issuance of land certificates entitling the holder to so many acres of land from the public domain, and loans secured by pledging public lands.

Land script cannot be overlooked as a medium of exchange in Texas, for land alone was plentiful. Soldiers in the army and officers of the government were often paid by issuing a certificate entitling the holder to a certain amount of land. On March 14, 1836, the Provisional Government offered to men who would enlist in the army for the duration of the war, 1280 acres of land; for six months enlistments, 640 acres; and for three months enlistments, 320 acres. The Congress later passed an act granting 640 acres of land to all men who had participated in the battle of San Jacinto or who were at the siege of Bexar. The certificates issued gave the bearer the right to choose his land from the public domain. These certificates or script were transferable and quickly became a medium of exchange at about fifty cents per acre. Many of the large ranches of Texas are the result of speculation in these land certificates. This script, too, was often counterfeited.

Sam Houston was the first elected President of the Republic and succeeded the Provisional President David B. Burnett on October 22, 1836.

Against the advice of Henry Smith, first Secretary of the Treasury, congress passed an act on June 9, 1837, to issue promissory notes of the government for $500,000.00 making them receivable for all public dues. These notes were to bear interest at the rate of ten per cent.

The notes were to be signed by the President, but on October 23 congress passed a joint resolution "authorizing William G. Cooke to sign the name of the president to the promissory notes of the government, due to the disabled situation of his Excellency's right arm from a former wound, aggravated by his present illness." Thus, although the name of Sam Houston is signed to these notes, they do not bear his autograph.

These notes were issued from about November 1, 1837. The first notes were printed, not engraved. Later the plates for engraving were secured and all notes were of the new design after January 15, 1838.

Although the original act provided "that no note should be issued of a less denomination than one dollar or a greater amount than one thousand dollars," and notes for one, two, and three dollars had been issued, congress passed an act on December 14, 1837, authorizing the issuance of "change notes in the denominations of one, two, and three dollars." At the same time an additional $150,000.00 of the treasury notes were authorized. The change notes, when issued, were of a different design from the regular notes and did not bear interest.

As these notes found their way back into the treasury through the payment of public dues, congress on May 18, 1838, authorized the President to re-issue them until all appropriations had been satisfied, and if necessary to issue additional notes not to exceed $1,000,000.00.

Mirabeau B. Lamar succeeded Houston as President of Texas on December 10, 1838. His administration was one of expansion and extravagance. On January 19, 1839, an act was passed providing "that no promissory notes hereafter issued or paid out should bear interest." And so a new non-interest bearing note, commonly called the "Red Back" began to roll off the presses in the spring of 1839.

By this time the money of other countries was apparently circulating in Texas and a standard of exchange was needed, for on January 15, 1839, congress decreed "that the standard value of silver and gold coins shall be, and is hereby declared to be the same as in the United States of America, and the standard by which silver and gold coin is established by the government of the United States is hereby adopted for the government of this Republic."

At the close of Lamar's term in December, 1841, over four and a half million dollars in treasury notes had been issued. Their value had dropped to about fifteen cents to the dollar; and a disillusioned people returned Sam Houston to the Presidency. The printing of these notes was stopped.

A summary of the treasury notes issued by Texas is as follows:

1st emission (Printed) 11-4-37 to 1-15-38	$ 514,510.00
2nd emission (Engraved) 1-15-38 to 11-3-38	436,289.00
2nd emission (Engraved) 11-3-38 to 1-1-39	214,340.00
3rd emission (Red Backs) 1-1-39 to 9-30-39	1,569,010.00
3rd emission (Red Backs) 9-30-39 to 9-30-40	1,983,790.00
Total	$4,717,790.00

The above figures do not include re-issued notes, some of which bear a later date.

The probable circulation of these notes:

September 30, 1838	$ 684,069.00
November 30, 1838	812,454.00
September 30, 1839	2,013,762.00
September 30, 1840	3,287,962.00
September 30, 1841	4,381,004.00
January 1, 1850	664,593.00
November 12, 1851	296,353.00

Many people invested this Texas currency in the interest bearing bonds of the Republic. According to an audit report dated December 27, 1849, $2,220,393.00 of these notes had been disposed of as follows:

Redeemed at the Treasury and cancelled	$772,439.00
Invested in 10% bonds of 1840	777,080.00
Invested in 8% bonds of 1840	22,800.00
Received in collection of revenue	483,074.00
Due from collectors	165,000.00

This left $2,497,546.00 outstanding.

The issuing of all this paper money without the backing of ample revenues could result only in its depreciation. For several months the first notes remained at par, but by the end of 1838 were worth from sixty-five to eighty-five cents. By the end of the Lamar administration in December, 1841, their value was only fifteen to twenty cents on the dollar.

It should be remembered that although these notes were made receivable for public dues, they were never lawfully made legal tender, and no man was forced to accept them in payment of private debt. If government officials received them in payment of their salaries, they were well aware of the fact when accepting public office.

Upon entering his second administration, Houston stopped the issuance of treasury notes, and destroyed those that came into the hands of the treasury. An act of congress dated January 18, 1842, made treasury notes no longer acceptable for duties and taxes, which caused them to drop in value to two cents on the dollar.

On January 19, 1842, congress authorized the issuing of "Exchequer Bills" and made them and gold and silver only receivable for duties and taxes. Houston never allowed more than $50,000.00 of these to get into circulation at one time, and on February 5, 1844, congress limited their circulation to $20,000.00.

The following Exchequer Bills were issued :

Number	Denomination	Amount
300	$100.00	$30,000.00
499	50.00	24,950.00
899	20.00	17,980.00
2698	10.00	26,980.00
7196	5.00	35,980.00
1000	3.00	3,000.00
1000	2.00	2,000.00
2000	1.00	2,000.00
3800	.75	2,850.00
3800	.50	1,900.00
7600	.25	1,900.00
7600	.12 ½	950.00

For a time these maintained a par value but finally dropped to about thirty-five cents. Congress repealed the law authorizing these bills on February 5, 1845, and forbade the Secretary of the Treasury from issuing "any notes, bills, or other description of paper representing money." Thus ended the paper money issuing debacle of the Republic.

According to the auditor's report dated December 4, 1843, the following disposition had been made of the Exchequer Bills:

Destroyed	$64,685.00
In Treasury	17,600.00
In Receiving Offices	54,816.71

This left in circulation $13,208.29, most of which probably found its way back into the hands of the Treasurer at later dates as they were accepted at face value by the government.

In February, 1846, the Republic of Texas was annexed to the United States by treaty, and became the State of Texas. Under this treaty the State retained the public lands and assumed the debts of the Republic. Shortly afterwards Texas released its claim to certain lands now a part of New Mexico, Colorado, and Wyoming to the United States, and received in return ten million dollars in cash and United States bonds. From this fund the State agreed to retire all of the indebtedness of the former Republic.

Now the claims against the Republic exceeded the ten million dollars received from the United States. These claims consisted of treasury notes, bonds, unpaid drafts, and unpaid bills. These claims were much greater than the real value the Republic had received because of the depreciated condition of her securities when they were issued. There was a general feeling that they should be paid off somewhat on the basis of the value received. This sentiment was expressed in the following excerpt from Governor Bell's message to the legislature in 1851:

"The Republic of Texas having executed her bonds and other evidences of debt in an exceedingly dark and gloomy period of her history, it became necessary to issue them for nominal amounts bearing no sort of proportion to the amount actually received, and to pledge her resources, arising mainly at that time from her revenues, for their redemption. These securities, generally speaking, were concentrated at very low rates in the hands of moneyed speculators, who had contributed nothing to the achievement of her independence, or to the relief of her actual necessities in the administration of the government at the time they were issued."

The legislature therefore ordered the state auditor and comptroller to determine as nearly as possible the actual value received for each class of debt. And on March 20, 1848, it passed a bill requiring all claims against the Republic to be filed with the auditor by the second Monday in November, 1849. This time was later extended to the first Monday in September, 1851. And on February 11, 1850, an act was passed providing that all claims not filed with the auditor should cease to bear interest after July 1, 1850.

The report of the auditor and comptroller to the fourth legislature dated November 12, 1851, recommending the scale for the redemption of the public debt had the following to say in regard to the treasury notes:

"The first issue of this character of indebtedness is known as the printed interest notes. They were put in circulation during the fall and winter of 1837, for a temporary purpose, and until the engraved notes could be procured; as soon as they were received, the further issue and reissue of the former ceased. This occurred before any perceptible depreciation had taken place, and it was the usage of the department to cancel them as they were received. Hence the government, for this class of liability, received full consideration and we have so rated it.

"To the engraved interest notes we have assigned an average value of fifty cents on the dollar. These notes were issued under the provisions of the same act that the printed bills were, and took their place. About the time of the first issue of these notes (spring of 1838) this species of government paper commenced depreciating in value, so that, when the act of 19th of January 1839, prohibiting their further issue went into operation they were worth about forty cents on the dollar.

"To the treasury notes not bearing interest, generally known as "Red Backs," we have assigned an average value of twenty-five cents on the dollar. These notes superseded the engraved interest notes above referred to, and the first issue of them was made during the spring of 1839, when they were worth about thirty-seven and a half cents on the dollar. They continued depreciating, so that in 1841 the government was compelled to pay them out at from twelve to fifteen cents on the dollar. The value which we have given them is conceived to be equitable, as an average, both to the government and the holders. It is impossible to ascertain from the date of the issue of these bills as shown on the face what they were worth when last paid out. For instance a bill issued in 1839, at say thirty-seven and a half cents on the dollar, and after having been returned to the treasury in the collection of revenue, may have been re-issued the year following at twenty-five cents on the dollar, and so on, and in 1841 when it may have been last paid out at one-eighth of its ostensible value."

The legislature adopted the report and ordered that the debt be retired in accordance with this recommendation and appropriated the necessary money. Claims for treasury notes included in the appropriation were as follows:

Class	Amount	Scale	Appropriation
10 % Notes (Printed)	$ 41,630.00	100 %	$ 41,630.00
10 % Notes (Engraved)	331,371.00	50 %	165,685.50
Red Backs	1,828,192.00	25 %	457,068.00

This left about $296,000.00 of these notes outstanding. As they were filed for redemption during the next ten or fifteen years the legislature continued to appropriate the money necessary to retire them. The last such appropriation was made about 1865 and it is assumed that most of them have been cancelled. At present there are no funds ear-marked for this purpose and the uncanceled notes are perhaps worthless except for their historical or numismatic value.

The Republic of Texas issued no coins or metallic money.

At His Majesty's mint in Bombay, British India, the following coins were struck in new designs and metals:

IRAQ: 4 and 10 fils (No. 4) dated 1943 in new bronze showing the head of the boy king Faisal II, facing right. The scalloped planchets are the same size respectively as the previous nickel and bronze coins of the same denominations of the issue of 1938 for King Ghazi.

CEYLON: The new 25 and 50 cent coins (Nos. 3 and 6) dated 1943 are struck in nickel brass, security edged and slightly larger than the respective silver coins of the same denominations. The obverse has the head of the ruler; the reverse is changed, eliminating the traditional palmtree. The last silver coin of 50 cents, dated 1942 (No. 5), still has the same design as the ones that were issued during the reign of Queen Victoria.

INDIA: The one pice coin dated 1944 has larger lettering and a completely changed crown in comparison to the 1943 issue, illustrated in the September, 1943, issue of The Numismatist.

Also struck at Bombay were: for East Africa, 1, 5, and 10 cents in bronze; Saudi Arabia, silver riyal; Egypt, bronze 1, 2, 5, and 10 milliemes; Travancore State, Q alloy $\frac{1}{2}$ and $\frac{1}{4}$ rupee. All $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{2}$, and 1 rupee coins struck at Bombay for British India after 1941 are security edged, and struck in what the Mintmaster in Bombay calls Q alloy (silver alloy).

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

The Essay-Proof Journal (Quarterly) Vol. I, Nos. 1, 2, 3: Jan., Apr., July, 1944. Official journal of the Essay-Proof Society; Clarence W. Brazier, Editor, 415 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

This new publication, approximately 7" x 10", 64 pp., is well edited, typographically attractive, and liberally illustrated with excellent plates. If the high quality of these first three issues is maintained the journal will earn a distinctive place in our philatelic literature. While it is mainly concerned with essays and proofs of postal issues, both U. S. and foreign, space is apparently to be devoted also to subjects of much interest to collectors of paper money.

In the January issue appears an article on (and by) Butler Packard, designer and engraver of postage stamps and bank notes, whose artistic career was long and productive. The April number contains an important paper (continued) on James Smillie, a pioneer among the line engravers on steel, and whose work on early bank notes and in pictorial reproduction is reminiscent of the superb artistry of our greatest wood engraver, Timothy Cole. The July issue contains a second instalment, and at least one more is promised; "Stamps and Paper Money" is the subject of an interesting illustrated sketch by Julian Blanchard, Ph.D., and this is likewise to be continued in the October number.

Since the engraving of stamps and of paper money is so closely related in certain respects, it is to be hoped the Essay-Proof Journal will find it desirable to explore the field of the latter at frequent intervals.

FINAL NEWS OF EDWARD J. HENLE

Word comes from the Postal Inspector at Los Angeles that the trial of Edward J. Henle, accused of using the mails to defraud, was recently held in the U. S. Court before a jury. After (presumably) considering the evidence for a few hours, said jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

It is interesting to note that Henle pled guilty when arraigned following his arrest, but when he appeared for sentence on April 10, 1944, his attorney requested permission to change the plea to one of not guilty.

SOCIAL SECURITY VS. INDIVIDUALISM

When God made the oyster, he guaranteed him absolute economic and social security. He built the oyster a house, a shell to protect him from his enemies. When hungry, the oyster simply opens his shell and the food rushes in.

But when God made the eagle, he said, "The blue sky is the limit. Go build your own house." And the eagle went out and built his house on the highest mountain crag, where storms threaten him every day. For food he flies through miles of rain and snow and wind.

The eagle, and not the oyster, is the emblem of America.—The Kalends.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Editor. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

SHOULD WE ADOPT A CODE OF ETHICS?

To what extent, if any, the adoption of a Code of Ethics by the Association may have been proposed or discussed in the past, we do not know. We have never heard the subject mentioned, and this apparent lack of attention over a quite considerable period of years might seem to indicate an apparent lack of necessity for a formal declaration of ethical principles—these principles to control, or at least influence the numismatic relationships between collectors and dealers, between both groups and the uninformed public, and among collectors themselves.

We are fully aware that a serious proposal of such standards would encounter a wide variety of reactions. They would probably run from a cynical disapproval, on the one hand, through various gradations of opinion to a sincere acceptance, in principle, at the other extreme.

It might be argued that complete observance of the Golden Rule would solve all difficulties; and this is obviously true. But one is reminded of the reported answer of President Coolidge who, when asked specifically about his minister's sermon on sin, tersely summed up the discussion by saying, "He was against it." So, perhaps we need a sort of break-down of a general principle, just as a break-down of the totals of a financial statement is necessary to a clear understanding of its import.

We have no definite suggestion as to the construction of a Code of Ethics; if one were to be adopted it should be the product of "a multitude of counsel," for therein lies wisdom. It should be a blueprint of fundamentals; clear cut, brief, vigorous in expression, devoid of generalities; fair alike to all interests affected, and, on the whole, a declaration by which any collector or dealer should be willing to be judged. Further, IF such a Code were formally to be adopted, is there any good reason why it should not be incorporated in our application for membership?

Section 3 of our Federal Charter comprehensively states the objects of the Association; and while the Charter became effective in 1912, twenty-one years after the A. N. A. was organized, it carried but a re-statement of the objects which, in principle, had been recognized from the beginning. Far from being inconsistent with this Section, it would seem that a properly conceived Code of Ethics might even lend a measure of strength to the whole structure.

We have no pride of opinion in this matter, but we do know that many other organizations have seen fit to adopt certain well defined standards, and while their observance has inevitably fallen short of perfection, they have been adhered to in some degree at least; and who shall say that they have had no beneficial influence?

We submit the idea as one deserving thoughtful consideration, and will be glad to have the frank expressions of those who are interested enough to state their opinions—either in approval or otherwise.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Knoxville, Tennessee

VIII. ITALY

A. Northern Italy. (1800-1814)

With the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713 began a shuffling of the Italian states which was to continue almost uninterruptedly until the final union of all Italy was achieved. The House of Savoy had acquired Piedmont and now added Montferrat, Alessandria, and Sicily; the latter, however, they were obliged to exchange in 1720 for Sardinia, of which they became kings while maintaining the seat of government at Turin in Piedmont. Austria controlled the duchies of Milan and Mantua, and the principalities of Naples and Sardinia (then Sicily after the exchange). The Farnese line of dukes was dying out in Parma, and the Medicis in Tuscany. The oligarchy of Venice was undergoing a severe case of inner rot which was bringing that republic to an inglorious end. Genoa, nominally a republic, was involved in a struggle between republican forces and the noble rulers.

The Treaty of Vienna after the War of the Polish Succession, and the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle after the War of the Austrian Succession, continued the reshuffle. The new Bourbon king of Spain, Philip V, through his wife secured the succession to the Parmese duchy for his son Charles, who was later transferred to the south and set up as King of Naples and Sicily. Francis of Lorraine, husband of Maria Theresa and later Holy Roman Emperor, then got Parma and Tuscany in exchange for renouncing Lorraine. After the Austrian defeat in 1748 Parma, Piacenza, and Guastella were erected into a duchy for Philip, son of Philip V of Spain and brother of the King of Naples and Sicily. Austria remained in control of Milan and Tuscany. The latter passed to Leopold upon his father's death in 1765, and when Leopold became Holy Roman Emperor in 1790, Tuscany went to his son Ferdinand. Modena, ruled by the House of Este, fell first under French protection and later in the century under Austrian. And after 1755, when Genoa was obliged to cede Corsica to France, she found herself continually subject to French pressure.

Such in general was the picture when the French Revolution occurred, and such it remained until Napoleon invaded Italy to fight the Austrians in 1796. The changes which Napoleon inaugurated as he swept through the northern provinces were confirmed and extended by the Treaty of Campo Formio in October, 1797. To compensate her for losses elsewhere, Austria was given the practically defunct Venetian state, which she took over early in 1798. A block of republics was set up by the French. Milan, which had earlier been erected into the Lombard Republic, was transformed into the Cisalpine Republic (156), Genoa into the Ligurian (154). Modena, Bologna, and Ferrara were joined to make the Cispadane Republic. Rome became the Roman or Tiberine Republic, still nominally under the control of the Pope. In 1798 Naples adopted the name Parthenopaeian Republic. In Piedmont Charles Emanuel IV was left on his throne until December of 1798, when he was forced to abdicate. He fled to Florence and then to Sardinia, where he continued to rule during the Napoleonic era. His continental possessions became the Subalpine Republic (153).

Napoleon's absence in Egypt and the internal convulsions in France undid most of the labors in Italy, until early in 1800 all the republics had been overthrown and the French remained dominant only in Genoa. Napoleon returned, crossed into Piedmont in May of 1800, and on June 14 won the important battle of Marengo. Northern Italy was again in French hands, and some of the republics were reconstituted. The following year Tuscany and Naples were invaded. The Peace of Lunéville in February 1801 settled affairs again for a time. Tuscany became the Kingdom of Etruria under the Duke of Parma. Piedmont (Subalpine Gaule) was annexed to the Empire. The Ligurian Republic (Genoa) which had been a directorate was given a Senate and a Doge and called a republic, only to be incorporated finally into the Empire in 1805. Parma remained a duchy until the same year when it too with Piacenza was absorbed into France. The oligarchy of Lucca maintained a semblance of independence also until 1805, when it was turned into a principality for Napoleon's sister Elisa.

B. Milan

Although Francis II, Holy Roman Emperor and Duke of Milan, was driven from his dukedom and the Cisalpine Republic set up in 1797, the French republic continued to issue coins with his head. The crocione, the largest of the silver pieces, was last coined in 1800 (155). In the same month as Marengo, June, 1800, Napoleon issued a scudo (156) in the name of the Cisalpine Republic to commemorate his victory. Symbolic figures of France and Italy were used for the obverse design.

After a succession of governmental revisions, there was finally produced on January 25, 1802, the Italian Republic with Napoleon as president and a Milanese, Count Melzi, as vice president. Two different 5 lire pieces (157, 158) were issued by this government before Napoleon decreed another and final change. The republic was transformed in March of 1805 into the Kingdom of Italy. In the great cathedral at Milan Napoleon was crowned king with the iron crown of Lombardy, and his step-son Eugene Beauharnais moved in as viceroy to govern in his step-father's enforced absences. The kingdom was aggrandized by the addition of Venice and its dependencies, Istria and Dalmatia, in 1806 taken back from Austria, by the Marches divorced from the Papal States in 1808, and by the Italian Tyrol in 1810. Eugene proved a popular and wise ruler, but the kingdom was restive under the persistent drain of men and money. Five lire pieces with Napoleon's head were coined in the mints of Milan, Bologna, and Venice from 1806 to 1814 (159).

C. The French Empire in Italy

By successive stages, while he was creating a separate kingdom in northeast and eastern Italy, Napoleon was adding to the French Empire proper various states in northwest and western Italy. Piedmont and its dependencies became a military province and a part of the Empire in April of 1801. The following year it was made a civil province. The Ligurian Republic, later the Republic of Genoa, changed its role from a willing and docile ally by a request for annexation on June 4, 1805.

In September of the same year Parma and Piacenza were annexed. The Kingdom of Etruria set up in 1801 with Florence as its capital, after a series of misfortunes, was reconstituted as the Grand Duchy of Tuscany, given to Napoleon's sister Elisa, and became virtually a part of the Empire. The long struggle between Napoleon and Pope Pius VII resulted first in the dismemberment of the Papal States, when in 1808 the March of Ancona and the duchies of Urbino, Mercerato, and Camerino became a part of the Kingdom of Italy, and finally in 1809 with the annexation of the remaining territory associated with Rome, and the virtual imprisonment of the Pope. For twelve years from 1803 to 1814 the mints at Turin, Genoa, and Rome turned out the regular 5 franc coins with Napoleon's head, distinguishable from the French issues only by the mintmarks. There are four types of these, the first three from the Turin mint only, the last from all three mints.

ROYAL CANADIAN MINT REPORT—1943

Continuous operation, twenty-four hours daily, seven days a week, maintaining an average weekly output of over 3,000,000 good coins throughout the year of 1943, is a record of which the Mint at Ottawa may be justly proud. The other departments of the Coining Division were forced to work on a two and three shift schedule to keep the presses supplied with sufficient blanks for striking.

The output last year surpassed any former like period in the history of the Mint, the high mark being 153,380,716 pieces, approximately 45,000,000 more than in 1942.

That strikingly attractive coin, the tombac 5 cent piece, totalled a face value of $1,238,000—approximately one-fourth of the total value of all the nickel 5 cent coins struck since the opening of the Mint in 1908.

DEATHS

Member W. O. White of Watkins Glen, N. Y., has kindly sent in a clipping from the Watkins Express, telling of the death on August 3rd of George Burton, Sr., of Montour Falls, N. Y. Mr. Burton was born in England in 1851, coming to this country when five years old, living the greater part of his life in Philadelphia. His occupation was that of builder and contractor. His religious and fraternal interests were faithful and long sustained, and to him coin collecting had, for nearly forty years, been an absorbing hobby. His membership number in the A. N. A. was 908, the year of joining having been 1907. His wife, son, and a granddaughter survive him.

UNUSUAL, AT LEAST

The Numismatic Gallery reports the discovery, while cataloguing a consignment for their next sale, of a half dollar of 1889 which shows distinct signs of the 9 over 8. Another similar recent discovery was that of the 1909 over 8, double eagle.

President Knapp (Heart of America Numismatic Association), being informed by one of their members that he possessed a 1944 steel cent, P mint, wrote Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, asking for information concerning it. Mrs. Ross replied that no such coin could have been legitimately issued. Further news of the matter is awaited.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

BRONX COIN CLUB—The 131st regular meeting of the Club was held on Tuesday, July 25, at the Concourse Plaza Hotel, President Kortjohn presiding, with 19 members and guests present.

An interesting letter was read from Mr. William F. Steinberg, one of our members now in the Southwest Pacific. There was a further discussion of the forthcoming exhibit which will be held from October 14th to 28th at the American Numismatic Society.

The topics of the evening were the small cents from 1856 to 1909, coins of countries beginning with the letter M, except Mexico, and naval medals and medals of naval men. The highlight of the evening was the exhibit of Mr. J. V. McDermott which consisted of about 35 of the rarest coins in the United States series, including a 1913 liberty head nickel. Other exhibits were as follows:

Mr. Baker: U. S. large cents of 1794 and 1837 and a British military one shilling note of North Africa.

Mr. Deas: 10 good luck medals and encased cents.

Mr. Douglas: Counterfeit half pence of Geo. III with muling diagram.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—The 197th regular meeting held August 1, at 205 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, was attended by 34 members and guests. Mr. Budd, a new member, specializes in coins of the Carson City Mint, and spoke briefly in regard to his hobby, displaying a part of his valuable collection, including a die stamp which was used at Carson City for the purpose of marking bullion.

A letter from Lt. Russell M. Hanna O'Day, now in Australia with a bomber squadron, and enclosing a ten shilling note in payment of his club dues, was heard with interest. Announcements concerning the activities of neighbor coin clubs in Orange County, Santa Monica and Pasadena showed these organizations to be in a flourishing condition.

The piece de resistance of the evening was the interesting, if somewhat informal debate on the subject, "Resolved, that a person who possesses one or more coins, is a collector." The affirmative of this issue was maintained by M. N. Harris and A. P. Gasser; the negative by Rev. Harry Golding and Max Mogi. Mr. Harris narrated the fact that a buffalo nickel first aroused his interest as a collector, and Mr. Gasser took the position that it is the nature of the coins collected which determines whether one is a real collector; a collector or numismatist being a person who collects coins having numismatic value. Mr. Mogi brought out the fact that a telephone employee who collects the coins from a pay station is obviously not a "collector" in the numismatic sense, and Rev. Golding drew the sharp distinction between a mere collector and a numismatist who studies his coins. The judges, Mrs.

Block, Mrs. Hawley and Miss Kleinpell gave their decision for the negative.

Mr. Paul Weiger exhibited a fine collection of wooden nickels and at the next meeting will speak briefly on this hobby.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE

The Demand for Commemorative Silver Half Dollars is now greater than the supply.

It's the public demand for these coins that sets the prices for the limited issues of Commemoratives and other rare coins, and not the dealers. Hence the prices are now subject to change without notice.

You will seek far for a better investment for value appreciation and can't go wrong by investing your money in Commemoratives.

PRICES SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE.

TERMS: NET CASH WITH ORDER. $10.00 or over postpaid and insured.

Gentlemen:

I want to thank you for your check of $2000.00 paid me for my remaining stamps which were delivered only today. This is only one of the several very satisfactory transactions I have had with you in the past and it is very gratifying to do business with a concern that is so prompt in paying and so fair in its offer. I feel that I would probably not have gotten as much elsewhere and as I have been a collector and dealer for many years I know the stamp market thoroughly.

Wishing you continued success in your large and rapidly growing business,
I remain

Very truly yours, B. A. Oppenheimer.

Gentlemen:

Your check of $200.00 in payment for my collection of stamps is acknowledged.

I wish to thank you for your prompt appraisal and settlement. It is a pleasure to transact business under such circumstances, and I will be only too glad to recommend you to my fellow collectors.

Very truly yours,

E. C. Wharfield, D.D.S.

FIFTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

OVER-DATED AND RE-ENGRAVED COINS

By EDWARD B. HADEN, Haddonfield, New Jersey

(A paper read before the Philadelphia Coin Club, June 13, 1944.)

The so called "over-dated" and "re-engraved" coins that appeared in the early days of our national coinage have no doubt caused many collectors to pause and wonder as to what factors were involved in producing these odd coins. At this time new thoughts are being introduced on this subject, which seem to be a more logical and mechanical explanation of their existence.

Most collectors assume that an over-dated coin is the result of a die being used in more than one year, this appearing rather obvious as the coin has two distinct dates on it. Dr. Royal E. LaGrange in his excellent article on "Over-dated Large Cents" in the November 1941 Scrapbook, divided the over-dates into two classes, and quoting his article:

"These over-dates are of two classes. One is caused by careless workmanship of unskilled engravers; in making errors in cutting the dies and necessitating a correction.

"The other class consists of true over-dates. Either the dies could not be prepared in time or, for the sake of economy, the dies of a previous year which were not cracked or worn were changed by engraving the date of the current year over that of the previous year.

"Because of the expense and lack of skilled engravers in making new dies, the hub or matrix was used until too worn or broken to be of further value. The hub is a positive punch carved in relief on hard metal, into which a piece of soft metal is hammered or pressed and then hardened to be used as the actual die for striking the coins. The die is negative, while the hub is positive, having the same design in relief as the coin itself. The details which could not be produced by hubbing in this way can be finished by direct cutting. This method of making dies as used at that time involved more individual work on each die than is required today with machine methods, which produced slight variations in each die, even though they were intended to be the same. Whenever a new hub was used, still more marked changes were usually noticed. Slight errors were never corrected, and when corrections were made, they were crude. The dies would not last for more than 50,000 coins. These crude methods, the early mill and screw method, were used in the Philadelphia Mint until 1836."

There are several factors involved which Dr. LaGrange evidently did not consider, and to investigate these factors it is necessary to check into some historical facts on the original Mint; and also some general conditions that existed at large at the period when our country first began coinage.

These two classes of over-dates of Dr. LaGrange are open to dispute. This being brought about by several historical facts in Mr. Stewart's book "First United States Mint," which was published in 1924. Through the Mint Records of 1793-96 which Mr. Stewart uncovered it is known that coins of certain years were not necessarily coined in that calendar year. Once a die was made it was used until it was worn out regardless of how much time had elapsed. Knowing this, it seems logical that the Mint would not single out just a few dies for correction while it went ahead and used other dies in the wrong year. This is further proven by Mr. Clapp, in the illustration of progressive die cracks, that some of the 1799 cents were coined before some of those of 1798.

From the mechanical viewpoint it is also very unlikely that over-dated coins were the result of a correction in the date so as to prolong the life of a die. At the period of our early coinage education was far below the level as we know it today. Any man who could read and write was unusual and respected for his knowledge. Today these two elements are not even considered as we start to learn them in the elementary grades of school. In 1783, blacksmiths were considered expert machinists. It is true that engravers were very scarce. Severe business troubles were caused in the period between the close of the Revolutionary war and the opening of the Mint in 1793 by the lack of a national currency backed by silver and gold. As early as 1786 Jefferson tried to secure suitable artists for coinage, and inability to find these men helped to delay the opening of the Mint. On April 23, 1790, Jefferson attempted to interview one Drost in Paris about becoming chief coiner and engraver. This man had not appeared by September, 1792, when Wright was given the job temporarily. However, Wright died, and on November 23, 1793, Robert Scot was appointed permanently to this post.

From these facts it seems evident that the engraver did not have the time to complete the dies. It appears that he engraved the original hubs only, and the hardening of the hubs, sinking of the dies, and addition of the lettering and dates was left to someone of lesser skill. To substantiate this, facts from Mr. Stewart's book are again quoted:

"The original Articles of Agreement Adam Eckfeldt signed on January 1, 1796, stated he was to act as assistant to the chief coiner; undertake the cutting of all the planchets, direct the striking of all coins, personally forge, turn and harden all the dies, hubs, etc., and direct the blacksmith employed in the Mint." (It is well to note here that Eckfeldt was a blacksmith who had done many jobs for the Mint previously.) "At the death of Voigt in 1814, President Madison appointed Eckfeldt as Chief Coiner. He served thus until he designed in 1839."

Delving further into the mechanical aspect of the coinage, steel dies of 1793 are not to be compared with those we use today. The manufacture of coining dies was extremely difficult, and with the materials at hand at that time it is very improbable that a die could be hardened, put into use, then annealed for corrections and rehardened for further use; as a matter of fact most hubs lasted only long enough to make a single die until a great many years later when the steels were improved. Modern industry was unable to secure steel for forming and coining dies that would stand reheating and quenching until the 20th century.

The summation of these factors would tend to change Dr. LaGrange's two classes of over-dates into one: that of correcting poor engraving or die sinking, as it happens to be. The errors evident are not samples of poor engraving, but rather those of the man who put the letters in the die then corrected as best he could these mistakes before the die had its original heat treatment or hardening process.

These corrected mistakes, or over-dates as they are termed, have turned up from time to time even in modern years, the latest being the 1942 over 1 dime. It is certainly evident that this one is a corrected mistake with so many perfect dimes present—and all from the same grand master die. Just how many different examples of this type of coin exist no one can justly say—there is always one turning up that has not been known before.

The re-engraved coins also belong in the same category. Punching numbers and letters in a die accurately is very difficult. When a letter or number is sunk in a die and it is not as deep as the rest it must be restruck or a weak letter results on the coins. To put the punch back in place and deepen the letter without making a double line is very difficult and requires great skill—certainly more skill than that of an ordinary blacksmith. Today these letters are all sunk at the same time in die sinking presses; however, even now errors can occur, of which the 1939 Jefferson nickel is a perfect example. It is true that the letters in "Monticello" are double struck—but in all probability it occurred at the time the dies were struck and had no connection with the reinforced hub the Mint used that year. A strengthened hub was issued by the Mint and by virtue of such, new dies had to be prepared. Certainly no dies were annealed and restruck; today this process would be more costly than the manufacture of a new die.

Collectively these factors all form one general picture. The so-called "over-dates" and "re-engraved" coins are not what they appear to be, or what their names imply. They are the result of faulty workmanship and corrected to the best degree available at the time of the manufacture of the die in question.

SOUND PHILOSOPHY

Nothing will ruin the country if the people themselves will undertake its safety; and nothing can save it if they leave that safety in any hands but their own.—Daniel Webster.

I believe that the thrift is essential to well-ordered living; and that economy is a prime requisite of a sound financial structure, whether in government, business, or personal affairs. I believe in the soundness of a promise, that a man's word should be as good as his bond; that character—not wealth or power or position—is of supreme worth.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

CONVENTION PROCEEDINGS

Chicago, August 26, 27 and 28, 1944

(It will be recalled that the 1943 Convention approved the Editor's recommendation that a condensed account of the proceedings appear in The Numismatist, in place of the complete transcript as in former years: this in the interest of economy and conservation of paper. The same course was approved this year. The following condensation omits nothing of importance to the record.—Ed.)

The first business session of the Convention was called to order at the LaSalle Hotel Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock by Earl Barger, Vice President of the Chicago Coin Club, who, after a brief but hearty welcome to the members assembled, turned over the gavel to President Martin F. Kortjohn.

President Kortjohn, after declaring a quorum present, and appointing various committees, called upon the General Secretary, M. Vernon Sheldon, to read the names of those members whose deaths had occurred during the past year.

The Convention, standing, heard the following report:

President Kortjohn then presented his annual report.

PRESIDENT KORTJOHN'S REPORT

It seems only yesterday that you honored me by electing me as your President. Much has happened during the past year. Many of our boys are still being inducted into military service; more are leaving their homeland to go to the foreign theatres of war; few have returned home but all are looking forward to that day when our enemies will have been conquered and when they will be allowed to mend the ties they were forced to break when they entered our country's service. In that year our armies have taken most of the boot of Italy, including Rome; an invasion front has been opened in Normandy in Northern France and our troops have advanced into Paris itself; another invasion front has been opened in the Riviera in Southern France and our troops are said to have advanced to the borders of Switzerland; our forces have taken most of New Guinea and many important island bases in the Pacific; and our air forces have made several raids on Japan as well as on Davao in the Philippines. Steady progress is being made toward the reopening of the Burma Road. To all of this we must add the phenomenal success of the Russians in retaking practically all of the lands wrested from them early in the war, in cutting off Latvia, Esthonia, and Lithuania, and even in entering East Prussia. Poland's capital city is at the verge of being retaken. All of these successes will help in bringing nearer the days of peace and the return of our boys. And we pray that peace will be with us this time next year.

Progress Shown During Year

Successes have not been confined to the battlefronts. In our Association we have had a year in which we earned considerable money, increasing our financial assets to almost $43,800, consisting of bonds having a market value of about $29,500, and cash of $14,300. The number of new members admitted during the year is almost as great as it was during the peak of the commemorative coin period, and the membership numbers are as high as 10,600. Our membership is almost 4,200, as compared with 3,638 at the end of the previous fiscal year. It is somewhat difficult to attribute the reason for the increase in membership, but it is probably the combination of the popular sale of coin boards, the interest in foreign countries because of the war, and the greater earnings of collectors. The general transactions of the Association show a substantial profit despite increases in certain expenses, which include over $1,500 for the printing of the new membership directory and library list. Moreover, the Business Manager of THE NUMISMATIST collected more money than he spent. This is a commendable record, and Mr. Saxton deserves full credit for this great success. In giving this it should be remembered that the Association handicaps the Business Manager by not giving him financial credit for the subscriptions of members, but only for those of non-members and casual purchasers.

The Membership Directory

Some of the aims set as a goal last year have been successfully accomplished; others have had only moderate success, and on still others the future will have to tell the story. One of the most successful of our aims has been the increase in our membership which has already been mentioned. Another success has been the gradual improvement in THE NUMISMATIST, which many of us feel can be still further improved. I shall speak further about this later. Among the aims on which only moderate success was met was in the publication of the membership directory and library list. You will recall that President Ferguson told you a year ago that the incoming Executive Board would order its printing to be completed in the fall of that year. As a matter of fact, its printing was ordered for March 15, 1944, but war work prevented our General Secretary from giving this task his full attention, with the result that members did not receive the publication until early in August. We hope the changes in its general style will meet the hearty approval of the members. According to the By-Laws the next directory will be printed not later than August, 1947, at which time greater perfection will be attained because war work will not interfere. Another matter on which complete success cannot be claimed is on the medal to be awarded for articles contributed to THE NUMISMATIST. Past President Ferguson has given this matter considerable thought and will render his report later, but we cannot show the membership how the medal will look.

Commemorative Dollar

My fond hope of having the government resume the issuance of commemorative coins of the silver dollar denomination has met with little success. Many obstacles were encountered, chief among them being the huge amount of work being performed by our Mints, the laws relating to the coinage of silver dollars, and the silver question itself. The lack of crystallization of ideas of collectors themselves as to what they would like is also a contributing factor in the inactivity on this matter. At least one organization is working toward the authorization of a commemorative silver dollar, and since it is for a worthy commemorative purpose, we shall gladly support them so that the matter might be brought to a successful conclusion. However, I shall welcome any constructive ideas on the resumption of striking commemorative coins.

Acknowledgments

At this point I shall give my thanks to the officers of the Association for the work they did contributing toward our success this year. To single out one as deserving particular thanks would be unfair to the others because all gave their best efforts within the time and other limitations imposed. The decision of the General Secretary to discontinue raises the problem of training his successor, and the elimination of two present members of the Board makes it necessary for us to elect new members to fill their places. However, changes of this kind are indications of a healthy condition and it is felt that the Association will ultimately benefit thereby. It is sincerely hoped that no accusations will be made that the Association is being run by a clique.

Our Investments

As announced in the August NUMISMATIST, the numerous requests of members that the Association purchase substantial amounts of U. S. Government bonds have resulted in the unanimous decision of the Executive Board to invest an additional \$25,000 in this manner. The series selected was the 1970-1965 issue bearing interest at the rate of $2\frac{1}{2}\%$. In order to make them readily marketable, should the occasion to sell them before maturity arise, the bonds were not registered but are payable to bearer. To lend the government idle money is a patriotic act, but when it is coupled with an increase in interest from approximately $1\frac{1}{2}\%$ to $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ without incurring financial risk it is a good business policy. It is felt that inasmuch as such a large sum of your money was expended by the act of only the seven members of the Executive Board, this convention should vote its approval of the action.

Your consent is also requested in another matter concerning these bonds. Consideration has been given by the Board to the transfer of these bonds and any others purchased in the future to a custody account in a bank, and that they should not be sold or withdrawn except upon the written orders of the President, Secretary and Treasurer of the Association. The Chase National Bank, one of our corporate members, has offered to perform this service for us at an annual charge of $25. Should we accept it, we could save $125 a year in the cost of the surety bonds on our Treasurer and Assistant Treasurer, as well as eliminating the rental of our safe deposit box. Sale or withdrawal over the signatures of all three officers is a safeguard suggested to reduce the responsibility of one individual. It differs from our present policy in that the President and General Secretary will be required to advise the bank of the sale or withdrawal, instead of the General Secretary drawing the voucher which is approved by the President before the Treasurer draws a check. In the case of the voucher the bank never sees it or the signatures on it. It will be appreciated if the convention will take action on this matter.

Tax Exemptions

Another matter that should receive the attention of members and others in these days of great tax consciousness is that The American Numismatic Association is an educational organization, and as such is exempt from the payment of income taxes. In addition, contributions of books, numismatic collections, cash and other items are deductible by the contributor on his income tax return. Furthermore, bequests to the Association by a decedent are exempt from estate taxes. The high tax rates of today should encourage more liberal contributions by our wealthier members, who will feel proud to know that the science of numismatics will greatly benefit by their generosity. Our exemption bears the date of September 14, 1942, and it is believed of sufficient documentary importance as to warrant its reproduction in THE NUMISMATIST, if not in future issues of the directory.

It is of interest to know that our former member, Mr. George S. Batterson, of Hartford, Conn., has bequeathed certain property to the Association. At this time the nature of this property is not as yet known to us. Mr. Batterson also made contributions to the Association during his lifetime.

The Official Magazine

I mentioned earlier that further improvements could be made in THE NUMISMATIST. All of us would like to see published in it authoritative articles on our own collecting specialty. That it can successfully be done may be forcefully illustrated by the interesting and popular presentation of geography, which was such a dull subject as it was taught in school, in that fine magazine, the National Geographic. Numismatics is an extremely interesting subject and has so many different phases that greater interest will be shown by the general public if it is properly presented. Up to the present time the Association has not had an editor and a business manager who was in a position to give it his full time. While I was at Cedar Rapids in May of this year I discussed with Mr. Saxton the possibility of his devoting all of his time to THE NUMISMATIST. His experience during the past two years has shown him that such an arrangement would require a secretary and an office, with a combined expense of approximately $5,400. Our total expense on the present basis, including that of the Director of Publicity ($360), has been approximately $3,560. The difference represents an increase of about $1800 or 50%. This is offered to you for your consideration. It is necessary to bear in mind that the increase represents the dues of 600 members and that if our membership should increase as the result of the improvement in THE NUMISMATIST, not only the 600, but the entire membership will be benefitted.

With this report on the status of the Association we are ready to proceed with the regular business of the convention. In closing, I shall say that serving as your President in the past year has been for the greater part an enjoyable experience having as its special reward an increased number of contacts with collectors. My only regret is that, owing to present high pressure business conditions, I have been unable to devote as much time as I would have liked to the business of the Association. If there are any shortcomings, they may be attributed to this cause rather than to lack of interest. With the present more cheerful outlook of the war, it would appear that it will be possible to spend more time on behalf of the A. N. A. Finally, the eagerness of the new officers to be named next Monday should contribute to make next year the banner year in the history of the Association.

The following reports were then formally received and accepted, with such portions as required it being referred to the Auditing and Resolutions Committees. These, with the exception of the reports of the District Secretaries, had been prepared in advance in printed form, and since they had been made available to the members upon registration, this section of the program was fairly brief. The reports of the District Secretaries will be found at the close of the proceedings. An exception was made in the case of J. Hunt Deacon, District Secretary for Australia; President Kortjohn read this to the assembly, as coming from so great a distance, and yet closer to the war front than ourselves in the United States.

Past President J. Douglas Ferguson extended the greetings of squadron leader Sidney V. Hagley of the Royal Australian Air Force, who looks forward to the day when he will be able to attend one of our annual conventions. Writing from New Guinea, he reports that he is studying the coinages of the South Pacific, including aboriginal monies, as time permits. [It will be recalled he has contributed occasional articles to THE NUMISMATIST.—Ed.]

GENERAL SECRETARY'S SUMMARY

Memberships

The general upsurge in membership gain is primarily attributed to the international interest brought to the American home by correspondence with service men who are stationed where unusual or unfamiliar local and native monies are the circulating specie. Also, this international influence in numismatics along with improved incomes has broadened the field of numismatic interest so much that those who learned about the A. N. A. and its advantages are increasing its membership growth. A keener interest in collecting has fostered a year of membership growth which ranks first in the Association's history; especially the interest shown by juniors to avail themselves of the Cincinnati Resolution to include the age-group between 18 and 21 years. This year Life Memberships increased by twelve which further evidences the advantages and desirability of belonging to this permanent class. On the whole, the membership roll incurred fewer losses through delinquencies, resignations and deaths, by percentage, than for many years.

Financial

To continue the trend of the former two years, a steady financial gain has resulted over the past year. Less expense was incurred in making collections, and collections have been more prompt. Because of the small annual dues it is desirable that remittances promptly follow the receipt of the annual statements to limit the period in which collections take place in the General Secretary's office.

It will be noted in the annual financial statement the many reductions in operating expense which in turn nearly offset the increases in other accounting classifications. The amount of net increase in income is directly proportional to the membership gain and expense disbursements.

Honorable Mention

Much of the Association's successful growth is attributed to the unceasing devotion to our fraternal welfare by those members who promote educational interest in numismatics. Again this office has the honor to point out Mr. William Mertes of St. Cloud, Minnesota as having proposed and investigated the most applicants among the Association's lay-members. Appreciation and thanks are also extended to Messrs. Koeppel, Reed and Saab, following closely for this distinction. For the generous cooperation and devotion to their office to extend numismatic fraternalism, Mr. Malcolm Chell-Frost of Massachusetts, leads the District Secretaries with fourteen (14) proposed applications, followed by Mr. Horace Grant of Rhode Island and Mr. Edward Fogler of California.

Secretarial

Along with the Association's growth, is the equivalent increase in secretarial details and responsibility. The work of this office has reached the proportion of a full time, forty to fifty-six hour week, the year around. A goodly share of your Secretary's time is devoted to the routine investigation, reporting and inducting of new members. Also, the centralizing of all receipts and expenses (Numismatist and General Accounts) through the General Secretary's office has made for more complete monthly reports to the Executive Board and has added to the secretarial accounting. These facts are made known in this annual report to acquaint the membership at large with the volume of correspondence traffic and to invite and urge the members to direct correspondence to the correct office. That is, matters pertaining to publication be directed to the Editor, and affairs concerning the Library to Mr. Hammer. This routine will expedite replies and eliminate the now large amount of mail being transferred from office to office.

In closing this, my last, annual report as your General Secretary, I am remembering the many genial acquaintances and lasting friendships made possible by and through your having vested in me the duties of this office in 1938. While the duties of this office have often times been burdensome and required long hours, its experience is without measure. My heartfelt appreciation is extended to those fellow officers and the membership at large for their cooperation and in particular to my secretary, who is also a member of this Association. Taken altogether, the A. N. A. membership body is a grand organization and to have had the privilege of serving this office has been a pleasurable and worthy experience.

M. VERNON SHELDON, General Secretary.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARIAN-CURATOR

Your Librarian-Curator in making this, his fourth annual report, is pleased to announce a gain in the number of books loaned during the fiscal year just closed.

Two books which may be replaced easily were lost during the year and the Library lost $2.81 on postage.

Books loaned totaled 793 for the year as compared to 762 for 1942-1943 and 726 for 1941-1942. Although we failed to reach our goal of 1,000 books for the year, we did attain one goal—our own state, Iowa, led in the number of books borrowed, with 117 as compared to 105 for its closest competitor, Illinois, which led previously. This is due largely to publicity given the Library by the Iowa Numismatic Association and its publication, INA, and the announcements made at the Association's semi-annual meetings, in the fall of 1943 and spring of 1944.

There were 312 different loans to approximately 275 different borrowers. We received 314 letters and sent 335; used 690 postal cards; received 511 queries from non-members, referred to this office by various federal bureaus; answered 69 queries from members. The Librarian bound 41 books and pamphlets, repairing 101. Twelve books were purchased, 18 were bound, 49 books were donated and there were 36 more pamphlets, catalogues and so forth received.

There were about 40 delays because books were out or at a bindery. There also were several delays in answering correspondence, of two to five days usually, due to the press of personal business.

We added a combination coin cabinet to house ANA coins and medals, with a rack below for reference books.

The Library greatly needs a minimum of two more large steel bookcases. These of course are not obtainable due to the war—but in the meantime, the Librarian's home is filled with ANA books, cabinets, worktables and so on. We already have six personally owned bookcases filled with ANA library books in addition to one room given over entirely to a work table for shipping and receiving and for storage of supplies, wrapping paper, printed matter and so on. The Library actually fills two rooms now in addition to what should be used by the Librarian's wife as a pantry. There also are numerous Numismatists (duplicates) stored in the basement along with other duplicate works.

As in other years, the Librarian in answering queries pointed out to writers the enjoyment received from the hobby of coin collecting. We had two queries from dealers wishing data on coins about which writers asked. We never give out such information, although frequently referring writers to clubs in their vicinities where we think writers may become collectors and candidates for the American Numismatic Association. We also should add that in the hundreds of letters received, we never yet have found a rarity listed. About one-fifth of the writers ask about 1913 five-cent pieces or dimes and most of them have 1913 nickels they would like to trade for a new tire or country estate.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR OF PUBLICITY

1943-1944 .

To the President and Members of the American Numismatic Association:

It is again my pleasant duty to report the conduct of the office of Director of Publicity. This report is for the fiscal year ending July 31, 1944. In order to acquaint new members with the nature of the duties of this office, the opening paragraph of previous reports is repeated.

The duties of the Director of Publicity consist chiefly in (1) writing and inserting advertisements in the name of the Association in selected publications, inviting interested persons to apply for membership, order a sample copy of The Numismatist for 25c or write for further information; (2) assisting the District Secretaries in promoting publicity for the Association; and (3) answering general inquiries about numismatics.

During the past year the work has been conducted in a manner similar to that of preceding years, and with very gratifying results. The report of last year showed a very substantial increase over any preceding year for applications received and for single copies sold. It did not appear to me at the time of the last convention that any very great additional increase could be expected. No increase in the annual appropriation was requested and the amount appropriated was $500, same as for last year. There was, however, a continued increase in the volume of mail received, the number of applications, and in single copy sales. While the amount spent for advertising was not increased very much, the expenses for postage, printing and other office expenses did increase somewhat. In addition there was no special appropriation for National Coin Week this year, it being the plan to pay that expense from the appropriation for Publicity. It became apparent in March of this year that the appropriation would be insufficient to cover all of these expenses and still leave a balance in the Bank adequate to meet the requirements of the Bank for a minimum balance of not less than $200.

A letter was sent to the President late in March requesting an additional appropriation of $300, and this was promptly granted. Of this amount, less than $100 was spent, less than the actual amount spent for National Coin Week which had usually had a special $100 appropriation, but it did result in a larger bank balance which partly compensates the Bank for handling a large number of checks.

The Association has continued to benefit by the generosity of several of its members who have carried advertising for the Association without expense to us. The most productive of these advertisements has been that carried in the Whitman Coin Book through the courtesy of the Whitman Publishing Company of Racine, Wisconsin. Some others are the auction catalogs of Barney Bluestone, and the Haskin booklet. The exchange of space agreement between The Numismatist and the Numismatic Scrapbook at one-half page per month has been continued. These advertisements have brought a considerable response without expenditure of cash from the appropriation for advertising.

The distribution of Haskin's Everybody's Coin Book has been continued to those District Secretaries and others requesting them. About 400 copies were sent out this year. A stock of about 100 copies remains on hand.

The greatly increased volume of mail received required some secretarial assistance in order that it might all be answered promptly. The allowance or salary appropriated for this office was used for that purpose and an additional amount of $77.20 was charged against the general appropriation for the office.

The financial report appears below in the last column of the table and the corresponding figures for the preceding four years are given for comparison. Details of the expenditures with receipts and cancelled checks for each item (except postage) have been furnished to the President and the Auditing Committee and are available to others on request.

The amount shown as cash on hand includes the working balance of $200, and the total amount is on deposit in the name of the American Numismatic Association in the Hamilton Trust Branch of the Chase National Bank of New York, less amount expended since July 31. There are no unpaid bills or other obligations of the Association authorized by the Director of Publicity.

Item (15) Miscellaneous, includes the $77.20 for extra clerical assistance, $90.16 for National Coin Week, $36 for purchase of Haskin booklets, $20.15 for circulars and dealers lists prepared for use of the Librarian.

It is recommended that the appropriation for the coming year be $500, with its expenditure subject to same conditions as those in effect this year. This amount, together with the amount on hand, should be sufficient to conduct the duties of this office effectively and efficiently, provide for expenses of National Coin Week, and leave at all times a balance in the Bank adequate to meet the minimum balance requirements for an account with our average amount of activity, the balance on hand next July 31 being not less than $200.

The Director of Publicity takes this opportunity of thanking the General Secretary, the Business Manager, the President and all others who have been of assistance in carrying out the duties of the office.

LEWIS M. REAGAN, Director of Publicity.

CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT'S REPORT

The writer has made an examination of the books and records kept by the General Secretary, the Treasurer, and the Business Manager of The Numismatist for the fiscal year ended July 31, 1944, and submits herewith the following schedules:

Statement of Income and Expense
General Transactions
Statement of Income and Expense
The Numismatist
Statement of Life Membership Fund
Summary of Cash Transactions
Statement of Cash and Securities

Each of the several functions of the association resulted in a profit. The operations of The Numismatist showed a net income of $190.21, without giving it credit for a portion of members dues for their subscriptions. This more favorable result was largely due to an increase of $3,619.00 in advertising income.

The attached schedules do not agree in detail with those of the several officers. This is primarily due to cash on hand of $458.79 held by the General Secretary as of July 31, 1944, which was not included in the Treasurer's report. This represented funds transmitted from The Numismatist during the latter part of July 1944. Likewise the Treasurer's report shows the expenses of the Director of Publicity as consisting of the $800.00 advanced to him during the year, whereas the amount shown in this report reflects the increase in the unexpended balance of $111.68.

The following tests and checks were made of the records. All recorded cash receipts were traced to the bank accounts, and all cancelled checks returned by the bank, except those issued by the Director of Publicity, were compared with the corresponding entries in the disbursement records. Endorsements were examined and found to be in order. The various bank accounts were reconciled and verified by direct correspondence with the depositaries. Bank transfers were fully accounted for.

The major portion of the disbursements were verified by reference to invoices from suppliers. The Association's own form of vouchers authorizing the disbursements were also examined for the proper approval of the various officers and found to be in order.

A test was made of the dues collected by comparing approximately ten per cent (10%) of the credit for payment of dues as recorded on the members' history records with the corresponding entries in the Secretary's receipt book.

A test was made of the advertising income by tracing payment for the ads appearing in the December issue to the cash receipts record.

The securities owned by the association were examined by a committee consisting of Messrs. Kortjohn, Blake and Brooks at the Trust Company of New Jersey, and certified to the writer.

The records examined were in good condition and adequate to properly record the financial transactions of the Association. The writer very much appreciates the courtesies and excellent cooperation shown him in the course of his examination.

Second Day's Session

The meeting was called to order at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning; President Kortjohn in the chair. Lewis M. Reagan, appointed as reading clerk, presented the following reports:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION

The past year the work of the Education Committee has, again, necessarily been dormant, in so far as preparing the manuscript of the manual is concerned. Mr. Lewis M. Reagan, however, has given several lectures to schools in New York City during the past year. An exhibit of U. S. coins and paper money for the purpose of illustrating what might be used in schools in connection with the teaching of U. S. history is being collected. This is to be used by the committee in future lectures.

The committee respectfully requests the continuance of its appropriation which it has never used. It would be well to have it ready for use when the world resumes normal relations, and the committee is able to prepare the manual for publication. We all hope that will be soon!

EMILY LARSON BROOKES, Chairman.

(Referred to the Resolutions Committee.)

COIN PURCHASING COMMITTEE

In accordance with a resolution passed at the Cincinnati Convention of the American Numismatic Association, the sum of $100 was appropriated for the purchase of specimens to be added to the Moritz Wormser Memorial Loan Exhibit, which our Association maintains on public display in the Smithsonian Institution, U. S. National Museum, in the City of Washington. This was Resolution Number Twelve of the Cincinnati Convention, 1942.

There is no financial report herewith, as your chairman has handled no funds, and there have been no coin purchases during the past two years covered by this report. Your attention is directed to the report on page 38 of the 1942 Convention Proceedings.

During the past two years we have acquired 13 new pieces, which may be classified as follows:

By Countries:		By Metal:		By their Donors:
Italy	6	Brass	4	D. M. Bullowa	7
Canada	4	Acmonital	3	J. D. Ferguson	3
Tunis	1	Alum. Br.	1	Frank Sternberg	1
Chile	1	Tombac	2	Ernst Kraus	1
Ceylon	1	Steel	1	F. Bowman	1
		Zinc	1
		Bronze	1
Totals	13		13		13

New issues have not been common, but a list in The Numismatist for August 1944 shows a number of pieces on which negotiations for purchase are presently being made.

All of the donors were promptly thanked and the new pieces have been forwarded to the Cabinet in care of Mr. J. E. Graf at the Smithsonian Institution. These pieces were numbered 917 to 929 in the lists. Receipts for these coins are annexed hereto. The gift of Mr. Bullowa came directly to the Museum from overseas, and was reported to us.

Your chairman wishes to point out that we have not used the one hundred dollar appropriation made in Resolution No. 12 of the 1942 Convention. Hence it will not be necessary to offer a new resolution appropriating more funds for coin purchases.

Your chairman also would recommend that the insurance protecting this collection be maintained in force inasmuch as the Government does not carry insurance on the material in the Museum.

ROBERT H. LLOYD, Chairman.

(Referred to the Resolutions Committee.)

Mr. Reagan commented that appropriations are made for the ensuing year only, and that unused funds do not carry over, new appropriations being necessary in each case.

(ADOPTED.)

PRESIDENT KORTJOHN: The motion is carried and Mr. Ripstra will be given this honorary membership, I know, with the best wishes of the Association for all this untiring work that he has done. I know he deserves it, and now that he has it, I think he will enjoy the privilege of being an Honorary member. (Applause.)

Mr. Douglas, have you any report for the Committee on Papers?

DAMON G. DOUGLAS: Mr. President, your Committee on Papers is at work. We have received papers; we have received encouragement that papers which are not here physically are in preparation and will be submitted. Unless this meeting forbids us, we are going to accept papers for the next month, just so they are dated back of the Convention and as papers submitted at this Convention.

[The first one to be received, "The Emergency Coinage of the California Gold Rush," by Richard S. Yeoman, was published in the September issue.—Ed.]

[The report of M. Vernon Sheldon, Chairman of the Edward T. Newell Illustration Slide Committee, was not included in the material turned over to the Editor. It is hoped this may be furnished later.]

PRESIDENT KORTJOHN: I guess just about everybody was at the dinner last night and had the pleasure of meeting our Second Vice President. I understand that Mr. Ralph Mitchell wants to say a word to you. He has come all the way from California, and I know that he will give us a message that we will like to hear.

MR. RALPH A. MITCHELL: I will make my speech as short as possible. We want to say that as far as California is concerned, we appreciate the work that the A. N. A. has done and is doing. We are recognizing that in California we have at least a few members who collect curious pieces of metal and paper, and we call ourselves numismatists. It doesn't matter whether we are or not, we have just as much fun as you people have who have real collections. We have very few collectors in California that are really active. On the other hand, we have a group of collectors who will be real collectors. They are starting in in the right manner, and through our San Francisco, Santa Ana, Los Angeles and San Diego clubs we are in hopes you people will recognize that we have some collectors in California.

Like Mr. Gettys and Mr. Hammer, we want to start to impress upon you people that we are going to have a Convention in California. When, we don't know; but we hope. Due to the indecision of our own club and other clubs, we can't even ask you to come next year, because with transportation as it is now, it is almost an impossibility to get a group together. But we would like you to know that we are planning on it. We planned last year and we planned this year. We went so far this year as to vote that next year we invite you out. After a further discussion we decided that perhaps Tojo and his gang of cutthroats would not be finished to the point where transportation would be right, and we decided that we would wait until after the war.

On behalf of the California Coin Club, Santa Ana Coin Club, San Diego Numismatic Society, and the Pacific Coast Numismatic Society, of which I am a member, we want to let you know that we are going to have a Convention there. So keep that in your mind, and after you get Mr. Hammer and Mr. Gettys and their group out of the way, then plan on coming to California. I am sure everybody has a relative, a cousin or aunt or someone in California, and that all of you would like to come.

Let's start planning, folks, on coming out to San Francisco. We think we are going to beat Los Angeles to the punch and have a convention in San Francisco by the Golden Gate the year after the war is over.

Thank you very much. (Applause.)

PRESIDENT KORTJOHN: Thank you, Mr. Mitchell. It has been quite a long time since we have had a Convention in California. I believe it was 1932 when we met in Los Angeles.

Mr. Mitchell is asking that some time after 1946 we have a Convention there. It just occurred to me, as I sat here listening to him, that California really began to be known to the world in 1849, so maybe the 100th anniversary of the discovery of gold there would be a good time.

Third Day's Session

This session was called to order at 10:40 o'clock Monday morning; President Kortjohn in the chair.

PRESIDENT KORTJOHN: Mr. Pierce, Chairman of the Resolutions Committee, has an additional resolution to submit this morning.

Mr. Pierce submitted the following:

"RESOLVED, by the American Numismatic Association in Convention assembled at Chicago, Illinois, this 28th day of August, 1944, that official recognition be extended to those committees who have so efficiently worked for and at the Convention, the Chicago Coin Club, our hosts, its officers and members, for their efforts in making this a successful Convention."

(ADOPTED.)

The President then referred to the matter of decision as to whether or not the editorship of THE NUMISMATIST should be on a part time or a full time basis, stating that the Board of last year felt the decision should be made by the incoming Board, and action in the case was therefore left to them.

President Kortjohn then asked Mrs. Cora D. Henderson of Columbus, Ohio, to address a few words to the Convention, thus carrying on a custom long observed. (The newer members will be interested to know that her late husband, Dr. J. M. Henderson, was for many years actively connected with Association affairs, and in 1909 and 1910 held the office of President.)

MRS. CORA D. HENDERSON: Mr. President and members of the Association: I don't know that I really have any message for you, but it has been a very great pleasure to be with you in this Convention.

I have attended nearly all of the Conventions held in Chicago, and of course, memory goes back to Mr. Dunham, Mr. Green, Mr. Leon, and many others I might mention, whose faces I miss in this assembly. However, life goes on, and each one must do his bit.

It becomes your duty to carry on the educational facilities of the science of numismatics, may I say, in the world, because the American Numismatic Association is known throughout the world.

I think some of the most pleasant things that happened to my late husband were the letters that we received from persons whom we did not know, who were not members of the A. N. A., and yet who were interested in numismatics. They would write, telling him how they felt, and would say, "Now, you don't even need to answer this letter, but I wanted to have you know."

I am quite sure that this same pleasure is coming to you who have been members for some time, and in the years to come it will also come to the younger generation.

May I say that we are making an adjustment at this time, of course. Some of the societies, perhaps smaller organizations, may get just a little bit discouraged. May I add a word of encouragement, and say, don't become discouraged. Just get busy and put on a drive for new members. Add new life to your associations and societies, and thereby encourage new collectors.

When the boys who are members come back from overseas, let them know that you have carried on in their absence and things are going on just as they have expected that they should go on and would go on.

This is what we are trying to do in our little organization in Columbus, Ohio.

Our President sent you the greetings yesterday from that organization. I would like to tell you, if I may have just a moment, about a youth meeting that we had. We had this meeting for boys from the ages of 10 to 16. They were not in the meeting very long until we were calling them the "Quiz Kids." There wasn't any question that we put to those boys about coins that they could not answer about the mint, the number coined, the historical connections. Then we permitted the boys to ask us questions. I am not sure whether we equalled their knowledge or not.

The boys became so enthusiastic that the night before leaving Columbus, our President called me and said, "Do you know that the boys have organized a coin club? They have elected their officers and are meeting in the Y. M. C. A. in the afternoons."

So, may I suggest that having a youth night in your club is a very good idea because after one becomes older, you have your collection, as a rule. If you bring the children in, you are making collectors for the future, and they thereby are receiving a liberal education along all lines.

It is a clean hobby where the young people may gather in the homes. They will not get into any mischief if they are going over a coin collection.

It has been such a pleasure, and I want to congratulate you on this Convention and the manner in which the business was conducted. It was not at all tiresome and we all had good reports.

May I say that I wish for all of the new officers, and of course we know that you are going to be the President next year, a successful and very, very happy year for all of you. (Applause.)

PRESIDENT KORTJOHN: Thank you very, very much, Mrs. Henderson. You have given us a fine message and some thoughts that would be well for the clubs connected with the Association to follow in their own procedures. We feel sure that we can increase eventually the membership of the American Numismatic Association by taking in the youngsters who will grow up and become members. We are awfully pleased that you gave us this message, and we want to thank you.

Before we hear the results of the election, I think it would be well for the purposes of the record to announce that next year Coin Week will be observed from Saturday, April 14 to Saturday, April 21.

Last year I made the mistake of delaying until around December the announcement of Coin Week, and the result was that preparations took so long it did not give the members enough time to complete them. This announcement will appear in the October issue of THE NUMISMATIST, and that will certainly give everybody time enough to make their plans.

Incidentally, one of the things that have conflicted with the celebration of Coin Week has been Easter Sunday, or rather the retail necessity for using window space just prior to Easter Sunday. In 1945 Easter will be on April 1st, and the two weeks in between April 1st and April 14th will certainly give the stores enough opportunity to remove all of their Easter merchandise from the windows and to give us an opportunity to put in coins, bills, and anything else of numismatic interest.

The ballot committee has had an enormous task this year. I understand that a record number of ballots was cast and there was a record number of candidates. Inasmuch as this was the case, it was necessary to appoint two more members to that committee—Mr. Yeoman and Mr. Rutz. The members of this committee did a big piece of work.

Mr. Klein, the chairman, will now give the report of that committee.

No further business appearing, the Convention adjourned sine die at 11:15 o'clock, "peace and harmony prevailing."

JAMES HUNT DEACONDistrict Secretary for Australia

Another year has passed—and what a year historically!

Very ambitious plans are being considered in Australia for the reopening of numismatic activity after the war.

During the period under review I have sponsored a few members for the American Numismatic Association, and might even have done more but for the difficulties found by some in the remitting of fees. The present Australian members of the A. N. A. are Dr. Egmont Schmidt, and Messrs. D. Elliott Smith, S. V. Hagley, R. W. Harrison, A. R. Turnbull, D. F. Wicks, and J. Hunt Deacon. Other applications are, I understand, pending.

I have to report that, as Executive Officer of the Association of Australian Numismatists, I have secured the release of the Numismatic Society of Victoria from an affiliation entered into in 1931; and also that the Numismatic Society of Queensland was established in January—the founder being Reginald W. Harrison (A. N. A. 10010). The Courtesy Roll of Members of the Numismatic Society of South Australia has been increased by the acceptance by Burton H. Saxton of Honorary Corresponding Membership.

On behalf of the Australian members of the Association I desire to express our appreciation of the work of the Editor of The Numismatist, and the contributors to that publication.

PAUL H. GINTHERDistrict Secretary for Illinois

The membership tabulation for Illinois as recorded in The Numismatist from August 1943 to July 1944 inclusive is as follows: gained by new members, 63; by reinstatement, 1; total, 64. Losses by death, 1; by resignation, 3; total, 4. This shows a net gain of 60 for the year, and appreciation is expressed to all who helped to make this increase possible. The greatest gain was shown in the Chicago area.

Organized numismatics is confined almost entirely to the Chicago area, and activities are much in evidence there.

In Springfield, the Lincoln's Home Collectors' Club, of which the District Secretary is a member, is composed of collectors of varied interests.

Throughout the rest of the district there is no organized numismatic activity to report. Collectors are scattered and not numerous enough in any one locality to form an organization. A stamp and coin dealer in Peoria reports a great increase in the sale of coin boards and holders. This indicates an interest in the minor series of U. S. coins and should develop a number of more serious collectors in the future.

HORACE M. GRANTDistrict Secretary for Rhode Island

Rhode Island, in keeping with other parts of the country, has had a decided increase in interest in numismatics and in our Association. Although the smallest state in the Union, Rhode Island is one of the largest producers of war material. The Walsh-Kaiser Shipyards employ 10,000 people; Brown & Sharpe Mfg. Company, 10,000 to 12,000, and other concerns working exclusively on war material will bring the total number well over 100,000 war workers; to this number add the men connected with the Training Station at Newport, those stationed at six of our forts, the thousands of sailors at Quonset and the Sea-Bees at Davisville, and we have in this small state with an area of but 1248 square miles (of which 197 are water) approximately a half million people devoting their entire efforts to the termination of this terrible war.

Providence, the largest city in Rhode Island, is naturally the playground for the thousands of sailors, soldiers and marines on leave, and it has been my pleasure to entertain hundreds of these boys in uniform at my store. It is no unusual sight to see six or eight of the boys on the floor at one time. I have tried to make my window display, especially the coin exhibit, interesting and instructive.

Last year it was my pleasure to receive from our Secretary 'Honorable Mention,' having led the District Secretaries group in number of applications sponsored during the fiscal year. This year I have received a total of fifteen applications, increasing my number over the previous year by five, or an average of better than one a month for the fiscal year.

The early part of last year my young friend Chell-Frost, Massachusetts District Secretary for the A. N. A. and President of the Boston Numismatic Society, threatened to take my laurels away from me by securing a larger number of applications for the year ending August 31, 1944, and we wagered a little dinner on the outcome. At this writing I am not sure what the results are, but think that I have a lead of one application; be that as it may, Malcom is a worker and our little contest has benefited the A. N. A. by nearly thirty new members. Another New England 'go-getter' is that man Katen from the lower part of the Nutmeg State. He is quite a sponsor as you will see by the records in The Numismatist. Confidentially, I think that some of the credit should go to that charming numismatic wife of his. I notice that Bill Hoffman of New Haven has been affixing his signature to a number of applications. Why not start a new contest this coming year with prizes for members only?

C. SHIRLEY LEACHMAN

District Secretary for District of Columbia

The Washington Numismatic Society, which is the only Society in this district, has been very active during the past year, and at almost every meeting there are many visitors from all sections of the country who are in the Armed Forces of the United States. Many of these visitors have seen foreign service, and have given very interesting talks on their numismatic experience abroad.

As most of the members of The Washington Numismatic Society are already members of the A. N. A. I have to depend on new members or coin collectors I meet to obtain members for the Association. During the past year I have procured thirteen new members.

O. L. LEWIS

District Secretary for Virginia

It was my long cherished hope that I might be able to present this report in person at the Chicago Convention but circumstances beyond my control render that impossible. I am, therefore, submitting my report on my activities as District Secretary for Virginia since November 17, 1943, to the present, July 31, 1944.

During March, 1944, I wrote every A. N. A. member on the list furnished by the General Secretary, except those near Washington and those already members of the Richmond Coin Club. In this I made each letter strictly personal, judging from the locality and membership number something of the background of each individual. In all there were 21 such letters, and 8 responses.

In each letter I stressed the importance of National Coin Week and the effort being made by the Richmond Club to put on the best display possible, giving the location so that those interested might be able to visit Richmond during the display. I also offered my services in assisting in any way possible to awaken a more active interest in numismatics with a view to procuring new members, and in the event there were a number of members in the same vicinity—like Roanoke and Norfolk—suggested the possibility of getting together with a view to organizing a coin club.

Since my appointment as District Secretary I have sponsored four Richmond applicants for membership in the A. N. A. In connection with National Coin Week, I contributed a 1000-word article in the Richmond Times-Dispatch for Sunday, April 16th, a copy of which was sent to Mr. Knoth with our report. As a result of this Display, which Mrs. Lewis attended most of the days to answer questions, etc., our local Club has increased its membership by four, while others have visited the meetings.

As President of the Richmond Coin Club during the current calendar year, my spare time has been pretty well taken up with the local work, since some of the more active and useful members have moved away, while others are working overtime and seldom are able to attend our meetings.

While the outlook for increased numismatic activities for the present looks rather discouraging, I shall endeavor to do what I can in the few leisure moments left me to contact other prospective membership material.

NORMAN B. MASON

District Secretary for Ontario, Canada

I haven't the courage to make up a report again this year. All I can say is that when opportunity seems to furnish an opening, I present the Association; but there does not seem to be any great interest hereabouts in coins. I have been able to give the Editor a couple of news items.

RAYMOND MOULTON

District Secretary for Nebraska

Interest in numismatics during the past year has been far beyond what most of us anticipated, and will no doubt level off in the coming year. It is our duty as officers and members of the greatest organization of its kind in the world, to maintain and increase our present membership during the forthcoming post war period. We can keep our members interested in coin collecting by petitioning our government to issue commemorative coins and distribute them through an agency, as they do commemorative stamps. We can appeal to them to resume striking proof coins including the silver dollar. We are due for a new series of one cent pieces in the near future. All these things would help to keep members interested and encourage new memberships.

Omaha is proud of our place in Numismatics, being the home of the famous Byron Reed collection which belongs to the people of Omaha and is housed in the Public Library. Anyone visiting Omaha is welcome to see this collection, and arrangements can be made with Mr. Nelson T. Thorson, past President of the A. N. A. We are also proud to have Dr. Judd and his well known collection of U. S. Patterns, gold and classical coins here in Omaha.

The Omaha Coin Club has passed its tenth anniversary and has thirty active members. We hold monthly meetings in the City Hall and visitors are always welcome.

M. JOE MURPHY

District Secretary for Arizona

Well, another year has rolled around and another convention is at hand; and as usual another yearly letter from your District Secretary, and as this is my honor from the state of Arizona, I shall be brief . . . Not much has been doing hereabouts, several of our coin collectors are in the Armed Forces, but we still have quite a number about the state yet, and new members are being added regularly to the American Numismatic Association by present members, and we are in high hopes for its continuance.

ARTHUR SIPE

District Secretary for Eastern Pennsylvania

Numismatics has been advanced in Eastern Pennsylvania by the formation of the Wilkes-Barre Numismatic Club last December, with a roster of twenty-five charter members. I extend them hearty congratulations on the formation of this club and wish them every success.

The American Numismatic Association is constantly stressed at the Philadelphia Coin Club meetings. A large percentage of our more than 100 members are affiliated with the A. N. A.

We in Philadelphia have held regular monthly meetings during the past year with an average attendance of thirty-five. We have promoted a coin exhibit each month at Ira Reed's store, 37 S. 18th Street, which has aroused a great deal of interest in numismatics.

National Coin Week was observed by the Philadelphia Coin Club with two separate displays: one at 37 S. 18th Street, and the other in the Parkway Building of the Philadelphia Free Library. These exhibits received honorable mention.

Under the able editorship of Roscoe F. Ballard, our club sends a news letter each month to those members in the Armed Services and to those unable to attend our meetings due to sickness.

During the past year a number of names have been added to the membership list of the A. N. A. from Eastern Pennsylvania.

JOHN M. TAYLOR

District Secretary for Western New York

Numismatic activities in this District have remained quiet during the past year, and as far as our local Club is concerned, no social gatherings were held. Our business meetings have been held regularly, that is, two meetings each month except during the summer.

The attendance at these meetings has not been as large as during the prewar years, but this is due to war activities on the part of the members. However, there has been a decided increase in A. N. A. members from the Western New York district, 21 having joined, and 12 of these new members were from Buffalo. Strange to say, very few of these new members from Buffalo have applied for membership in the local club. This may be due to the fact that they were unaware that we had a local coin club.

The Buffalo Club has issued its 18th annual Club token for 1944. I have mailed and distributed several copies of The Numismatist to prospective members, thereby acquainting them with our magazine and thus obtaining new members.

I wish to extend a hearty invitation to anyone interested in numismatics who happens to be in Buffalo, to attend our club meetings. Also, there are two Museums located here, namely the Buffalo Historical Society and the Museum of Natural Science, each of which has coin collections on display. It would be well worth the time spent to see these splendid collections.

CONVENTION NOTES

Coin Week Observance

President Kortjohn gives early notice of the observance of Coin Week in 1945: this will extend from April 14th to 21st. Ample time is therefore available for more thorough and effective preparation than ever before, and it is hoped the exhibits will excel, in both number and quality, even the best of former years.

Ripstra Honored

The Convention voted an Honorary membership to J. Henri Ripstra of Chicago, conferring a well deserved recognition of long and constructive service in the Association. His membership number is 939, which fixes his year of entrance at 1907. This was Farran Zerbe's first year as President; Howland Wood was General Secretary, Dr. George F. Heath was Treasurer, and Ben G. Green, Librarian; only one of this group—the first named—is still living.

Mr. Ripstra was elected a member of the Board of Governors in 1933 and 1934; was elected President in 1937 and re-elected in 1938; served on the Board continuously until the Convention of this year, when he declined re-nomination.

Awards

Resolution No. 9, to the effect that the sum of $300 be appropriated for awards "for the best articles contributed to The Numismatist" should arouse considerable interest among those qualified to submit papers of genuine quality. It has never been the policy of the magazine to pay for articles published, but this new departure is not inconsistent with such policy; nor does it take the place of the medallic awards proposed at the 1943 Convention. Complete details will be given as soon as the Executive Board has formulated them.

Registrations

Every officer and Board member was present—an unusual record. The membership registration was 139, visitors 51. The officers and Board members hail from eight different states. Six Past Presidents were in attendance: Alden Scott Boyer (Chicago), T. James Clarke (Jamestown, N. Y.), J. Douglas Ferguson (Rock Island, Quebec), L. W. Hoffecker (El Paso, Texas), J. Henri Ripstra (Chicago), and Nelson T. Thorson (Omaha).

Committees

The committees appointed by President Kortjohn to serve through the Convention were: Sergeant at Arms, Louis S. Werner. Resolutions: David Pierce, John H. Morris, C. T. Shelby, Damon G. Douglas. Proxies and Credentials: M. A. Powills, Charles P. Knoth, Prof. Hugh S. Buffum. Election: Harold R. Klein, A. R. Goodwin, Max Schwartz, Paul Ginther, Sol Kaplan, Frank J. Katen.

Auction

The auction, held on Saturday evening following the banquet, was well attended, and the 203 lots, largely uncirculated or proof, found a ready market. No report has been received as to prices realized. William Rayson served as auctioneer, and the arrangements were in charge of Clifford Lindall.

EXHIBITS

Only the briefest mention can be given here, although every display deserved extended notice. Needless to say, there were many rarities, in all metals and from all periods. Condition generally ranged from extremely fine to uncirculated and proof—a brilliant showing. Any omissions are, of course, wholly unintentional. Advance arrangements were in charge of Earl F. Barger.

EDWARD JOHNSON: Ancient Greek and Roman, English silver, large U. S. Cents.

OPAL H. MORRIS: Type sets of U. S. minor coins; Flying Eagle cents, 1856 and 1857, proofs.

FALL CONVENTION

IOWA NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION

Formerly announced earlier dates for the fall convention of the I. N. A. have been advanced to Saturday and Sunday, October 28 and 29, at Davenport. Headquarters will be at the Blackhawk Hotel. Loyd Gettys of Davenport, President of the Association, (recently elected member of the Board of Governors of the A. N. A.) has announced plans for an exceptional meeting—and they will need to be good to be “exceptional” in comparison with former conventions of this organization. Attendance by a number of national officers of the A. N. A., extensive exhibits, an auction (two sessions), banquet, entertainment—these and other items are likely to add up to an “exceptional” rating.

THE CHICAGO COIN CLUB'S SILVER ANNIVERSARY

The first annual convention of the Association was held in Chicago in October, 1891. Since then we have met there seven times, the last prior to this year in 1943—a "streamlined business convention"—which the Chicago Club rightly claimed should not be counted against their invitation for 1944.

For some years it had been the ambition of this Club to celebrate its 25th anniversary jointly with the annual meeting of the American Numismatic Association. Their ambition was realized this year, and a happy combination it proved to be.

The numerous details involved in preparing for every convention were ably managed, and the Club deserved and received the sincere congratulations of those in attendance.

The banquet on Saturday evening in the Grand Ball Room of the La Salle Hotel was in charge of the Club, through its local committee, with C. Lou Snyder as chairman. Those who served with him were Marie Boyer, Ruth Green, Anna Ripstra, Wanda Snyder, Clifford Lindall, and (probably as "official observer" for the Association) V. Leon Belt.

While the hotel would accept only 250 reservations, 271 were actually served. On the program of the evening was Mrs. Wanda Snyder, a harpist of fine ability, who was generous with her selections. Delene DeWitt, a gifted child of eight years, played charmingly on her violin, accompanied by Mrs. Snyder. Thirty-six valuable prizes were distributed through a drawing of numbers borne by the printed programs.

Earle Barger, Vice President of the Chicago Club, who presided in the unavoidable absence of President Pennington, spoke briefly of the Club's career, and, after presenting a number of their officers and members, introduced V. Leon Belt, our 1st Vice President, as master of ceremonies, who in turn presented the official family of the A. N. A., all of whom were present.

The Club is justly proud of the silver medal commemorating its silver anniversary. It is illustrated here; both the design and the die work are excellent. The design is by A. Smith, of Cincinnati; the medal was produced by Osborn Register Company, also of Cincinnati. C. Lou Snyder was in charge of this project. It is striking evidence of the initiative and sustained enthusiasm which has marked the first quarter-century of the Club's history.

NOTICE TO MEMBERS

The General Secretary is now

LEWIS M. REAGAN

G. P. O. BOX 103

BROOKLYN 1, NEW YORK

All communications to the Office of the General Secretary should be directed to the above address.

WHY THIS ISSUE IS LATE

It was considered desirable to include the Convention proceedings in this, the October issue, rather than to hold over until November, even though it meant the delay of a few days in mailing. Our members will no doubt approve this course, as it brings them the news of the Convention, with the various reports, a month earlier than otherwise.

THE WASHINGTON QUARTER

By EDWARD S. HORWITZ, A. N. A. 9046

Former President of the Cincinnati Numismatic Association

(A paper read before the C. N. A. on August 25, 1944.)

The current Washington quarter is one of our most beautiful coins in its dignified simplicity.

As the former Standing Liberty design had not been in use for the required twenty-five years, it needed an Act of Congress to permit the change in 1932, to commemorate numismatically the George Washington Bicentennial. This Act was passed on March 4, 1931.

Mr. John Flannagan designed the Washington quarter, which was the first United States coin of regular issue ever to bear his likeness. Washington's portrait had been used on coins struck in 1783, but they were neither issued or approved by the U. S. Government. It has been said that such approval might have been given had not George Washington's modesty made him feel that such honors were not for the living.

According to Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, Washington always took a keen interest in the Mint, and visited it frequently to personally supervise some of the work carried on there; and many of his messages to Congress contain references to the Mint, which show his solicitude for that institution.

The 1932 quarter was in reality a commemorative coin, and properly belongs in every collection of commemoratives. 5,400,000 were minted at Philadelphia, 408,000 at San Francisco, and 436,000 at Denver. The Denver coins seems to be the most elusive. After many years of selling at ridiculous levels, the S & D coins are finally coming into their own. Dealers are offering as much as $3.00 for each in quantity. They are scarce coins and are destined for higher prices.

The next issue was in 1934, as no quarters were coined in 1933. All collectors have noted that the words "In God We Trust" appear in low relief on all 1932 quarters. In other words, they are not much higher than the surface of the coin, and are not clear-cut as is the balance of the wording. What most collectors and dealers do not seem to know is that the 1934 quarter was struck from two separate and distinct dies, one having the words "In God We Trust" in low relief, the same as the 1932 coins, and the other having these words in high relief, the same as on the quarters of all succeeding years.

From my conversation and correspondence with dealers and collectors I have come in contact with very few who seem to know about these two distinct dies, and the catalog says nothing on the subject. All 1934 quarters taken from circulation appear to be of the high relief type, indicating that the one with the low relief motto is really a scarce coin.

The records of the Philadelphia Mint, which is the only one using the low relief die in 1934, show that on June 30, 1934, working dies were delivered to the Coining Department with the motto "In God We Trust" in higher relief, prepared on order of the Director of the Mint. The records there further show that up to June 30, 6,432,000 pieces had been coined that year, all in May and June; and that 25,480,052 were coined from July to December inclusive.

No accurate data is available as to when the new dies were placed in operation, but it is reasonable to assume that this was probably done immediately. This assumption is based first upon the fact that the new die was undoubtedly prepared because of some objection to the old one, and would therefore naturally be placed in use as soon as ready; and second, upon the fact that all 1934 quarters the writer has found over a period of years in circulation, are of the second type.

It would therefore appear that the ratio of scarcity of the first type to the second is at least 4 to 1, based on quantity minted. Actually the ratio is probably much greater, at least so far as uncirculated coins are concerned. We know from experience that collectors and dealers in previous years, from 1942 back, usually did not begin to accumulate rolls of uncirculated coins until at least several months after they began to appear, and often not even then.

Witness the manner in which collectors and dealers were caught napping on the 1939D, 1942D and 1942P type I nickels, and 1938D half-dollars. Now they seem to be rushing to buy 1939D cents, 1939-S nickels and 1942S cents. Undoubtedly, collectors and dealers failed to notice the change in die, as nothing has been said, written or published about it in all these years, to the writer's knowledge. Consequently, it is logical to assume that when the dealers and cataloguers wake up, it should prove to be a rare coin.

Incidentally, have you noticed the absence of the 1934P quarter in most dealers' ads, and its presence on most dealers' want lists? Quarters were also minted at Denver in 1934, but not in San Francisco.

There is a marked peculiarity in all 1935 quarters, even the circulated ones. They have a sharp raised rim around the obverse, so that it is possible to run one's finger-nail under it all around the circumference.

The Mint explains this as due to a heavy blow during the stamping process.

Two later dates of Washington quarters are probably underrated, and may stage a surprise some day. They are the 1937S quarter, with a total coinage of only 1,652,000, and the 1939S quarter with a coinage of 2,628,000. In comparison with other recent coins of greater coinage, they are behind the market.

Many collectors have stood by wishfully or blindly while the Standing Liberty quarter set climbed out of reach. The Washington quarters furnish another opportunity. A number of them are of smaller coinage than S. L. quarters selling for twice as much. Of course, quantity coined does not alone determine value. However, in several years from now the Washington set should give a fine account of itself. Buy tomorrow's rarities today. At present prices you can't go wrong. And don't let asking prices on the 1932S & D scare or fool you. They are sleepers of the first water.

In concluding this article, mention must not be overlooked of the Washington proof quarter, which with other recent proof coins, is very popular. Minted in very limited quantities it is an extremely desirable item. Dates and quantities struck are as follows;

1936, 3,837; 1937, 5,542; 1938, 8,045; 1939, 8,795; 1940, 11,246; 1941, 15,287 and 1942, 21,123.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid. Use only one side of the sheet.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Editor. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

IN BEHALF OF THE NON-COLLECTOR

Every numismatic exhibition of importance has its visitors from the non-collecting public. They are our guests for the time being, and come expecting to see something of interest—perhaps even to learn something of the more or less (to them) mysterious subject of coin collecting. Idle curiosity may in some measure account for the presence of many; but for the rest, they are there for a definite and obvious purpose. To what extent have we recognized this? We submit two suggestions:

First, that one or more members of the organization responsible for the exhibits be assigned the duty of extending a quiet but sincere welcome to all such visitors; learning if possible what, if any, special interest they may have in our hobby, and directing them accordingly. This might well be called the Courtesy Committee, the purpose and need of which are equally clear. A small matter, perhaps, but nevertheless large in its cumulative possibilities. Good will is a valuable thing in any business or profession—and clearly it has potential values in our own case.

Our second suggestion is this: a visitor "browsing around," as most of them do, must be baffled by the lack of descriptive material in so many exhibits. He sees a case of coins—gold, silver or bronze—filled with what must be valuable pieces, but to him many of them are just so many duplicates. He is not excited over microscopic die varieties, or a series whose only difference lies in the dates or mint marks. He views a case of Colonial coppers without a hint of the history back of them. He looks over a group of medals lacking even a mention of the artist's name. Ancient Greek silver may have little or no significance, for nothing tells him it was struck many centuries before America was discovered.

These examples could be multiplied at length, but they suffice to illustrate our point. To the initiated, a case filled with large cents in extremely fine to uncirculated condition, regardless of lack of descriptive material, is an exhibit of extreme interest. He needs no card to tell him that a fine 1794 U. S. dollar is a desirable rarity, and was our first coin of this denomination. He is familiar with the origin of the $50 gold slugs, and of the Pine Tree shillings. He knows why the Philadelphia mint mark appeared for the first time on the 1942 Jefferson 5 cent piece; he may know that the design of the Minute Man on the Lexington-Concord commemorative half dollar is taken from the first work of one of America's great sculptors, the late Daniel Chester French.

These examples likewise could be extended indefinitely. But what have we done to bring such facts out of obscurity for the benefit of our visitors? It is hardly necessary to add that no great amount of space is available for extensive descriptions; our point is that at least some items of popular interest might well be recorded here and there, with the strong probability that they would lend encouragement to potential collectors—a most desirable outcome.

Therefore, regardless of the fact that our exhibits are primarily for fellow collectors, it does seem reasonable that we should extend our purpose in the directions indicated herein.

FROM THE DESK OF THE GENERAL SECRETARY

The General Secretary has arranged with the Editor to use this space each month for announcements to the membership and for discussing various matters that may be called to his attention in the month's mail. The purpose is partly to avoid the necessity of individual correspondence on matters that can be handled here and at the same time to give all of the members the benefit of the information requested.

The New Directory

There have been numerous comments and complaints regarding the new Directory of the Membership. Some members have found the new arrangement a decided advantage over that used previously, others feel that the present style makes the directory much less useful. It should be explained that the new style was adopted as a result of numerous suggestions and requests that it be done in this way, and it does conform to the style used by many other membership organizations. It could be further improved by enlarging the listing under the geographical distribution to make it easier to locate members in any particular city. This is contemplated for the next edition.

The Directory contains some errors. The General Secretary urgently requests that you communicate with him regarding any inaccuracy that appears in connection with your own listing. A careful record will be kept of these errors and they will be corrected at the first opportunity.

Necessity of Postal Zone Numbers

It is important that the office of the General Secretary have your correct and complete address at all times. The present system of assigning Post Office Zone numbers in most of the larger cities is likely to remain a permanent plan. Your zone number is an important part of your address and should be used on all mail. Delay in delivery is almost certain to result if it is omitted. Please inform the General Secretary of your zone number if you have one and if it is not already on file.

Disputes

The General Secretary cannot undertake to settle disputes between members and dealers in connection with orders for coins. Care in placing the order, making sure that your complete name and address are inclosed along with correct remittance, and some indulgence because of delayed delivery of mail, will correct most of the difficulty. Cases of fraud are extremely rare and they should be reported to the Post Office.

The General Secretary cannot undertake to furnish special lists of dealers or members. The great volume of routine mail received daily makes this service impossible.

Proper Routing of Mail

Failure to receive a particular issue of The Numismatist should be reported to the Business Manager, not the General Secretary. The General Secretary has no means of investigating such matters except to refer them to the Business Manager. The Directory of Membership is mailed to new members on the date of their election to membership, except that at the present time there has been some delay because of the transfer of the office. These delayed copies will be mailed as soon as possible. Those admitted to membership prior to August 1, 1944 should have received their copies. If, not, please communicate with the General Secretary.

The General Secretary will welcome suggestions of any kind intended to assist him in making the work of his office more efficient and of greater service to the members.

DEATH OF DR. PHILIPP LEDERER

The numismatic world suffered a great loss by the passing away of Dr. Philipp Lederer, whose death occurred on September 2nd, 1944, in Lugano, Switzerland, where he had found a refuge at his sister's home. The Nazis respected this noble and modest scholar as little as they did so many other famous scholars, and in November of 1939 he fled from Berlin, after he was robbed of almost all of his belongings. Only with great financial sacrifice he could finally arrange to recover a few of his objects of art and his beloved library.

Dr. Lederer was born on August 25th, 1872, in Bamberg, Bavaria. He graduated from the Munich University with the degree of Ph.D. He travelled in Europe for several years. It was during this time that he laid the cornerstone of his collections. His interest centered in ancient coins and works of art from Greece, Rome and Egypt. But the Renaissance period attracted him intensely too, and through many years of careful study and with great discrimination he built one of the finest collections of medals and plaques of that period. And again, another "Renaissance period" fascinated him. Around the beginning of the 19th century the "Berliner Eisen Manufaktur" produced a number of medals, plaques and numerous objects for daily use and decorative purposes; with great diligence this collection grew to be the most nearly complete in private hands.

On January 1st, 1911, he established himself as a numismatist and art dealer in Berlin. He chose a strange place; an apartment on the third floor of an old-fashioned building on the bank of the river Spree, opposite the Museum and the "Muenz-Kabinett," where he used to work daily for many hours. I met him for the first time in 1913, and gradually a friendship developed which lasted until his untimely death. Philipp Lederer was an outstanding numismatist, but—what to my mind is more—he was an ardent lover and admirer of anything that is beautiful in ancient art. I used to say to him on my regular visits at the "Kupfergraben," "I consider myself to be a wanderer in the desert, and when I come to you it is like an oasis where I can gain fresh life." Under his hand his objects of art became alive, and he knew how to instill delight and admiration in his friends' hearts. To him the commercial angle of his "business" was of secondary importance only. He used to sell a coin or a sculpture or any other object just to make a living. As a bachelor he lived an extremely modest life, with the sole aim of being surrounded by beauty.

His main purpose in life was the study of Greek and Roman coins, and the fruit of his endeavors will be found in numerous articles published in various numismatic magazines. His earlier publications on Syracuse bronze coins, and tetradrachms of Segesta, as well as his later book on the coinage of Nagidos, have become standard references. During recent years he wrote another book which was published with the assistance of the Swiss Numismatic Society, the topic of which is unknown to me owing to the complete interruption of mail with Switzerland for the last several years.

The last news I received from him was in the fall of 1942. It was a picture card showing Philipp Lederer sitting at his desk, and studying a tetradrachm by comparing it with a book lying in front of him. In the background is part of his library, and beside him a life-size marble head of a beautiful Greek goddess. The card bears the date of his 70th birthday, with only two words: SEPTUAGENARIUS AMICIS. This text as well as the picture is typical of friend Philipp.

The last publication I received from him was his obituary on Mr. Newell's death, which will be found in the library of the American Numismatic Society. Needless to say, it brings not only a full account of Mr. Newell's life work, but is a fine testimony of the great admiration and reverence he had for our greatest numismatist. Only about two weeks before his untimely death Mr. Newell paid me a visit, and during a two hours' chat he frequently mentioned "friend Lederer" and his high esteem of him.

Now the two friends are united again, and for us who survive there is left the remembrance of two noble characters and scholars of the highest degree. Let us try to live and work in their spirit.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Knoxville, Tenn.

VIII. ITALY

Parma

In 1545 Pope Paul III (Alexander Farnese) gave Parma and Piacenza to his son Pierluigi. After eight dukes the Farnese line became extinct with the death of Antonio in 1731. The dukedom was then given to a son of Charles of Spain, handed over to Austria in 1735, and bestowed on another son of Charles in 1748. It was ruled by its Bourbon dukes until the French occupation in 1796. When Napoleon converted the Duchy of Tuscany into the Kingdom of Etruria in 1801, he chose for its king Louis, the heir to the Parmese duchy. After the old duke Ferdinand of Parma died in 1802, the duchy was incorporated into France and governed during much of the Napoleonic period by Moreau de Saint-Méry and Junot. The Congress of Vienna, in disposing of the pieces of Europe after Napoleon's fall, settled Parma, Piacenza, and Guastalla on Napoleon's second wife, Maria Louisa, the daughter of the Austrian Emperor, for life. Although she ruled for thirty-two years, she issued large sized silver coins in only two of them.

On Maria Louisa's death in 1847 the duchies reverted to the old line, and Charles II, the son of Louis, King of Etruria, and the grandson of the last duke, Ferdinand, succeeded. The revolutionary sweep over Europe in 1848 rocked his throne, and he abdicated the following year in favor of his son Charles III. The latter was assassinated in 1854 and was succeeded by his son Robert, the last Duke of Parma. As Robert was only a boy, a regent was appointed in the person of his mother Marie Louise, the daughter of the Prince of Artois and the Duke of Berry. A single issue of 5 lire pieces shows the accolated busts of mother and son. In 1860 the duchy was incorporated into the new Kingdom of Italy.

Lucca

Lucca, like many of the other Italian states, had played at being a republic during Renaissance times. About 1628 she settled down as an oligarchy and managed to maintain her independence until the advent of Napoleon. When that ruler decided to become an emperor, he thought it necessary or fitting to raise all his brothers and sisters to royal or princely rank. For his eldest sister Elise, who had married a Colonel Bacciochi, apparently a complete nonentity, he selected the Italian sphere. She was created Duchess of Tuscany and Lucca, and Princess of Piombino. Of the last two places she became the actual ruler.

She had a wonderful time, holding parades, issuing manifestos, and really governing. Napoleon protested to her to stop showing off, that nobody cared what the Duchess of Tuscany did, but she seems to have been an able ruler. Her coins show accolated busts of herself and her husband, Felix Bacciochi. The Neapolitans occupied her territories in 1814, and in 1816 they were handed over to Maria Louisa, lately Queen of Etruria, and her son Charles Louis, to be governed as a duchy. When the latter became Duke of Parma on the death of Napoleon's widow in 1847, Lucca was incorporated into Tuscany.

Lombardy - Venezia (1848)

The Congress of Vienna erected those portions of the Kingdom of Italy centered around Milan and Venice into a new kingdom and presented it to Francis I, who thus became King of Lombardy-Venezia as well as Emperor of Austria. For nearly fifty years the mints in Milan and Venice turned out coins for their Hapsburg ruler for local and Austrian use (listed under Austrian issues). The revolutionary spirit of 1848 was particularly felt in Italy. A liberal demonstration in Milan produced a massacre by the Austrian troops. All Lombardy rose as a result and the Austrians were expelled from the capital city. A provisional republic under Casati was established and union with Sardinia voted. Sardinia declared war on Austria to insure her gains.

In Venice, in the meantime, the popular party was also successful, and the Austrian governor capitulated. The provisional republic under Daniele Manin likewise voted for union with Sardinia. General Redetzky at the head of the Austrian troops reentered Milan in July 1848 and soundly defeated the Lombards and the Piedmontese. Charles Albert of Sardinia took the field again the following year in March but was so badly beaten by the Austrians at Novara that he abdicated. Venice held out until August of 1849 before being obliged to accept foreign rule again. The two republics lasted long enough in 1848 to issue a few coins. Lombardy minted a 5 lire piece and Venice two of them, one as an independent republic and the other as a hoped for part of a united Italy.

NEW YORKERS TO HOLD COIN EXHIBIT

A public exhibition of coins, bills and other numismatic items will be assembled by the various New York and New Jersey coin clubs jointly at the American Numismatic Society from October 14th to 29th. Collectors in the New York metropolitan area and numismatic visitors are cordially invited to view it. Those who saw the exhibit last year commented favorably upon it, and this year's exhibit bids fair to surpass it in its quality and range. The American Numismatic Society is located at 155th Street and Broadway. A general meeting of collectors will take place at the Concourse Plaza Hotel at 161st Street and the Grand Concourse on the evening of October 24th in conjunction with the annual dinner of The Bronx Coin Club. In order that proper arrangements may be made with the hotel, those wishing to attend this get-together should communicate with Mr. Homer K. Downing, 939 Woodcrest Avenue, Bronx 52, N. Y., sending $2 for each reservation.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

ATLANTA COIN CLUB—The 309th regular meeting of the Club was held at the Henry Grady Hotel September 6, with 23 members and six visitors present.

Quite a discussion was held regarding two meetings per month, but no action was taken. Several motions proposed in recent meetings have conflicted with the Club's constitution and by-laws, and notice is hereby given to members that at the next meeting these proposed changes will be brought up, discussed and voted on.

All members in the Armed Service were again voted to be carried on Club Membership Roster in good standing. Mr. George Walton had his usual good display of coins.

—PIERCE H. JAMES, SR., Secretary.

BALTIMORE COIN CLUB—The regular meeting of the Club at Peale's Municipal Museum was held on August 17, with 19 members present.

An exhibit consisting of bound numismatic literature, was prepared by Mr. John Sheckels.

The speaker, Mr. John Sheckels, chose as his topic "Book-binding for the Collector." He opened his talk by explaining that every collector receives numismatic literature in the form of pamphlets, magazines and auction lists, which are worth saving. But because of the prohibitive cost of binding them into book form, nothing is ever done about it, and the papers are soon lost or thrown away.

Courses in book-binding are offered by libraries, and at the present time the Boy Scouts have a merit badge pamphlet covering the subject. The speaker having studied the latter, explained how the binding could be done with very few tools and a small amount of material.

—ALFRED HUTTER, Secretary.

BRONX COIN CLUB—The 132nd regular meeting of the Club was held on Tuesday, August 22, at the Concourse Plaza Hotel, President Kortjohn presiding. Seventeen members and guests were present.

There was a discussion of the Eleventh Anniversary dinner to be held at the Concourse Plaza Hotel on October 24th, at the time of Metropolitan Numismatic Exhibit.

The topics of the evening were: Lincoln cents 1909-1944. Coins of Mexico (not including coins of its states) and Medals of statesmen and relating to statesmen. Mr. William L. Clark spoke briefly about the History of Mexico and illustrated his talk with 60 Mexican coins. Other exhibits were as follows:

—HOMER K. DOWNING, Secretary.

BROOKLYN COIN CLUB—The 135th regular meeting was held on September 6 at 174 Montague St., Brooklyn, President Charles P. Knoth presiding. Eighteen members and six guests were present. The topics were: U. S. coins dated 1870-1880, Game counters, coins and medals depicting other coins or medals, coins of Turkey. Recently held convention of the American Numismatic Association was discussed and members in attendance made reports. Mr. Kortjohn spoke of exhibit conducted by Clubs in metropolitan area to be held at American Numismatic Society in October and suggested that plans be made at once for our further participation. Mr. Kimpfner spoke of some interesting genealogical facts about some of the Roman Emperors. Mr. Schwartz read a paper on American Game Counters.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—Twenty eight members and guests were in attendance at the 198th meeting, held on the evening of September 5.

Mr. Paul Weiger favored the Club with a short but entertaining talk on his collection of wooden nickels. He mentioned the fact that wooden nickels or their prototype were in use in Byzantine times, and later in England. Tenino, Washington, is credited with being the original home of wooden money in this country. Originally used for small change, it later became customary to issue these pieces in commemoration of special events. Mr. Weiger's collection contains many hundreds of wooden nickels, and his talk was a revelation to collectors who have not entered this field.

An informative debate then took place on the subject, "Resolved that the price of coins is determined by the coin dealers." Mr. R. O. Priebe and Mr. Jack New supporting the affirmative, and Mr. Ralph M. Budd and Mr. A. P. Gasser the negative. Mr. Priebe maintained that dealers simply charge all the traffic will bear, and that collectors must pay their prices. Mr. New brought out the fact that prices in a standard catalog were determined by the opinions of the principal dealers regardless of economic laws which do not apply to luxuries. For the negative of the issue Mr. Budd argued that price is determined by the demands of the collectors and the condition of the coins offered for sale. Likewise Mr. Gasser stated that the law of supply and demand determines coin prices, and that this law cannot be changed. After considering the matter, the judges, Mrs. Hawley, Mrs. Stinson and Miss Charles, gave their decision for the affirmative.

—EARLE K. STANTON, Secretary.

CHICAGO COIN CLUB—The 307th meeting of the Club was held Sept. 6th at the La Salle Hotel, Vice Pres. Earl C. Barger presiding in the absence of Pres. Pennington. Sixty-nine members and guests were present. A letter from the Treasury Dept. regarding the repair of damaged gold coins was read. Mr. Imre Molnar read an extremely interesting paper on the Transylvanian coins he had on exhibit.

Reports from all committees in connection with the recent A. N. A. convention indicated that it was a decided success.

Dr. Reich presented the exhibits.

—CHARLES T. BOLUS, Secretary.

the absence of the President and Vice President. Eleven members were present.

—ALFRED GROSS, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 97th meeting of the Club was held August 31st at the Y. M. C. A. Club Rooms, with President Worth presiding. There were 26 members and eight visitors present. The secretary reported there were now 36 active paid-up members, 11 of whom are new members joining since January 1st. This is an all-time high for the Club. In addition, application for membership from three more collectors was received.

The meeting was a particularly good one, due to several fine talks and displays. Mr. Floyd Main read a very complete and interesting paper on the Maine Comm. half dollar, followed by a talk by Mr. Paul Fouts on "Patterns," which was a real treat. He remarked that for some strange reason probably the most beautiful and interesting series of all U. S. coinage has never been too popular with a majority of collectors. His explanation of the likely reason for this, was because of the average collector's unfamiliarity with these coins, and the fact that they are not legal tender and are seldom seen except in collections. Considering their rarity, they are still by far the most inexpensive of any U. S. series.

Displays: The feature display of many previous meetings was Mr. Glickert's collection of Pioneer gold, and deserves special mention. It consisted of 18 pieces, all of which are rare, but many excessively so, and mostly in Ex. fine to Unc. condition, as follows: Moffat & Co., (2) $5, (1) $10, (1) $20 gold pieces; Kellogg & Co., (1) $20; Clark, Gruber & Co., (2) $5, (2) $10, (1) $20 (1860, of which only 6 are known to exist); Mormon $2½, Lion & Beehive $5; Norris, Greig & Norris, $5; C. Bechtler, $2.50 and $5; and U. S. Assay Office, (2) $10 and (1) $20.

—HENRY H. ZECKSER, Secretary.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB

—The regular meeting of the Club was held in the form of a buffet supper on August 16, in the banquet hall of the Central YMCA. The ladies were invited, and 23 persons attended. Hugh G. Funkhouser, Vice President, presided, and had made all the arrangements for the evening.

The guest speaker of the evening, Adam Brothers, gave a very enlightening talk on Russian coins. He gave us the meaning of "ruble" and how it is one "cut" on a piece of metal; also that "kopaki" means cent, which is a copper piece equivalent to the dime. The speaker illustrated his talk with an exhibit of a dozen kopaki, which were 225 and 270 years old. They are the size of the American silver dollar. In comparison with these, Brothers displayed a kopaki of 1914, which was only the size of an American nickel. His collection was started in Russia and Poland after the last war, when collectors in those two countries were spending their collections to get what they could out of them.

Miss Dorothy Schrock displayed a collection of coins belonging to Russell Wagner, who is in the service at present, and is making collections of coins of all countries he passes through, majoring in Irish coins.

Mr. Benjamin Charles read an article telling how service men of this country have run into so many old type two dollar bills that Russian ferry pilots are spending. These had been saved since the last war when the Russian people had honored them for our men, and now they are being returned to us.

The meeting recessed after this to partake of the delicious supper offered, after which the ladies were each called on for a few words. They unanimously agreed that they should like to be invited to all meetings, and they praised the luncheon and decorations, thanking Hugh G. Funkhouser for arranging the second Ladies' Night of the year.

—F. BRUCE FABLE, Secretary.

Mr. W. Ray Carpenter, Chairman of the Exposition Committee, notified the Club that the number of exhibits was coming in very rapidly, and very shortly all the exhibit cases would be taken up. Mr. Carpenter was much gratified with the response he was receiving from the various Clubs and Societies. It was regularly moved, seconded and carried that The New York Numismatic Club would pay one-fifth the cost of insuring the exhibits, the Committee suggesting that each of the Clubs or Societies pay a portion of the expense.

The Executive Committee suggested as the topics for the October meeting: United States Eagles and Pattern Eagles; Coins of Holland and Belgium; Roman Republic up to 50 B. C. (Adopted.)

—F. C. C. BOYD, Secretary.

OMAHA COIN CLUB—Nine members and four wives of members opened our fall program by meeting for dinner at the Wellington Hotel on Sept. 1st. This was our 110th regular meeting.

A brief business meeting was held with President Blaufuss presiding. The Secretary read correspondence from the Bank of Mexico at Mexico City, stating they could not supply us with coins at this time due to the present coin shortage as a result of war conditions.

Mr. Thorson gave a talk in regard to the A. N. A. Convention. He reported the Convention Auction Sale was very well attended and many coins changed hands by private sales, and that the meeting was a big success. Mrs. Wilson read a paper which had been written by Mrs. Thorson. This paper told how the ladies of the A. N. A. were entertained at the Convention and about the Convention dinner and auction.

After a general discussion on numismatics and the present popularity of our hobby, the meeting was adjourned.

—RAYMOND MOULTON, Secretary.

—H. A. DAVENPORT, Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—The 111th regular meeting was called to order at 8 P. M. on Thursday evening, September 14th, in The Benjamin Franklin Hotel, Philadelphia, with President Richard T. Hooper presiding. In spite of an impending hurricane and terrific rain there were 27 members and guests present.

Ira S. Reed moved that an honorary membership in our Club be conferred upon Franklin H. Price, Librarian of The Free Library of Philadelphia, for the services he has extended to us thru the library.

The election of Lewis M. Reagan to the General Secretaryship of the A. N. A. was announced and a round of applause followed. We are indeed proud to have him as a member of our organization.

The exhibits of the evening were as follows:

Scott Brodie: A beautiful collection of proof half dollars.

Richard B. Farley: A Roman coin of Augustus and Agrippa. The reverse shows a lizard like animal instead of an alligator, with spines on the back.

Richard T. Hooper: A collection of Colonial notes of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, accompanied by the historical background of the notes.

Lewis M. Reagan: A type collection of Colonial and Continental paper money, including some of the great rarities. Most of these notes were suitably displayed and retained in an album.

F. J. Shaefer: A 1796 proof dime, a 1798 two and a half dollar gold piece with proof surface; a 1793 uncirculated C 1, large cent, AMERI, with the die break on the reverse; a set of proof three cent silver pieces, from 1856 to 1873.

His remarks were supplemented by some very fine slides of these notes, which were shown on the screen, as he explained the historical background for each note presented. He emphasized the importance these notes attained in the economic life of the Colonies immediately prior to and during the Revolutionary War. He was given a rousing vote of applause for his excellent presentation of the subject.

Public Auction Sale

NOVEMBER 25

IT GIVES ME GREAT PLEASURE to announce that I have been awarded the privilege of selling at public auction the Demand, Interest Bearing, Legal Tender and Coin Notes from the great individual celebrated original collection of Albert A. Grinnell, Detroit, Michigan. I think I can say without fear of successful contradiction that these notes are from the largest, finest and most complete collection of U. S. currency ever to be assembled.

This will be an opportunity of a lifetime. Many who see this announcement, whether they are collectors of U. S. paper currency or not, will want to be the proud possessors of specimens from this marvelous lot of notes. It will be to your advantage to anticipate your future desires to attend the sale in person, or submit your bids to me in due time. You will profit by a careful study of the catalogue and wish to state that this great sale takes place at Hotel Syracuse on November 25th.

This collection is not only unique from the standpoint of size, condition and completeness, but has many outstanding features, such as: Serial No. 1 notes of the first issue of Legal Tenders; a $1.00 1862 Legal, which has the portrait of Salmon P. Chase, also a letter written by Mr. Chase in 1863; a beautiful $2.00 1878 Legal with red seal and signed by Scofield and Gilfillan; $500.00 and $1000.00 Legals; a complete and extremely beautiful set of Coin Notes in all denominations and signatures; and one of the most beautiful Refunding Certificates ever known with a very attractive number. Space permits the mention of only a very few of the many characteristics of this magnificent sale which contains items of interest to hobbyists of all kinds.

This is the largest lot of notes of this kind ever to be offered, and it is quite possible that another collection of this size and distinctive qualities will never again be available. Be sure you get a catalogue, which will be one of the finest I have ever issued. If you are not on my mailing list send me a dollar for one of these catalogues and a pricelist. If your purchases from this sale amount to $10.00 or more I will give you credit on your invoice for fifty cents (the amount of the catalogue). The pricelist is fifty cents to all who may order it on or before the date of sale. After this date the price will be $2.50 for catalogue and pricelist. This will be the most complete and most valuable reference of its kind.

You will seek far for a better investment for value appreciation and can't go wrong by investing your money in Commemoratives.

PRICES SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE.

COMMEMORATIVE HALF DOLLARS WANTED

Am now paying the highest prices in years for uncirculated Commemorative Half Dollars. What have you to sell me? I can use complete or incomplete sets, small or large quantities, one to one hundred or more of a kind. Send me a list today of what you have, for my offer by return mail.

Also, I want to buy nice collections of other U. S. coins, such as Cents, Nickels, Quarters, Half Dollars, Silver Dollars, most everything from Half Cents to Gold, preferably in uncirculated or proof.

It pays to get my offer before selling, and if you really plan to sell, then we most likely will do business.

TO OUR ADVERTISERS

A number of comments have been received from collectors suggesting that when coins in rolls are offered, the number per roll be stated in every case. This would seem reasonable, especially since not all rolls contain the same number, and also because two different sizes of rolls are used in many banks for the same denomination.

Hereafter, will our advertisers please adopt this suggestion. New collectors especially will appreciate it.

WAR CASUALTIES IN COINS

By MARTIN F. KORTJOHN, President A. N. A., New York

Who among us has not thrilled at the first sight of a new coin issue, even if he later forms a dislike for it for one reason or another? Such thrills were what made the collecting of commemorative coins such a pleasure during the middle 'thirties. In 1942 and 1943, changes in our U. S. coinage gave us the opportunity of adding to our collections two new types of coins, namely the steel cent and the silver alloy five cent piece. Canadian collectors added three new types of coins to their collections, the "blackout" or twelve-sided five cent piece, the V piece in tombac, and the V piece in steel.

These pieces were made necessary because of the requirements of the war. As they are waged today, wars are the causes of many important changes. People who are permitted to retain their status as civilians are required to devote most of their time to the production of implements of war, weapons and supplies required by the men who have changed from a civilian to a military status. Among these important implements of war, weapons and supplies, are an enormous number of ships, tanks, planes, guns and varieties of ammunition, all of which require untold quantities of all kinds of metals and other substances.

In the armor plate used by our fighting forces, nickel forms an important part, and the United Nations are indeed fortunate in being able to turn to Canada for the greater part of their needs. Copper is also being used in huge quantities. Being one of the finest conductors of electricity, it is used in all electrical machinery and equipment, which includes motors, generators, transformers, wiring and ignition systems, radio receiving and sending sets and radar instruments. Other metals added to copper make alloys of widely differing characteristics that are put to use in many different ways. When tin is added to copper the alloy is termed bronze. Most of the so-called copper coins are really bronze. When zinc is alloyed with copper, the resulting metal is brass. In practice, combinations of tin, zinc, aluminum, nickel and lead, and sometimes other metals, are alloyed with copper to produce alloys with desired characteristics. Shell cases are made of copper alloys, and those of us remaining at home will appreciate the importance of alloys when we bear this in mind. These are just a few of the uses of copper which show its importance in the war.

Tin was previously mentioned as being required in the manufacture of bronze. It is also used to coat the sheet steel eventually used for the so-called tin cans. Before the war one of the principal sources of tin was Malaya, but when the Japanese took over that country other sources had to be developed. Our supply of tin is still curtailed and little may be diverted to civilian purposes.

Aluminum is one of the most plentiful substances on earth, but the extraction of the metal from its ores demands immense amounts of electricity. The government is taking most of the aluminum made for use in airplanes and light weight parts.

Since there is an unprecedented demand by the public for small coins, and since there is a limited supply of coinage materials, governments must meet the demand in the best manner possible. Some have resorted to the issuance of paper currency of low denomination. It is also possible that plastics, glass, clay or fiber will in due time be used as materials from which coins will be made, but so far none has been seen by us. No further mention will be made of bills or other non-metallic coinage in this article.

Nickel coins and coins of nickel alloy have, in general, been the ones most subject to change due to the war. They were replaced by others of zinc, aluminum, brass or by aluminum or nickel bronze alloys. Bronze coins have been replaced by brass or steel, or smaller pieces of bronze. A change from silver to bronze, such as occurred in Mexico, is a debasement of coinage, and is therefore not considered as a casualty due to the war and is not given in the list below.

We shall now briefly consider the different old and new coins, and learn how the governments issuing them are able to conserve the strategic metals. In the listing only six coins were originally struck in pure nickel. These coins are attracted by a magnet, but coins made with alloys of nickel with copper are not so attracted. Of the six, four were replaced by coins struck in copper alloys, one being in aluminum bronze and the other three in brass. The two remaining pure nickel coins were replaced by aluminum.

In the list are thirty-three old coins struck in a metal usually described as nickel, but actually an alloy of nickel with copper. The old U. S. nickel five cent piece is included with these, and it contained 25% nickel and 75% copper. Of the thirty-three pieces, eleven were replaced by aluminum bronze, seven by copper, six by zinc, three by bronzes containing less nickel, three by bronze, two by brass, and one by a silver alloy. It will be noted that these indicate a strong trend away from the use of nickel. The United States is unique in being the only country that has replaced the nickel in its coins with a so-called nobler metal, silver, of which it has plentiful supplies. The new composition of its five cent piece is 56% copper, 35% silver and 9% manganese. This small percentage of manganese gives the coin magnetic properties which are much more noticeable than in the old nickel.

It is interesting to note a three-step transformation of the coins of Brazil. At first the coins were of a nickel alloy, probably the same as the U. S. nickels; this alloy was discontinued and was replaced by an alloy resembling our old copper-nickel cents, though a little more red in color; the last step was to replace the nickel-bronze coin by one having a yellowish appearance, in which the nickel in the alloy was apparently replaced by aluminum or zinc.

France replaced one of its aluminum bronze coins by one of aluminum, whereas Germany replaced two of aluminum bronze with others of zinc. There are sixty coins in the appended list. Changes in forty-four have been mentioned, leaving a miscellaneous list of sixteen. Twelve of these were originally struck as follows: seven in bronze, three in brass, one in copper and one in gun metal. These coins are now struck in the following materials: one in bronze, three in brass, four in aluminum, two in zinc and two in steel.

The four remaining coins are interesting in that they represent conservation according to a different plan, namely, that of giving the public a smaller quantity of metal for its money. All the new coins are of the same material as those they replace. Three of them are smaller in diameter than their forerunners, the fourth is only half as thick.

This topic has been found to be very interesting, and after the cessation of hostilities many new war casualties will probably be uncovered that may add to the story of the conservation of vital materials required for the war effort. It is the expectation of the writer to expand the list after a sufficient number of additions have been obtained. The original purpose of preparing the list below was to concentrate in one place the changes in world coinage arising from the requirements of the war and to invite a further study of the subject by those whose interest has been aroused by the acquisition of a number of these pieces.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA PAPER MONEY:

CLASSIFICATION AND LISTING

By P. H. CHASE, A. N. A. 4286, Philadelphia

(All rights reserved by the author)

Foreword

This article and those to follow on the subject of Confederate States of America Paper Money are based on study of this interesting currency and of its various listings, and upon the development of a flexible Classification and Listing which has gained considerable acceptance among collectors.*

The principles underlying this new classification scheme and the methods employed will be presented, and in subsequent articles full listing and description of types (illustrated) and varieties will follow. It is hoped that interest in this somewhat neglected and not fully explored field will be promoted on a broader basis adapted to the needs of the beginner, the general collector and the advanced collector.

Historical

During the War Between the States paper money was issued in enormous amounts by the Confederate States of America. For a short time after the outbreak of the war in 1861 Confederate currency was accepted throughout the South as a medium of exchange of high purchasing power. As the conflict progressed, confidence in ultimate success waned, the emissions of paper money rapidly increased, and their dates of maturity were extended further into the future. The individual Southern States issued their own notes in great quantities. The inevitable result was depreciation of the currency, and soaring prices characteristic of inflation. This became extreme as the war approached its close in 1865.

At the termination of the war this currency became valueless as a medium of exchange. Some was destroyed as waste paper, some was hoarded from sentiment or futile hope, and some was preserved as curios. Later began the serious collection of specimens of the notes and study of the different issues and varieties in existence.

The first issue of paper money exemplifies engraving and printing of the highest quality. However, in only a few months the increasing demands for currency resulted in the employment of engraving, lithographing and printing firms inexperienced in bank note production, which resulted in lowered quality and a multiplicity of note designs in practically every denomination of the late 1861 and the 1862 issues. Many variations in plates, printing and papers appear in most of the issues.† With inferior workmanship, processes and paper in genuine

* The Numismatist, Vol. 49, p. 278, April, 1936.

† Indicative of the scope of varieties, 69 types of notes of which 50 have differences classed as main design, engraver or printing varieties, totalling 207. Twelve kinds of papers and watermarks increase the number of varieties to 319. The plate letter-number varieties, and other varieties classed as minor (excluding signatures), swell the total to about 2800.

notes, counterfeiting was not difficult. Consequently a large volume of counterfeit notes came into circulation, of which many readily passed as legitimate in the wartime confusion.

The earliest known listing of the currency of the Confederate States of America was prepared by Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet, and appeared in 1867 in Volume III of The American Journal of Numismatics. Although a step in the right direction, this list was very incomplete.

It was not until 1875 that Dr. William Lee, of Washington, D. C., collected authoritative data and wrote a history of the Confederate currency with illustrations and fairly complete descriptions of the types of notes, and certain varieties, including dates of issue. This book was privately printed and circulated to a very limited extent, but is little known today. However, it deserves high credit for the early development of the subject and its presentation of interesting sidelights on these notes.

In 1876 appeared a Catalogue and Price List by J. W. Haseltine, of Philadelphia, which listed and priced types and varieties similar to, but supplementing the work of Dr. Lee.

The first album for Confederate States of America notes was published in 1877 by C. H. Bechtel, of New York City. This was a well bound book which described the notes and provided a page for each type, as well as a page for reversed notes where the reverse side was printed. Of unusual historical interest is one of these albums which has survived with mounted notes that indicate a high degree of care in their selection.

In 1883 there appeared a listing by R. P. Thian, who was at one time an employee in the United States Treasury Department, at Washington.

In 1889 a Catalogue was published by George W. Massamore, of Baltimore. In 1893 or 1894 a Description and Price List was issued by Charles D. Barker, of Atlanta.

The Scott Stamp and Coin Company entered this field and issued price lists from time to time, but only of the types. More recently this activity has been carried on by Mr. Wayte Raymond.

In 1915 undoubtedly the most comprehensive and detailed listing of Confederate currency appeared in a book by W. W. Bradbeer. This work has long been out of print. His listing has been followed by many of those interested in this field. His work deserves great credit for the detail information included, the numbering scheme does not distinguish between types and varieties, and the arrangement is not flexible enough to meet the wide range of collector needs.

Each type of note was well illustrated in a series of descriptive articles, which included much historical material, by H. D. Allen in the issues of THE NUMISMATIST, June, 1917 to February, 1919.

Each of these listings has limitations which discourage their universal acceptance. They do not accomodate themselves to the different needs of beginners, general collectors and advanced collectors, to changing tastes, nor to the inclusion of new varieties which are discovered.

Consequently, there is a definite need for a scheme of listing which utilizes the large amount of information available, so arranged as to provide the collector in the Confederate currency field with a more useful, adaptable tool.

Following are described the requirements and a system which has proven advantageous. Subsequent articles will present the listing for the entire series of notes.

Requirements for a Classification and Listing

The arrangement should be basically simple, in order that the beginner or general collector readily may restrict his attention to the types only, but so flexible and the scope of information and reference so broad, that activities can be expanded into the varieties of the types as desired.

The method of identification should conform to a logical system which clearly identifies and describes major features characteristic of each type of note, and the subordinate features characteristic of each variety.

The listing should include cross references to other listings of different scope and arrangement, in order to reduce complications and facilitate rearrangement or reclassification by the collector and dealer.

The fundamental arrangement should be :

By date of issue, chronologically.

By denominations, commencing with lower values, in order to conform to the usual practice in the numismatic field.

By types, that is, by the major design features of the note and the colors of printing.

By varieties, classed :

- (a) Design, engraver and printing differences.
- (b) Paper and watermark differences.
- (c) Plate letter and number differences.
- (d) Signatures. (Infrequently referred to.)

The classes of varieties (a) to (d) are listed in what is considered to be the order of general collector interest.

Table I is a condensed Summary of Types and a Cross Index with other recent listings. For collectors interested only in types, the listing of this Table may be sufficiently comprehensive.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Buffalo, N. Y.

VIII. ITALY

G. Sardinia—Italy

The House of Savoy, the present royal family of Italy, descends from Humbert the White Handed, who was Count of Salmourenç in 1003. He obtained the Val d'Aosta and then the County of Savoy from Conrad, King of Burgundy. His descendants became Counts of Savoy in 1125, Ducs of Aosta in 1238, Princess of the Empire in 1310, and Ducs of Savoy in 1416. In 1450 they added the rather meaningless titles of King of Cyprus, Jerusalem, and Armenia as the result of an expedition which the then duke, Louis, made to the domains of the family possessions of his wife, a member of the Lusignan dynasty. They obtained their first European royal title in 1713 when they became Kings of Sicily, but when they were forced to accept Sardinia in place of Sicily, they perforce substituted the smaller island in 1720.

Carl Emmanuel IV (1796-1802), unable to cope with the difficulties produced by the French invasions, abdicated for the second and final time in 1802 and was succeeded by his brother. The kingdom was administered as a French province from 1802 to 1814, and the mint at Turin coined 5 franc pieces with the regular French designs. Victor Emmanuel I, Carl Emmanuel's brother and successor, became literally King of Sardinia when he fled in 1802 first to Florence and then to the island, where he remained until the Congress of Vienna restored his realms to him in 1815. Piedmont with its capital at Turin had become the heart of the kingdom, and to it were restored Nice and Savoy with Genoa and the Ligurian coast also added. The revived coinage of large silver pieces abandoned the scudo system and adopted the lire. On both types of the 5 lire coins the king's many titles are indicated. On the obverse, King of Sardinia, Cyprus, and Jerusalem; and on the reverse, Duke of Savoy, Genoa, and Montferrat, and Prince of Piedmont. Victor Emmanuel's second type appeared only in one year and is rare as the king abdicated in 1821 after a Carbonarist mutiny.

In the absence of the king's brother, his cousin Charles Albert acted as regent and granted a liberal constitution. But when the heir, Charles Felix, arrived in Turin, the constitution was abrogated and the regent exiled. The new king died in 1831 and with him ended the senior line of the house. Charles Albert, who had been exiled ten years before, succeeded. He was a fifth cousin and belonged to a cadet line of the royal house, the Princes of Carignano. He was devoutly religious and firmly opposed to revolution. His liberal tendencies came really from an intense hatred of Austria rather than from any deep seated democratic convictions. The idea of a united Italy under the auspices of Sardinia had been gaining ground for some time, and the king urged on by the Mazzini Society of Young Italy and by Count Cavour's influential paper went to the aid of Lombardy and Venezia when they rose in rebellion against Austria in March 1848. Exactly a year later after intermittent battles and armistices the Austrians decisively defeated the

His son Victor Emmanuel II succeeded. The next ten years saw all the groundwork laid for a united Italy by the Sardinian premier Count Camillo Cavour. He maneuvered Sardinia into the Crimean War and then France into war with Austria in April 1859. A short campaign produced the Treaty of Villafranca. Sardinia received Lombardy, although she was bitterly disappointed at not getting Venezia too, and was obliged to cede Savoy and Nice to France. The northern and central duchies expelled their rulers and clamored for union with Sardinia. As early as July 1859 Bologna was taken over, and under her governor the Marquis d'Azeglio she issued a 5 lire piece with Victor Emmanuel's head. By April 1860 a union had been formed, and a parliament met in Turin. In the south Garibaldi and his red shirts conquered Sicily and invaded the mainland to attack Naples and Rome. The Piedmontese army collaborating with him from the north eventually overthrew the Bourbon king in Naples. On February 18, 1861 an Italian parliament—representing all sections except Rome and Venice—met in Turin and proclaimed Victor Emmanuel King of Italy on March 17, 1861. For this occasion the mint at Florence struck a 5 lire coin. Venice was annexed to the new kingdom in October 1866 after the defeat of Austria in the Austro-Prussian War. And in 1870 Rome was finally added when Napoleon III had withdrawn the French troops from the city to participate in the Franco-Prussian War. Italy was at long last one.

Victor Emmanuel II was followed in 1878 by his son Humbert I, who was assassinated in 1900. The latter's only son Victor Emmanuel III, the present king, succeeded. Under this monarch Italy celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of her final union, and underwent the first and second World Wars and the ordeal of Fascism.

All the kings from Charles Albert on used simply the cross of Savoy as their coat of arms. Victor Emmanuel I and Charles Felix, however, the last two rulers of the senior branch of the family, displayed a more complex emblazoning on their shield. The quarterings include the arms of Sardinia—a cross cantoned with four Moors' heads; Jerusalem—a large cross with four small ones surrounding; the cross of Genoa, and the cross of Savoy with an escutcheon of pretense for France.

BOOK REVIEW

JEWISH SYMBOLS ON ANCIENT JEWISH COINS. By Paul Romanoff, Ph.D. Philadelphia: The Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning, 1944.

Even though the present reviewer is not qualified to pass judgement upon the value of this book from the point of view of numismatics, Romanoff's work has great merit as a historical and sociological study of the every day and religious life of Palestine of the late pre-Christian and early Christian eras.

Romanoff treats the numismatic types of the Jewish coins in that period quite uniquely in grouping them around a central theme, having a central idea. They are in the main agricultural symbols, connected with the Temple ritual. Thus, even though many types are found on Jewish coins which also appear on coins of non-Jewish origin, only those of special relevance to Jewish life are mentioned. The symbols consist of the various fruits and other plant life of Palestine, of the Temple building, the candlelabra, star, and other Temple utensils.

Romanoff divides the period of purely Jewish symbols on Jewish coinage into three sections: the Maccabean, reaching to the time of Herod the Great, the First Revolt Against Rome, 66-70 C. E.; and the Second Revolt Against Rome, 132-135 C. E.

Very deftly the author emphasises what he believes to be the main contrast between the Jewish and non-Jewish symbols on the coins of the same general region and time. Non-Jewish symbols tend to represent deities, generals, kings and the like, commercial and war-like exploits. Jewish symbols depict a "simple faith . . . the hope for a happier life . . . based upon the blessings received from nature—from God." All this only reinforces his central theme that all the distinctly Jewish types are Temple symbols. He proves this thesis by reducing the types of the earliest of the three periods of Jewish coinage, the Maccabean, to essentially three symbols: (1) Lulab and ethrog, the festive bunch and fruit used during the celebration of the Fall harvest festival, Sukkot. (2) Palm tree with two baskets of fruit, symbolic of Pentecost. (3) The cup, representing Passover.

One could have imagined it difficult to include such symbols as the trumpets, found on coins of the Second Revolt period, into this central thesis. But Romanoff very clearly proves that they were used in connection with certain fertility rites, practised in the Temple. Likewise other musical instruments appearing on Jewish coins of the same later period are interpreted by the author in pars pro toto fashion as symbolic of the hope for the restoration of the Temple. Thus the main thesis of this book is established, namely, that all these symbols have a homogeneous character, centering around the Temple, its festivals and objects.

The book, which is very brief, contains a wealth of information in several hundred footnotes; and it is indeed to be deeply regretted, as is also stated in the introduction by Mr. Abraham A. Neuman, that the untimely death of the author has deprived us of many an important insight and treatment of this material.

To Romanoff's text there are added coin plates and a coin plate index prepared by the author's devoted friend, Louis S. Werner of New York, Fellow of the American Numismatic Society.

"TODAY'S HAIR-DOS FROM YESTERDAY'S MONEY"

Thus is captioned the front cover illustration of the current issue of The Chase, bi-monthly employees' publication of the Chase National Bank, which depicts in photo-story form the arresting similarity between coiffures of women celebrities of early history and today's business girls.

A search among the 50,000 specimens of the Chase Collection of Moneys of the World on display at 46 Cedar Street, New York, disclosed that many coins and bills in this well-known exhibit carried feminine heads with hair styles and features surprisingly "modern." Thereupon the magazine's editors, "armed with coins, camera and comb," ventured on a search for parallels among the girls on the bank's staff.

They discovered that Cleopatra, who ruled Egypt some 2,000 years ago, had a striking counterpart in the coiffure and profile of an attractive member of the Chase personnel department. A Greek tetradrachm, issued several centuries before Cleopatra, was embellished with the head of a woman with a hair-do like that of a fair member of the transit department, even to a circlet of flowers in their "crown of glory." A Greek didrachm struck at Thrace about 338 B. C. showed Demeter wearing the identical "page boy" cut now the vogue of a girl in one of the bank's branches.

Of more recent origin, a Netherlands coin of 1897 with a likeness of the then girl Queen Wilhelmina reflected the current coiffure of a member of the Chase's duplicating department. The easy-to-manage "gamine" or "feather cut" of the young King Alfonso XIII of Spain on an 1892 five-peseta piece was found to parallel the current hair style of a Chase officer's secretary. A Thessalian coin issued B. C. revealed that the fountain nymph Larissa has a modern "sister" in hair-do and features in the bookkeeping department.

Including the cover, the magazine pictures fifteen pairs of "coiffure coincidences" covering a period from 500 B. C. to a 1943 Bank of France five-franc note.

Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid. Use only one side of the sheet.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Editor. Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

Opinion seems clearly divided concerning the value of the club meeting reports carried in each issue of THE NUMISMATIST. We have attempted to discover the general trend over a considerable period, and while the results have been interesting, the sentiment seems, on the whole, pretty well balanced as between favorable and unfavorable judgment.

One meets with two extremes: some declare they never read the reports; others claim to read them all every month. Between these fall the much larger number: those who are seemingly interested only in their own club's notice; others who scan the pages for exhibits; still others (a few) who carefully search out any unusual item of club activity, or of numismatic news; who are alert to find something novel in the way of an evening's program, or to learn of a worth while paper which may have been presented.

Hardly a month goes by, however, that some idea is not presented which many clubs might find profitable if adopted. Not that they are always new, but they could be employed in numerous cases for the first time, with a resulting increase in interest—which, if sustained, means a better attendance.

A number of good ideas are to be found in this month's reports. For instance, the Brooklyn Coin Club devoted a part of their program to the reading of several current news clippings from various sources, all of them having more or less numismatic interest. The Atlanta Coin Club discusses the completion (as far as possible) of their file of back issues of THE NUMISMATIST—a most desirable thing for any club.

The Pacific Coast Numismatic Society tells of a notable showing of slides, the coins in their natural colors, projected on a screen in greatly enlarged dimensions; with this fine exhibit, which was assembled by Dr. Glen Curtis of Brea, California, was an appropriate lecture.

The Reading (Penna.) Coin Club held an open house at their last meeting, having invited through the press non-member collectors and any other interested persons in the community; they were happily surprised when no less than sixty accepted; the exhibits displayed by the members were explained, questions answered, and a general good time enjoyed. How about a guest night once or twice a year, for all clubs?

The Boston Numismatic Society is considering a bookplate for use in its library—a most commendable idea. Why shouldn't the A. N. A. have one? With the extensive Library we now possess a bookplate would certainly be justified; it would not only identify the ownership of the volumes, but would add a distinctive touch that many would appreciate. We don't mean stock bookplates that can be purchased by the hundred, but one appropriately designed and engraved especially for the Association. It is well known that there are bookplate collectors and societies, and many gems of engraving are to be found in any extensive collection.

We mention these examples for two reasons: as a hint to many clubs that have found program planning difficult, and as a tribute to those which have explored the possibilities lying outside their usual routine.

FROM THE DESK OF THE GENERAL SECRETARY

Continuing the practice started last month, this space is devoted to announcements and comments from the General Secretary, intended to facilitate the handling of matters of general importance and concern to the membership.

The transfer of the equipment and office records from the previous office in Chicago to that of the present General Secretary is complete and the work is mostly up to date. Membership cards and membership directories have been mailed to all members entitled thereto. If delivery has been delayed, please notify this office.

Statements for 1945 dues are now being prepared and will shortly be in the mails. It will be appreciated by the General Secretary if these are given your prompt attention. Members are reminded that annual dues, including subscription to The Numismatist, are entered only for a calendar year or for the last six months of a calendar year. Arrangements can be made to have The Numismatist begin with any available issue, but all membership subscriptions must expire with the December issue (except where advance dues are paid). This means some adjustments must be made in cases of transfer of non-member subscribers to members, and for some other members coming in during the past six months. Statements for 1945 dues will be adjusted so that only the balance due for 1945 will be entered.

Membership cards for 1945 will be mailed as soon after the receipt of dues as possible.

Notice to District Secretaries

Stationery, application blanks, and other supplies are now available. It will be helpful if you will notify the General Secretary of your probable needs. Copies of the Haskin booklet are available. You may also secure extra copies of The Numismatist if you can use them to good advantage in your work for the Association. Any other possible assistance will be given you by the General Secretary, acting at present also as Director of Publicity.

Notice to Non-Member Subscribers

You are again reminded that without extra cost you may have the advantages of membership in the Association. The unexpired part of your subscription will be credited toward membership dues. The only remittance required is amount necessary to adjust your subscription so it expires not sooner than December 1945. Write to the General Secretary for an application blank and further particulars.

Life Membership

Members in good standing for the past five years or longer are eligible for life membership. The fee is still only $50. This is a good time to apply. Write for special application blank.

Associate Membership

To members whose wives are interested in collecting: why not an Associate Membership for the Mrs.? Costs only $1.00 per year and includes all advantages of membership except The Numismatist. This class of membership is restricted to persons closely related to members and living at the same address.

In this space next month will be discussed some ways and means of starting a local coin club and some suggestions for making meetings more interesting. The General Secretary receives many requests for such advice and is very happy to give it. He will also welcome suggestions from others which can be passed on where they will do the most good.

LEWIS M. REAGAN, General Secretary.

AN IMPORTANT COMMUNICATION
(Published at the Request of President Kortjohn)

TREASURY DEPARTMENT
Washington

September 14, 1942

American Numismatic Association
451 Wrightwood Avenue
Chicago, Illinois

Sirs:

It is the opinion of this office, based upon the evidence presented, that you are exempt from Federal income tax under the provisions of section 101(6) of the Internal Revenue Code and corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts, as it is shown that you are organized and operated exclusively for educational purposes.

Accordingly, you will not be required to file returns of income unless you change the character of your organization, the purposes for which you were organized, or your method of operation. Any such changes should be reported immediately to the collector of internal revenue for your district in order that their effect upon your exempt status may be determined.

Since any organization which is exempt from Federal income tax under the provisions of section 101 of the Internal Revenue Code also is exempt from the capital stock tax pursuant to the express provisions of section 1201(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code, you will not be required to file capital stock tax returns for future years so long as the exemption from income tax is effective.

Furthermore, under substantially identical authority contained in sections 1426 and 1607 of the Code and/or corresponding provisions of the Social Security Act, the employment taxes imposed by such statutes are not applicable to remuneration for services performed in your employ so long as you meet the conditions prescribed above for retention of an exempt status for income tax purposes.

You will be required, however, to file annually, beginning with your current accounting period, an information return on Form 990 with the collector of internal revenue for your district so long as this exemption remains in effect. This form may be obtained from the collector and is required to be filed on or before the first day of the third month following the close of your annual accounting period.

Contributions made to you are deductible by the donors in arriving at their taxable net income in the manner and to the extent provided by section 23(o) and (q) of the Internal Revenue Code and corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts.

Bequests, legacies, devices or transfers, to or for your use are deductible in arriving at the value of the net estate of a decedent for estate tax purposes in the manner and to the extent provided by sections 812(d) and 861(a)(3) of the Code and/or corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts. Gifts of property to you are deductible in computing net gifts for gift tax purposes in the manner and to the extent provided in section 1004(a)(2)(B) and 1004(b)(2) and (3) of the Code and/or corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts.

The collector of internal revenue for your district is being advised of this action.

By direction of the Commissioner.

Respectfully,

(Signed) J. MOONEY
Deputy Commissioner.

A POST WAR CONSIDERATION

The next great task of humanity is not deliverance by the sword, but deliverance from the sword.—David Lloyd George.

LEAVED DIME

By R. S. CALDWELL, JR., Pittsburgh, Pa.

An uncirculated specimen of the Leaved Dime, a variety of the 1944 P Mint Dime, was exhibited at this year's A. N. A. Convention at Chicago.

This coin has been so named because, on the obverse, beautiful outlines of small clusters of leaves, readily discernible to the naked eye, are formed around the head and are to be found at the forehead, at the bridge of the nose, protruding from the nostril, under the chin, and at the back of the neck. There is also the outline of a branch or limb running parallel to and near the front of the neck.

Enlarged Reproduction from an Unretouched Photograph
Cut furnished through the courtesy of R. S. Yeoman

Several members of the Chicago Coin Club, after a careful examination of the coin, concurred in the opinion that this phenomenon was caused in the following manner: when the obverse and reverse dies were placed in the coining machine for adjustment, the obverse die was forced against the reverse die, causing the leaf formations on the reverse die to become impressed into the obverse die.

This seems to be the plausible explanation for the existence of the reverse leaf formations appearing on the obverse side of the dime.

Presently, only sixteen specimens of the coin are known to exist.

HALF CENTS ORIGINATING OUTSIDE THE MINT

You may have a United States half cent of 1812—it is not improbable; but somebody else has the other half, and the two pieces joined together would make a whole cent of 1812. The joke has been played on us before. The custom of cutting or breaking gold and silver coins is very ancient, and originated with the Athenians.

A coin was divided in halves, one half retained by the native of Attica, the other given to the stranger whose acquaintance he had made. The bearer of the symbol, whether one of the original parties or only a friend, was entitled to all the rites of hospitality from the owner of the other half. In modern times, coins were cut by lovers as tokens of affection or engagement symbols, and this practice will, no doubt, account for the many odd halves of coins met with at the dealers' stores. These broken coins, "pledges of love," are frequently referred to in poem and story.

ORGANIZED NUMISMATICS IN AUSTRALIA

By J. HUNT DEACON, Adelaide, Dist. Sec'y. for Australia

From February 1913 the collective action in the study of coins, tokens, paper money and medals in Australia has had its ups and downs. Taking a retrospective view of organised numismatics, one is inclined to regard 1926 as its highest peak, 1939 as the period of revival, and 1931 and 1940 as the commencement of its lowest ebb. Before explaining the reasons for arriving at these dates, it is necessary to go back to the beginning and see just how the various Societies for numismatic research began.

In February, 1913, a few enthusiasts were called together in Sydney, New South Wales, by Messrs. S. R. Mort and D. Raymond. The outcome of this meeting was the foundation of the first numismatic society in Australia. Being the first of its kind it took the distinctive title of THE AUSTRALIAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY. In Victoria there were at the same time several important collectors and they founded in Melbourne in the following year THE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF VICTORIA. The founders of this body were Messrs. Francis Gardner and S. E. Whellams; and among its foundation members was Mr. D. Raymond of the elder society. What might be regarded as the "unofficial society" of South Australia (see "The History of The Numismatic Society of South Australia," published in The Australian Numismatist) started in 1917 in Adelaide, when a few enthusiasts met on Saturday afternoons in the Coin Room at the Museum. Definite links between this group of collectors and the official Society were made by Dr. A. A. Lendon, Miss Sedley Towler, Mr. C. B. Hillman, and the writer. At a meeting convened by the latter, the NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA was founded in April, 1926.

The first proposal for an all-Australian and federally controlled body was put forward by the writer in 1928, although it had been discussed some two years earlier. This plea for partial amalgamation of the existing societies was unsympathetically received by two of the bodies and withdrawn. It was apparently too early for such action.

Every society was, in 1926, in a fairly sound and comfortable position. The Sydney body had increased its membership by fourteen in the preceding three years. The Melbourne society had just issued its excellent Decennial Report (1924), and was in a fair way to repeat its success in the next decade. The Adelaide body had just commenced operations and was full of youthful enthusiasm. Everything augured well, but the reverse happened. From 1926 to 1931 the Victorian body had dropped in membership to a mere handful, and finally affiliated with the local Historical Society. The South Australian body, finding itself in a similar predicament, went into recess. The Australian Numismatic Society also suffered a decrease in membership, but continued to do excellent numismatic work, mainly by first class articles and papers given by Drs. Abbott and MacLeod, Mr. Elliott Smith, and its courteous and obliging Honorary Secretary, Mr. C. J. V. Weaver.

During the years 1926-1931 much of the enthusiasm possessed by many of the collectors was dampened by the conservative attitude of some to new ventures, and a refusal to go out and obtain members. However, the faults and failings of the societies were not wholly responsible for the position. The widespread depression had a distinct effect upon the membership as a whole and upon individual collectors. Compelled by force of circumstances to refrain from actual collecting, or to break contacts with collectors and societies overseas, many lost heart. The accumulators dropped out, leaving a few students who were determined to make best use of their time. They took a greater interest in the national collections and the specimens of others. The depression was the testing ground for the real numismatists, and it is as surprising as it is regrettable, that so few weathered the storm. By June, 1932, the crisis had been reached, and only one society, the eldest, was operating.

September, 1938, when THE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA reopened, might be regarded as the commencement of a revival. The re-established society possessed new blood, eager enthusiasts, as well as a few older members who had maintained a keen and sincere interest in the society from its infancy. In Victoria lectures were arranged at the National Gallery, and in New South Wales there was a feeling that another society could be started with advantage.

Relieved of any responsibility in the local society by his resignation in November, 1938, the writer was able to turn his attention once more to the idea of combining the numismatists of Australia into a federal body. This time it was proposed to establish an Association which would be independent of the societies, in management and aims. In this able support was received from Mr. A. S. Kenyon (Hon. Secretary of the Victorian body); Mr. D. Raymond (co-founder of the Sydney society); and Mr. R. G. Appleyard (Hon. Secretary of the Adelaide Society). The Association was founded on July 1st, 1939, with a membership of thirty, including several who had already left their mark on Australian numismatics. Close upon this, in fact on the 13th of the same month, THE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF NEW SOUTH WALES was established through the earnest and energetic work of Mr. D. Raymond.

Australia has possessed, and still possesses, some particularly industrious and capable numismatists whose names should be better known. The existence of the societies is the result of much work on the part of such men as Abbott, Andrews, Anthony, Chitty, Frewin, Gardner, Green, Gullick, Hagley, Kenyon, Le Souef, Leppinus, Marks, Mort, Parkes, Priestly, Raymond, Schaefer, Schmidt, Elliott Smith, Weaver, Whellams, and also Miss Sedley Towler (Government Numismatist of South Australia, 1917-1931).

Just as things were looking bright again, the War broke upon us, with its disruption of normal life. The Australian Numismatic Society was so affected that in 1942 it went into recess, while, this time, the other societies carried on, but with depleted membership and decreased funds. Even the federal body was forced to go into partial recess (1943) and to suspend the issue of their Journal. However, I am convinced that, at the close of the war, numismatics here will again forge ahead. The extent of this movement will be governed by the influence exercised by a united and progressive Association, more numismatic societies with vigorous policies, more enthusiastic reception of new ideals, a greater appreciation of past numismatists with a desire to emulate them, and a whole hearted support of those endeavouring to place Australia on the numismatic map of the world.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

The final report of the National Coin Week Committee was submitted in writing by Mr. Schumacher, Chairman. O'Day described the Australian coinage and he presented the Club with an uncirculated crown of George VI. The matter of the annual installation of officers and accompanying banquet was discussed and a motion carried to hold the usual banquet at the January meeting.

The speaker of the evening was Dr. Charles Harbeck, Past President, who spoke on "Coins of the Middle Ages." Dr. Harbeck called attention to the fact that the middle ages were a period of unrest and poverty and the coins generally not of an artistic nature. The feudal system prevailed with many powerful lords and rulers, strong and weak, with the church stronger than all rulers. The speaker briefly described the Byzantine coinage, the crusaders' coins, bracteates, ducats, English silver pennies, and many other pieces of this period, accompanying his talk with specimens from his large collection. The age was one of cathedrals and castles, many of which were illustrated by postcard views collected in Europe. The English series of coins alone would occupy a collector for his life time since there were some sixty different mints issuing coins during the life of one king. At the conclusion of the interesting address, Dr. Harbeck answered many questions relating to his subject. Mr. Christ Lazaro will be the speaker at the November meeting.

OMAHA COIN CLUB—111th meeting, October 6, President Blaufuss presiding, with ten members and three visitors present.

Discussion was brought up in regard to holding monthly meetings at members' homes. Inasmuch as some of our members that are most interested in this plan were absent a motion was passed to table further discussion until next month.

Mr. Hartman invited the club to hold the December meeting at his home, and President Blaufuss gratefully accepted the invitation in behalf of members of the club.

Ray Moulton made a brief talk in regard to members that are in the service and urged our members to write to these service men.

Coins and currency for auction and exhibit were owned by Mr. Hensley, Ray Moulton and Mr. Stoltz of New York.

—RAYMOND MOULTON, Secretary.

ORANGE COUNTY COIN CLUB—The Club had the rare opportunity of hearing a very scholarly address by Mr. Chrest Lazaro of Los Angeles at the September meeting.

He discussed the minting of gold coins in the United States from the beginning and brought to the club a rare collection of these coins, about 300 in number—all in beautiful condition—truly museum pieces.

Another feature of the meeting was a display of "Hard to Get Coins" and a complete type set. This display was entered in the S. M. Koeppel, $50 war bond award, for the outstanding exhibit of the year. This collection was entered by Mr. W. L. Gunn of San Pedro.

The meeting was well attended by some 75 members and guests.

—C. GLENN CURTIS, M. D.,
Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—The 112th meeting of the Club began at 6:30 P. M. on Thursday evening October 12th in the Garden Terrace of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel. This was the occasion of our annual banquet, and we were entertained at dinner by the new ice extravaganza, "Ice Fantasia."

The regular meeting followed the dinner; it was called to order at 8:30 by President Hooper, with 35 members and guests present, including the ladies.

The following officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing year: President, Richard T. Hooper; Vice President, Gorgas Bechtel; Treasurer, Edward B. Haden; Curator, Ira S. Reed; Secretary, Arthur Sipe.

The exhibitors of the evening were as follows:

Richard B. Farley: The October 9th issue of Life magazine which included pictures of the invasion money as used by the Axis and Allies.

D. C. Wismer: A quarter of a dollar note dated 1784, signed by David Ritzenhouse. Mr. Wismer explained that to his knowledge this is the only one of these notes in existence.

Edward B. Haden: His encyclopedia of U. S. copper coins from 1793 to 1857. He compiled and arranged this volume and had it beautifully bound.

Richard T. Hooper: 109 varieties of the half cent in coin holders including many rarities, such as the 1856 copper nickel and the 1808 G. 3.

Samuel A. Tatnall: A mounted series of United States rare coins including the 1856 Flying Eagle cent, unc.; an 1864 two cent piece, small motto, proof; an 1877 three cent piece, nickel, proof; an 1877 five cent piece, proof; an 1864 three cent piece, silver, proof; an 1860 half dime, obverse "59" and reverse "60," proof; a 1797 dime, 13 stars, V. F.; an 1877 twenty cent piece, proof; a 1796 quarter, H1, V. F.; a 1794 half dollar, H1, V. F.; an 1858 silver dollar, proof; and an 1878 c. c. trade dollar, unc.

Julius Windner: Two Columbus medals; one complete set of two shilling pieces of the Austrian Republic; one Norse American medal, and a 60th anniversary medal of Queen Victoria.

The last four exhibitors were monthly winners during the past year and tonight competed for the annual award certificate. Richard T. Hooper won the award.

William A. Schick, Jr., discussed at length Wayne Raymond's 1945 catalogue of U. S. coins and included in his remarks some suggestions for improving it for the average collector. The topic was freely discussed from the floor.

President Hocber conducted a very interesting quiz made up of numismatic questions. The group was divided into two teams and the winners Joseph A. Byers and Roscoe F. Ballard each received a set of Vatican stamps sent to the Club by Sergeant George Magee, Jr., from Italy.

The evening's auction, made up of some very fine U. S. notes and coins, was conducted by William A. Schick, Jr.

—ARTHUR SIPE, Secretary.

PACIFIC COAST NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The Society had an unusual monthly meeting at Hotel Whitcomb, San Francisco, on September 27th, when the program was presented by visiting members of the California Coin Club of Los Angeles and the Orange County Coin Club of Santa Ana.

The outstanding event of the evening was a presentation of colored slides projected on a screen. These slides were photographs of interesting coins from the outstanding collection of Dr. Glenn C. Curtis of Brea, Calif., Secretary of the Orange County Coin Club. A lecture on the coins themselves was given by Holger Jorgensen as Dr. Curtis operated the projector.

In addition to being a beautifully illustrated coin talk presented in an unusual manner, the event demonstrated extreme care, patience and expertness from a photographic point of view. The coins, photographed in natural color were presented on the screen in a sharp detailed image several feet in diameter, thus presenting a fine opportunity for study. The coins presented had been taken from the comprehensive collection of Ancient Greek and Roman, Chinese coins ancient and modern, Byzantine and medieval pieces, Mexican silver, and many other numismatic items of all periods. Conspicuous in the collection were gold staters of Syracuse and Macedon, gold aurei of Julius Caesar, Tiberius and other ancient rulers. Dr. Curtis referred to his presentation modestly as being "something new in numismatology."

Mr. Adolph Larson, Jr., President of the California Coin Club, spoke briefly and brought greetings from both of the sister clubs. All visitors were introduced by Ralph A. Mitchell, Chairman for the evening. President N. O. Slate presented both Dr. Curtis and Mr. Jorgensen with beautifully engraved framed Fellowship Certificates naming them as Fellows of the Society. Edward Fogler, Secretary, arranged the meeting and also arranged for the dinner which preceded the meeting.

The meeting was attended by over one hundred members and their guests.

LIEUT. JOHN E. LENKER,
Asst. Secretary.

ROCHESTER NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—The 732nd meeting of the R. N. A. was called to order at 8:30 P. M. at the Rochester Museum of Arts & Sciences, October 3, with 16 members and two visitors present.

Exhibits at the meeting included:
Carbon medal: Barney Bloom.

Shell money from the West Coast:
G. J. Lindboe.

Complete collection of small cents including the 1856, mostly in uncirculated condition: C. E. Moore.

Panama Pacific $50.00 gold piece, and a proof $20.00 gold piece: Charles Foster.

Mr. Kolb announced that he had brought with him the Hutchinson Presidential Medal. It was regularly moved and seconded that a copy of this medal be reserved for all members in the armed forces. Unanimously carried.

Mr. Bloom spoke on the $1.00 bills that are in circulation which have a Red R and S on them. He stated that the reason for this was that a new type of paper is being tested.

Clark Place gave a very interesting talk on Inflation in the United States.

The meeting was then adjourned to the Auction with Mr. Lindboe serving as auctioneer.

—FRANK E. EICHORN, Secretary.

READING COIN CLUB—The 100th regular meeting was held September 25th at Reading Railway Y. M. C. A., President Paul Herben presiding.

At the previous meeting the Club decided to make our 100th meeting different, so through the Reading papers we announced an open meeting, inviting non-member collectors, junior collectors, and any interested persons.

The response exceeded our most optimistic expectations, for well over 60 guests attended. Members had coins displayed, and explained them to all who were interested. Toward the close Earle Sherwood gave a talk on "What Shall I Collect?" and illustrated various branches of our hobby with his own display.

The exhibits were:

O. B. Adams: Rare $3 and $20 gold.
Harry Adams: Large U. S. paper money.

Roy Haas: Mercury dimes, Unc. Indian Head cents, complete.

Harry Ressmiller: Washington Colonials.

Warren Ruth: U. S. Fractional currency, also current crisp U. S. bills from $1,000 down.

Richard Hunter: California gold.

J. Milton Moyer: Complete set U. S. nickels, 1866 to 1844.

Paul Herbein: U. S. half cents, including die varieties.

George Young had an exceptional display of rare U. S. Colonials, including such pieces as the 1787 Indian New York Arms cent; 1786 NON VI VIR-TUTE VICI New York cent; large copper 1792 Birch cent; 1796 Middledton token in copper, and Ephraim Brasher's gold doubloon, punch on wing.

There were 14 regular members present.

—E. D. SHERWOOD, Secretary.

SPRINGFIELD COIN CLUB—325th meeting, October 11th, held at the Museum of Fine Arts, President Wheeler presiding, with ten members present.

The exhibit and talk was given by Chief Petty Officer Thomas A. Cotter of the U. S. Navy. His subject covered money of the world, and was well illustrated by specimens from most countries. Some of the more interesting pieces in the exhibit were as follows:

1. Specimen of paper money in use in Japan in 1874 when Perry landed, handed down to different persons originally from a missionary; never sold.
2. Shin Plasters from all the Provinces of Germany after the last War.
3. Smallest silver coin in the world, from the Mint of the Republic of Panama.

4. Various gold and silver foreign coins, Mexican dollars, a Chinese dollar from which most of the silver had been removed.

5. Complete type set of Fractional U. S. Currency.

6. Invasion money printed in U. S. and used in the liberated countries.

7. Proof sets of U. S., 1936 through 1942.

8. Broken Bank notes of various states.

9. U. S. dollars, half dollars and large copper cents.

10. Various U. S. gold coins including a 1907 $20 piece.

—W. W. WILLARD, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 98th meeting of the Club was held September 28th at the Y. M. C. A. Club Rooms, President Worth presiding. There were twenty-six members and five visitors present. Mr. Louis H. Zepfner and wife of Cranford, New Jersey, visited the club. He gave a short but interesting talk, and answered many questions, principally about how the big Eastern coin auctions are conducted, giving sidelights on personalities, famous for one reason or another, on some of the big names in the coin world.

As "transportation tokens" were the feature of the evening, a large and extensive display was exhibited by Mr. Dames and Mr. Nelson. These included specimens from practically every state and large city in the United States—and some foreign—and were in all kinds of baser metals, metal alloys, fibre and ordinary paper tickets. Mr. Dames spoke of them and stated that this branch of numismatics was becoming more and more popular.

Mrs. Hiskins had on display an unusual piece of Formosa money. It consisted of 100,000 pieces of tiny shell sewn on a field of cloth and approximately three feet long by twenty inches wide. This piece was used by a head-hunting tribe in that country's interior, and was good for a female pig or a wife.

Mr. Talmadge: Sets of Unc. sets of 1886, 1902, 1921, and 1927, commemorating the birth dates of his two sons, wife and himself, and the year they were married. The 1921 set included the very rare dime and quarter of that date, Phila. mint.

Most of the evening was taken up in discussing the coming banquet in November, commemorating the 100th meeting of the club. The issuing of a medal is contemplated, and photographs of the group, large and well-organized displays, speakers, etc. are being planned. President Worth appointed a large committee, headed by Mr. Joe La More, to take care of the numerous details. It was voted to charge $2.00 per member. An attendance of about sixty people is anticipated.

—HENRY N. ZECKSER, Secretary.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular meeting was held at Carnegie Museum with seven members and four visitors present.

A paper on the French Republican Calendar was read by Mr. Eastwood.

T. W. Peters: 18 proof U. S. coins.

—T. W. PETERS, Secretary.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB

The program committee, through William L. Wilson, its chairman, announced that Mr. Stack would be present at the next regular meeting of the Club. There being no other reports, the election of officers was then held.

Results: Hugh G. Funkhouser, President; Benjamin Charles, Vice-President; Martin Johnson, Secretary-Treasurer.

William L. Wilson gave an outline of the A. N. A. convention and stated that the resolution made by this Club for the A. N. A. to allot more money for gifts for Coin Week Displays was not passed. Mr. Wilson has been re-elected to the Board of Governors of the A. N. A.

—F. BRUCE FABLE, Secretary.

WESTERN RESERVE NUMISMATIC CLUB—The 283rd meeting of the Club was held at the Carter Hotel, Wednesday, October 11th, with 31 members and guests present.

Each member briefly described his exhibit as follows:

—HARLEY L. FREEMAN, Secretary.

The Howard R. Newcomb Collection

UNITED STATES CENTS

During the present season 1944-45 we will offer by auction Part I of the magnificent collection of U. S. Cents formed during the past fifty years by Mr. Howard R. Newcomb. This part will comprise the years 1793-1814 and will include nearly 500 major and minor varieties.

Mr. Newcomb needs no introduction, his books on the subject of Cents are the recognized standard works, and his collection excels for quality and completeness any other that has ever come on the market. All the great collections of the past have contributed their gems to this collection of gems. Mickley, Bushnell, M. A. Brown, Mougey, Lambert, Miller, Jackman, Beckwith are but a few of the names of great Cent collections of the past which are here represented.

We are not going to attempt here to call attention to outstanding gems or rarities. We will do that in the catalogue; but some idea of the completeness of the collection may be had from the following general summary:

Seventeen varieties more than half of which are in mint state.

1794

About sixty specimens, lacking only four of being complete, usually in the highest preservation, many as they left the dies.

1796

About fifty varieties, many rarities, in uncirculated condition.

1797, 1798

Over one hundred specimens. Certainly the most magnificent collection of these years ever reaching the market, and representing a lifetime of intelligent search.

1801, 1802, 1803

Mr. Newcomb's specialty for many years and as would be expected, containing the most remarkable specimens in existence, over a hundred of them.

In nearly every year there are varieties which have never been offered before, and the sale will give present day collectors a genuine opportunity to add distinction and quality to their collections by securing some of the pedigreed coins from this great collection.

We have been honored with a consignment from a collector who, because of his official position, prefers to remain anonymous.

Because of the magnitude and magnificence of this collection, we shall probably be unable to sell it until late in January, 1945. It is with regret that we must refuse other consignments for sale for the same reason.

At the present writing we have received a part of the collection. The balance is en route to New York.

From the Silver Dollars and Half Dollars, we can list:

1794 Silver Dollar in Uncirculated Condition. (We know of only one other specimen.)

Silver Dollar PROOFS from 1840 to 1857 inclusive. (The same is true for the Half Dollars.)

Many varieties not known to Haseltine, in uncirculated condition.

Next month we'll let you in on the balance (an 1827 Quarter, etc.).

Non-Rationed Christmas Gifts DELUXE COIN CABINETS

Nearly all coin cabinets are now off the market for the duration, as government priorities prohibit the manufacture, due to the hardware, and other materials needed for defense. Fortunately, we have been able to obtain a contract to purchase a LIMITED NUMBER of cabinets, as specifications below, just what every collector is looking for, and unable to locate. Most cabinets that hold 1,000 coins or more usually sell for $20 or upward, and these are priced at practically pre-war prices. If you are in need of a nice cabinet, you will not delay your order, for these will sell very quickly.

TO OUR ADVERTISERS

A number of comments have been received from collectors suggesting that when coins in rolls are offered, the number per roll be stated in every case. This would seem reasonable, especially since not all rolls contain the same number, and also because two different sizes of rolls are used in many banks for the same denomination.

Hereafter, will our advertisers please adopt this suggestion. New collectors especially will appreciate it.

What can you offer me in U. S. gold coins, at up to double face?

(Can also use some of the common foreign gold.)

Collectors:

Remember—if you consign your commoner gold coins to auction at 20% they will have to realize $50 per $20 of face to net you double, or $40. Or, if they realized only double they would net you only $32 per $40 face. Think this over.

Also wanted: Collections of circulated Morgan and Mercury Dimes; Morgan and Liberty Standing Quarters; Morgan and Liberty Standing Halves. Also uncirculated 1938-D Buffalo Nickels in rolls.

Quotations solicited from dealers and collectors.

WANT OBSOLETE PAPER MONEY

I desire to enlarge my private collection of paper money, issued in Georgia, any time.

Also railroad, canal, turnpike, plank road, and other notes relating to transportation, issued anywhere.

I would like to hear from parties who are collectors of the above, as I have many fine duplicates.

For resale, I will buy single notes or large accumulations of any kind of paper money issued in America, any time, current or uncurrent.

Write and describe, send on approval with prices, or send and I will make you an offer.

FIFTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

COLONIAL PAPER CURRENCIES OF PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW JERSEY

By RICHARD T. HOOBER, President Philadelphia Coin Club
North Hills, Pennsylvania

(A paper read at a recent meeting of his Club)

For some years I have been keenly interested in the study of American history, but it was not until recently, after reading Esther Forbes' excellent book "Paul Revere, His Life and Times" that the desire crystalized to correlate the study of the colonial period with my hobby, and to learn what I could about paper and specie of those early days. Still more recently, John C. Miller's book, "Origins of the American Revolution," helped to stimulate my interest. But once the task is undertaken, there dawns the realization that there is all too little source material upon the subject, and bit by bit it must be gathered from some obscure references, old periodicals of the time, numerous history texts, and a meagre number of volumes and papers in the Library of the American Numismatic Association, but which are readily accessible to any one of the members desiring information.

This scarcity of reference material may account in a large measure for the apparent lack of interest in colonial paper money by the majority of collectors, but there is no small amount of fascination once the step is taken. There are sub-divisions, too, that require much time and study; counterfeiting, the emissions themselves and reasons for their issue, and a study of the signatures of the men of the day, who they were and what they wrote and did. Each one of these phases requires years of painstaking study.

New Jersey

I have made no attempt to cover both colonies thoroughly, but I have taken what notes I have in my collection that I think may be interesting for their connection with events of the time, for to me, each one is a symbol in our history. The colonists' bitter struggle for their economic and political freedoms should prove and remain a source of inspiration to us all forever.

This three shilling note of New Jersey, dated December 31, 1763, was part of an emission of £20,000, and there were 4,000 of this denomination printed. It was signed by Richard Smith, S. Smith, and Johnston. Of Richard Smith, we learn that he was a delegate to the First Continental Congress, and kept a diary of those proceedings which took place in Carpenters' Hall. He wrote, concerning the "Report of the proposed Articles of Confederation, there were considerable Arguments on the Point Whether a Day shall be fixed for considering the Instrument of Confederation formerly brought in by a Committee." The following year, 1775, he made this entry during the Second Congress: "Several Members said that if a Foreign Force shall be sent here, they are willing to declare the Colonies in a State of Independent Sovereignty." By March of 1776 he stated, concerning our independence, that "many Delegates were for the Thing."

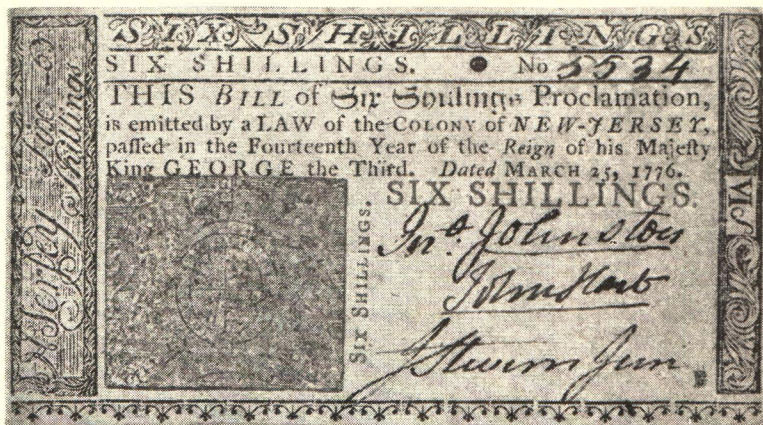

In 1758 another loan office bill was passed in New Jersey, the former bill having been rejected by the lords of trade in England. This latest demand also was rejected for selfish reasons, but the colony issued the money regardless, for, as we must constantly remember, the colonies were troubled by a growing scarcity of specie, and some substitute was needed constantly to replace it. After this, no more paper currency was issued in the colony for ten years, as the colonists were content partially to acquiesce to the crown's demands rather than lose all their rights.

An Important Moment in History

The year of this emission, 1763, was a memorable one; the Seven Years' War was at an end and the peace was concluded at Paris, whereby France lost Canada to England. The British taxpayers of the 18th century had a decisive voice in the government, and they insisted they would no longer foot the bill for a colonial military establishment. In Massachusetts, meanwhile, James Otis, head of the Land Bank Party, appealed to the "old guard of inflationists" by calling Governor Hutchinson's destruction of paper money "that fatal shock." He decried those merchants and politicians piling up fortunes and power by taking advantage of the price fluctuations of gold to ship colonial currency to England, thus adding to the serious lack of specie.

By 1765, Sons of Liberty were organized in every hamlet, preventing the execution of the Stamp Act, thereby usurping much of the power of the real government in America. The revenue derived from the Stamp Act was to be used to maintain an army in America against "an already beaten foe." Difficulty arose at once, for the Act stated that the stamps were to be bought with specie, at prices ranging from a halfpenny to upwards of twenty shillings. Paper money had almost died a natural death as a political issue, but the necessity of paying for stamps in specie was certain to revive it anew. Americans denounced the Act as a "devouring monster," that would "inevitably pump and extort from us all the remaining coin of the continent." This gave Sam Adams a strong talking point, for he was a fiery radical and leader of the Sons of Liberty in Boston. Franklin also characterized it as a tax upon the poor, "and a tax upon them for being poor." Therefore, the currency problem was a sinister one and grew daily in importance until it became one of the greatest and most direct causes of the Revolution, although it has been minimized by many historians, and in some references there is hardly mention made of the problems connected with colonial currency.

Following the ten year period during which time there were no issues in New Jersey, the colony quietly absorbing its abundance of paper money during that time, a new authorization was made March 11, 1774 (although the notes are dated March 25, 1776). The legislature passed a Loan Office bill for £100,000, and £25,000 was added later. Of the six shilling notes there were 37,500 struck, and this one was signed by Sturm, Johnston, and John Hart, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He was not a member of the First Continental Congress, however, but of succeeding sessions.

The Act for this emission was sent to England for approval, according to custom, and which, as it was divested of most of the objectionable features, it was hoped it might be permitted to receive. Not until the threatening voice of the colonies had become loud for the redress of their grievances was it deemed prudent, late in 1775, that the assent of the King should be given the law. It was thought that this approval of their ardent desire might pacify the colony, or divide it from the others. Even with the assent came the request that they use a portion of the money thus obtained from the loan office for the erection of a suitable new mansion for William Franklin, the royal Governor of the colony.

But the time for conciliation had passed: loyal New Jersey was loyal no longer, for a de facto government had already been in existence for some time, with headquarters in Philadelphia, and New Jersey was part and parcel of it. A community of oppression was the bond of unity that drew the colonies together in their dark hour. By June 15, 1776, the Provincial Congress of New Jersey took a long stride in the direction of independence, by ousting William Franklin from the governorship and ordering his arrest and detention. On the twenty-first of June new delegates to the Continental Congress were chosen: Stockton, Clark, Hart, Hopkinson, and Witherspoon; and instructions given them to support a declaration.

This note of £3, in red and blue, is part of the above issue, of which denomination there were 6,250 notes printed. The number is rather low, 91, and it was signed by Smith, Smyth, and Johnston. I photographed it only for its crisp appearance and coloring.

The issue of February 20, 1776, rightly follows the issue dated in March, for its authorization was made after 1774. It was for £50,000, as ordered under a resolution of the Provincial Convention. Of this denomination, thirty shillings, there were 10,000 notes printed, signed by Hendrick Fisher, John Dennis, and another, unknown.

According to Henry Phillip's work on Paper Money, this issue is very rare, although the Standard Catalogue makes no mention of this fact. The notes were to be, and certainly for the most part must have been, redeemed prior to 1791.

When in December of 1775, the last crown Governor announced the crown's deliberations, which cast aside the colonists' much needed device for making more paper currency, they resolved that such a course was no longer prudent in view of the impending crisis. A convention of delegates from the several counties of the colony met in the autumn and resolved that the colony should be placed in a state of preparedness to resist the unjust demands of the crown. Bills of credit were ordered to provide arms, munitions, ammunition, etc., for the militia, in the amount of £30,000, which was later raised to £50,000.

Pennsylvania

A study of the paper money of Pennsylvania will reveal some interesting facts. It was not until many years after her sister colonies had issued paper currency that she made the venture, and even then only after a careful study of the task ahead. The failures of the issues of the New England colonies and the Carolinas, and the great losses caused by their resulting depreciation, warned her against yielding too much to the popular mania for paper money. But, as time wore on and counterfeiting added to the troubles, emissions became somewhat more numerous for it appeared to be the panacea of all their ills. Had not the Revolution intervened, all the notes would have been redeemed at par, as ample funds were always provided by taxation or excise duties in the same act that issued the bills.

In March of 1771, in consequence of an alarm felt by the colonies from the hostile attitude of the French, an issue of £25,000 was ordered for the defense of Philadelphia. Never having been called upon to use the money for that purpose, the surplus was applied towards paving and grading the streets of the city. Another issue, authorized March 21, 1772, and dated April 3, 1772, was also for £25,000, of which this two shilling note was a part. Of this denomination there were 33,962 notes printed, and it was signed by Benjamin Wynkoop, Isaac Cox, and Joseph Sims. Of the entire issue, which was struck in support of the government, £9,446 0s. 2d., were destroyed, leaving slightly more than £15,000.

As there was no specific reason for this issue, we can view it as evidence of the temptations that hovered around the legislature to overcome instant wants by means of large sums of paper payable in the future. Inflationary thought and actions, then, are nothing new, but like the seventeen-year locusts, plague us at frequent intervals, usually during or after wars; and often, as in the case of the colonial paper issues, quite disastrously.

From that day in 1770, when the so-called Boston "massacre" occurred, and for the next few years, there developed a period of social and economic unrest and friction among many groups in the colonies. New York's breaking of the non-importation agreement caused a serious setback to the revolutionary movement. The boundary disputes in western Pennsylvania with certain interests from Connecticut, and the fighting of the "Green Mountain Boys" during the New Hampshire Grants trouble, were visible evidence of the lack of American unity. In Philadelphia, in 1772, Franklin was emphasizing the imperfections of a social system which depressed "multitudes below the Savage State that a few may be rais'd above it," and shortly thereafter noted the "extream Corruption prevalent among all Orders of Men in this rotten old State." In New England, the British revenue vessel, the 'Gaspee,' was burned to the water's edge after running aground in Narragansett Bay, while in Boston, Sam Adams was appointed head of a committee of correspondence, recommending the town adopt a declaration of colonial rights.

An emission of £150,000 was authorized February 26, 1773, and this fifteen shilling note dated October 1, 1773, was a part. It was signed by William Wishart, Richard Willing, and Isaac Wharton, and there were 28,300 of this denomination printed. Worked into the lettering on the face in red letters, are the Roman numerals combining X and V. Most Philadelphians will recognize at once the names of these signers as members of old families of this vicinity; and many others appear on various notes from time to time.

This issue marked the attempted revival of the loan office system. But the times were fast changing, and the device was no longer effective. Many of the signers and trustees refused or neglected to back the plan, and although several supplements were passed to render the scheme a more harmonious one and to smooth away the difficulties which had been encountered, yet the outbreak of the war found the loan office in confusion and its operations no longer practical.

This note bears the coat of arms of the Penn family, and it may be interesting to note that all issues of Pennsylvania until 1764 bore the same device. In that year the arms of Great Britain make their appearance. All issues from 1769 to March of 1775 inclusive bear Penn's, and the July issue Great Britain's. This issue, and the December issue bear Penn's, while in the April, 1776, issue, the three, four, six and nine pence notes bear Penn's, and the remainder of the denominations bear Britain's. In 1777, and upon all succeeding issues, the arms of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is used.

In the year 1773, Virginia radicals led by Patrick Henry, Richard Henry Lee, and Thomas Jefferson induced the House of Burgesses to appoint a provincial committee of correspondence, following Boston's similar move the preceding year. These examples were soon followed by other colonies, and the year culminated in the well known Boston Tea Party in December, and similar actions in other ports along the Atlantic coast; but such violence lost some adherents to the cause who believed in maintaining public order and property rights. To conservatives here and abroad, the Boston affair was certainly the most objectionable for its wanton destruction of property.

Of the 50 shilling notes there were also 28,300 struck, and an interesting account of this denomination may be found in the Pennsylvania Journal & the Weekly Advertiser issue of March 8, 1775, which was also printed a week later in the March 13th issue of the Pennsylvania Gazette. "The Public is cautioned to beware of counterfeit FIFTY SHILLING BILLS of this province, dated the first of October, 1773, as several are now passing amongst us. They are done with common printing types; the word 'Pennsilvania' in the true bills, is made 'Pennsylvania' in the counterfeits; the arms and ornaments are badly done; the denomination of the bill in red and black letters at the top, cannot be distinguished as in the true bills, where it is fair and clear. The back is also badly imitated; the sun appears larger, and the rainbow smaller, and the paper is whiter and softer than the genuine bills, and may easily be detected after this notice."

According to Harold Gillingham's article which appeared in the February issue of THE NUMISMATIST in 1929, the designer of the money was unknown, but circumstances pointed to Henry Dawkins of New York, who was working in that city as early as 1754. He went to Philadelphia in 1758, where he remained for 16 years, being associated with James Turner, also an engraver. In the New York Mercury for 1775, he advertised that he had left Anthony Lamb, of that city, and "set up for himself opposite the Merchant's Coffee House, in New York." He was arrested in 1776, charged with engraving, printing and issuing counterfeit Continental Connecticut and Massachusetts paper money. At his trial he confessed that he had engraved the plates, but implicates the Tory "Rivington, the Printer," in the scheme to defraud the public. This appears to have been his second offense. No record has been found of his fate. He was a clever engraver, and specimens of his work, such as business cards, billheads and portraits, are to be found in the collections of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and the New York Historical Society.

March 25, 1775

July 20, 1775

The issue of March 25, 1775, was the second issue offered the public for the support of the lighthouse at Cape Henlopen, and for the purpose of placing buoys, piers, etc., in the Delaware River and Bay. This emission was for £6,000, and of the four shilling notes there were 3,000 printed, which was the same for all denominations. This note was signed by William Wishart, Charles Wharton, and another, unknown. It was authorized March 18, 1775.

As in the earlier issue of 1769, which was for the relief and benefit of the poor, and the prison issue of the year 1775 also, it bears upon its face the specific purpose for which the money was to be used, but it has little bearing or significance with state or national affairs, with which we are primarily concerned.

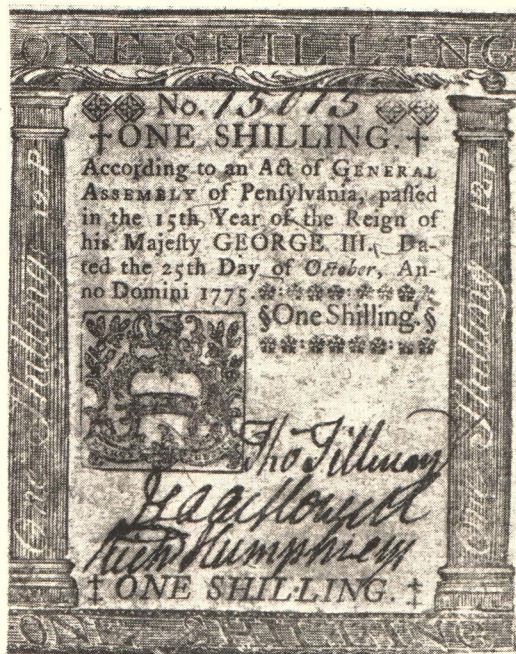

Under a resolution of June 30, 1775, this issue, dated July 20, 1775, was made for £25,000, and there were 7,000 notes of each denomination printed. This note was signed by Wm. Allen Jr., James Mease, and Adam Hubley.

Probably more than all other emissions of Pennsylvania, this note symbolizes the final break with the masters overseas, for it was on June 30 that a provisional government was appointed by the Assembly, called a "committee of safety," to look to the defense and arming of the colony; and to carry into effect the objects of their appointment, the Assembly resolved to emit the above sum of bills of credit. The mere issuing of these bills was an act of rebellion, as they were emitted by the mere "resolve" of the Assembly in defiance of their charter and without reference to their governor, a British appointee. Oddly enough, however, these notes and those dated December 8, 1775 and April 25, 1776, bore the accustomed name in its usual place, "His Majesty, King George the Third." These issues, this one in particular, were known as the "resolve money," taking their name from the circumstances of their origin.

The Battle of Lexington had aroused the colony to action. A Congressional plan, known as the Association, had been formed, which included nonimportation, nonexportation, and nonconsumption agreements against British trade. For this purpose, local groups were to be formed to deal with violators of the Association, and as a directing agency for them, the Second Continental Congress was to assemble in Philadelphia in May, 1775. Supporters of the Association were dubbed "Republicans" and the conservatives were the Loyalists, or the Tories. Early in 1775, a Philadelphia sympathizer of the Loyalists reported hopefully that Rivington's pamphlets were changing public opinion towards the Tory cause. In April of 1775, the British precipitated the war at Concord, and in two months the Massachusetts troops were expanded into a New England army, and Congress provided for a much larger force with Washington as its leader.

On September 30, 1775, a new emission of £22,000 was authorized, and dated October 25 of the same year. Of the one shilling notes there were 15,849 struck and its use was for the support of the government. This note was signed by Thos. Tilbury, Isaac Howell, and Richard Humphreys.

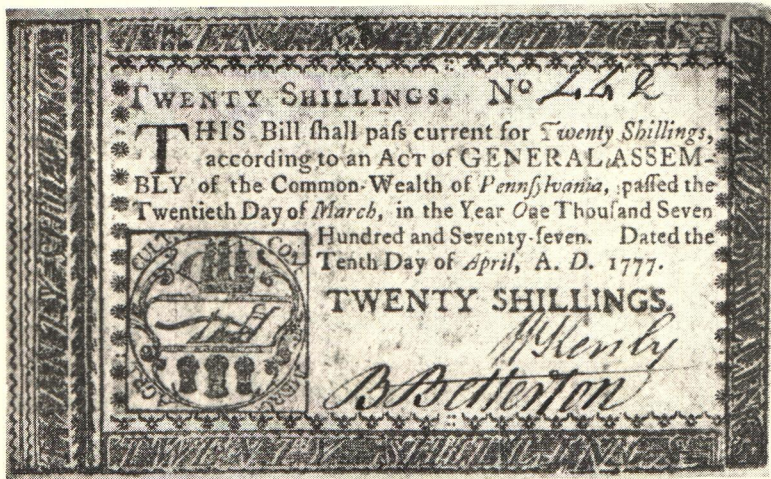

On March 3, 1778, the legislature passed an act decreeing such notes.

dated prior to March of 1777 would no longer be legal tender after the first of June, but that until that time they might be received at the Treasury in payment of taxes or in exchange for notes of a later date. In the case of non-residents, the time for presenting the notes was extended to August 1, 1778, this issue among those so designated.

Before the end of 1775, Whigs were fighting British sympathizers in the western part of South Carolina, and in the autumn of that year New Yorkers took part in the invasion of Canada; the governor of the colony of New York, Sir William Tryon, retired to a warship for greater security while the Continental Army held the city, which was to change hands more than once before the struggle finally ended.

The issue dated April 25, 1776, was part of the "resolve money" issues. It was for £85,000, and this ten shilling note was signed by Wm. Kenly, Wm. Crispin, and Benjamin Betterton; there were 14,000 of this denomination printed. It was the last issue of this colony upon which would appear the name of George the Third, completing the severance.

It was in April of 1776, that Congress opened American ports to vessels of all nations other than Great Britain and her possessions. Congress also took action on the matter of privateering and during this year thirty-four ships were put into service, ranging from Connecticut sloops carrying six guns, to ships carrying ten guns and crews of two hundred men each. The British had been using Indians to fight for them for some time, but in this year the Continental Congress also authorized permission to use the red men as fighters. Washington's army during 1776 ranged roughly from 27,000 to 10,000 men, and when he attacked Trenton across the Delaware River, he had only 2,400 men, "all that were left of the Continental regulars." Two months later Congress was to take the fateful step that changed the course of history of America and of the world forever.

This note dated April 10, 1777, was authorized March 20, 1777, and it was signed by William Kinley and Benjamin Betterton. Of the twenty shilling denomination, there were 30,000 struck and the emission was for £200,000, one of the largest for the colony, and reflecting the growing need for more and more money to finance the war and the inflationary trend.

This issue was for the direct support of the army, and here the authority of "the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania" appears for the first time. Various laws had been passed from time to time to call in the earlier bills emitted during the dominion of the colonies by Great Britain, and in 1778 Congress requested the states to end the currency of notes issued prior to April 19, 1775, as they had fallen into the hands of persons unfriendly to the new government, many persons holding them believing that they would ultimately be redeemed, whether the subsequent ones were or not; by this means causing the notes issued by the authority of Congress and of the several states to depreciate in value.

In April of 1781, £500,000 were ordered to be issued for the support of the army, of which £200,000 was to replace the issue of 1777, and also the old paper money at the depreciated value according to the monthly scale as published at such interims by the Philadelphia gazettes. Ample funds were pledged to the redemption of this issue, and according to the report of the state Treasurer in 1805, there remained outstanding and unredeemed only £4,140 3s. 7d. By this act in 1781, the dollar was legally rated at 7s. 6d., and thus it may be seen that there are not too many of these notes available today, especially of the larger denominations, which probably were redeemed more promptly than those of smaller amounts.

By an Act of December 4, 1789, the "resolve money" and this issue of 1777 were no longer to be received at the Treasury after January 1, 1791, thus entirely destroying their usefulness. During the entire history of the paper money of Pennsylvania, no great fluctuation in value was recorded in the province.

Our generation of collectors of paper currency may find some solace in the fact that some holders of the notes hoped that the state would ultimately redeem her obligations at the face values, and for that reason neglected or refused to present them at the Treasury before the expiration of the time limited for their redemption.

This study has been of necessity all too brief, but I trust that it has been interesting despite its many shortcomings. Many of us at one time or another have probably possessed some of these colonial notes, and given little attention to their significance in our nation's history. If the colonists have made mistakes, so have we, and if those pioneers have taught us to avoid similar pitfalls, their labors and sacrifices were not wholly in vain. If more leaders of nations were to study the history of previous wars and the attending financial crises that seem to be always present upon such critical periods, it might have a wholesome effect upon our future international relations.

THE PROFILE PORTRAIT IN NUMISMATICS

By E. GALLO-RUIZ, Ann Arbor

Department of Romance Languages, University of Michigan

No branch of art where the human portrait is the dominant representation has used the profile more extensively than the art of numismatics. In coins and medals, ancient and new, the profile of gods, kings, emperors, heroes, saints and sinners is preserved for posterity. Rarely do we find the three-quarter position, or the front one, in the best periods of numismatic art, and rarely did the outstanding artists of this field abandon the profile view.

The fascination of the profile representation, hard to explain, soon caught the fancy of the die sinkers who created the lovely types of Greek coins. True that we have some front representations of animals and human heads in Greek coins, but this method of representation never became typical. Syracuse, for example, has two well known coins in the front position, Kimon's head of Arethusa, and Eucleidas' head of Athena. But the occasional repetition of these experiments continued until late without producing works of notable merit.¹

The Romans, too, in their more realistic portraiture of monetary art preferred to cast the features of their emperors in accentuated profiles, invaluable iconographic documents to history and art. Had Thomas Carlyle been a Roman historian he would have amply satisfied in this gallery of Roman profiles his most urgent desire as a historian. "In all my poor historical investigations," Carlyle wrote in a letter dated 1854, "it is one of the most primary wants to procure a bodily likeness of the personage inquired after, a good portrait if such exists."

In the last days of the Empire the arts degenerated rapidly, and with it the beauty of the coins. In this late period and in the following centuries the front position in a very flat low-relief is common. This resulted in a purely decorative art where the human portrait could not properly thrive. The period covered by these coins is a desert in the history of numismatics. Perhaps the theocratic peoples who gave so much beauty to their Gothic cathedrals had to deny it to coins, to those abhorred tokens of usury. All realism, "all genuine endeavour to produce a likeness had been abandoned in the course of centuries . . . The head or bust had become a mere convention."²

Pisanello's Influence

With the arrival of Pisanello in the fifteenth century the profile portrait appears again in medals and coins. It was in the hands of Pisanello, a painter and a sculptor, that the numismatic art revived. "From the medal the true portrait made its way back to the coin, with the result that during the best period the perfection of the first and second centuries of the Roman Empire was more than rivalled."³ From this triumph on, the profile ruled almost exclusively in numismatics.

To explain with reasonable arguments why the profile has come to be in coins and medals the pose par excellence is not an easy task. The consultation of the various theories proposed does not relieve the problem. Here, just as in any other field of inquiry, the opinions are as varied as they are numerous. Some theories, before we propose our own, are gathered for whatever value they may have in suggesting points of interest.

Some Notable Opinions

(1) A theory which appears rather naive, yet perfectly valid, is that which regards the profile in coins and medals as a technical necessity due to the deterioration of the type under the influence of handling and friction. This truism is too obvious to need much explanation. It suffices to recall in our memory some facing numismatic pieces with particular reference to the nose. The suffering of the nose under friction soon turns a beautiful coin into a ludicrous caricature, anything but pleasing to the eye.⁴ The profile, on the other hand, can stand firmly the ravages of handling and friction. Thanks to the profile representation, the innumerable Lincoln cents, for example, can pass from hand to hand, year after year, without defacing the substantial nobility which Brenner impressed upon the features of our beloved president.

(2) Joseph Addison in his "Dialogues on Medals" also noticed that Roman emperors until about the end of the third century "always appear in profil, to use a French term of art, which gives us the view of a head, that, in my opinion, has something in it very majestic, and at the same time suits best with the dimensions of a medal [coin]. Besides that, it shows the nose and eyebrows, with the several prominences and fallings in of the features, much more distinctly than in any other kind of figure. In the lower empire you have abundance of broad Gothic [Barbarian] faces, like so many full moons on the side of a coin. Among the moderns, too, we have of both sorts, though the finest are made after the antique."⁵ What Addison calls "majestic" and "distinctly" are two basic features of medallie art, or in other words, monumentality and emphasis, which are essential to every good medal. We hesitate, nevertheless, to attribute the majestic and the distinct exclusively to profile representations. There is no reason why other poses should not convey equally well these aesthetic values.

(3) Another view, proposed by the French sculptor and medallist, David d'Angers, carries, no doubt, considerable weight. No artist expressed himself more often and more thoroughly in medallie profiles than David d'Angers, whose immortal gallery of no less than five hundred medallions includes practically every outstanding person of his age. To him fell the honor of casting the profiles, to mention only a few, of Rouget de Lisle, Victor Hugo, Alfred de Vigny, Prosper Mérimée, Victor Cousin, Alfred de Musset, Humboldt, Simón Bolívar and hundreds more in the pantheon of fame. David d'Angers, who loved nothing better than the fixation of the profiles of great men in cast medallions, used this method with great success. His views about the profile run as follows: Medallie portraits should express the essential and permanent character of the individual, both by means of the structure of the face and the facial expression. He analyzed with extreme care the heads of great men, trying to capture in their external appearance a convincing indication of the spark of their genius. He is said to have avoided the front position because it shows too many complex traits hard to analyze. The profile, on the other hand, free from these complexities, is unity itself. In the profile view we have the sitter related to other beings.⁶ This theory, no doubt, fits well in David d'Angers' medallions.

(4) To select a typical German view among a wide variety of theories, that of G. Habich may serve our purpose. In attempting to offer some grounds for the almost exclusive use of the profile by the Italian Renaissance medallists, Habich reasons in the following way: "The profile answers better than any other view of the human head to the monumentalizing tendency of the medal. By it the play of the features, which lies chiefly in the mobile mouth, and the glance of the eyes are practically excluded. It withdraws the subject from before you, removes him to an abstract sphere, and, by giving clear expression to the pure outline of brow and skull, nose and chin, discards the sensuous, merely physical element, and emphasizes the spiritual energies of the head."⁷ Karl Justi has a similar point of view. Hill, to whom this translation is due, objects to this elaborate theory of Habich on the grounds that "in the earlier part of the quattrocento they [the Italian medallists] had not, consciously at least, any such theories to inspire their practices."⁸ Hill goes on further to propose a theory of his own based upon the purely technical limitations of low-relief sculpture.

(5) "Bluntly put, the reason why the earliest portraits both in the North and Italy tend to be in profile is that, owing to the absence of foreshortening, it is the poste which makes some sort of likeness easiest to get."⁹ Hill adds: "And since there is nothing more difficult in low relief than foreshortening the human features, the profile was the only satisfactory pose for the medal."¹⁰ The Italian medallists kept the profile ever since Pisacello introduced it in his new creation. Sperandio experimented in foreshortening the human features "once or twice, with disastrous results."¹¹ In the Italian Renaissance one may count on the fingers of one hand the medals which are not in profile. This theory, no doubt, has a great deal of truth in it, however the relative success in foreshortening the face in Greek coins and in modern medals proves that this difficulty is not as severe as it sounds. When the problem is handled by a competent artist, as Paul Manship in his Dionysus medal, the result is satisfactory.

Most of these theories are useful fragmentary insights upon the question of the profile, with the possible exception of Habich's, which is well developed. All suggest interesting ideas with a degree of truth in them. But the field of inquiry is still ready for new attempts.

Further Analysis

In approaching more systematically the question of the profile in coins and medals the most logical avenue is the study of the profile in relation to the various elements which enter into the medallie art. This relationship, we maintain, gives the key to the justification of the profile. Medallie profiles, far from being isolated, are always related to other elements:

- (1) The profile in its relation to the circular field of the medal.
- (2) The profile in its relation to the structure of the head.
- (3) The head in profile in its relation to the body.
- (4) The head in profile in its relation to the artistic composition.
- (5) The profile in its relation to the expression of character.

The first thing confronted by a medallist is the circular metallic shape into which a head is to be designed. Truly no part of man is better adapted to a circular contour than the human head, yet the effect produced by a front position is rather monotonous. There is a too obvious linear rhythm of concentric circles and masses almost mechanically symmetrical. The best medallists have shown extreme care in avoiding it. Pisanello, for example, places his figures in such a way that the profile portrait can be surrounded by an oval curve, leaving the greatest space on either side of the figure, a space which can be utilized to exhibit more clearly the decorative curvilinear rhythm of the profile and the hair, or to provide more room for inscriptions. Matteo de 'Pasti's medal of Isotta illustrates the same principle. Here, too, the design is an ellipse within a circle. Such designs also establish a vertical arrangement of masses to facilitate the point of view of the beholder. Thus the profile relates more pleasingly and with more economy and variety the head to the medallic field.

Again, in a relief portrait, where only a single point of view is presented, the artist has to reveal as clearly as possible the structure of the head. In sculpture in the round we see the head in many views, perhaps equally revealing of the character portrayed. But in low-relief sculpture we select a single view, which must be simplified, yet capable of the greatest expression of character and indicating clearly the head structure. The profile, no doubt, fulfills these requirements. In a profile the artist presents the most inclusive symmetrical half and the most revealing part of the head. This view gives a clear idea of the front and the back of the head, the proportions of the features, their mutual arrangement, their expressiveness, and the distribution of the hair. In low relief the three-quarter and the front view fail to give such a clear cut idea of the structure of the head, therefore other views than the profile are less desirable in the economic and emphatic art of medals.

The relation of the head to the body is another important factor to be taken into account. The body, it is true, enters very little in medals and coins, where almost invariably the center of attraction is the head in profile. But since mind and body go together, and the body is a support for the head, a part of the body is nearly always represented. The contact or link between head and body is a difficult technical problem, but when properly solved it becomes a solid pedestal to support the head. It also suggests the dual nature of man, his soul and body. This link of head and body is much better shown in profile, because the curve of the head flows more naturally into the body. In this position the mass of the body is more concentrated in the medallic field, while the head spreads over an area almost equal to that of the body. A balance of body and mind is thus established. Pisanello and other Italian artists conveyed by such means the humanistic idea of harmonious personality, of mental and bodily development.

As a mere problem of artistic composition the low relief profile has some significant advantages when developed within a circular shape. It gives, in the first place, a greater variety of linear rhythms and intricacy of contour, yet forming a well integrated organic whole. There is also an economy of form which, to a considerable degree, accentuates the essential traits which the artist wants to stress. Here, with a minimum of relief and representation, the able medallist attains a convincing and quite exhaustive characterization of the sitter. Finally the profile leaves more room for decorative use of hair, adding greatly to the portrait as mere pattern and pure design.

The last point I would like to mention is the profile as a vehicle of character expression. We often fail to realize how much a profile reveals of the person and with what extraordinary economy. A careful observer will soon notice that the foci of expression in profile representation centers around the eyes and lips. With the proper manipulation and interplay of these two moving organs no emotion or sentiment escapes the hand of the artist. Spirituality, kindness, nobility, and intelligence are shown, just as clearly as the traces of lust, stupidity, cruelty and degeneration. The "Corpus" of Italian medals, to illustrate, is a gallery of virtues and vices, the most complete mirror of that age. The eyes of these men reflect the content of their souls, and their lips murmur the things they have close to their hearts, lust or love, cruelty or kindness. A human profile is an objective representation of character, a soul open to inspection. Here man is naked, shown to those who care to glance at him, just as he is before he is entrenched in the defense of his shortcomings and limitations. As D'Annunzio put it, this is the way we commune with medallic portraits: "As he bent over a medal of Pisanello's he felt the pulse of his thought beating with incredible rapidity against his burning temples . . . On the bronze was the effigy of a young man¹² with fair, waving hair, imperial profile, and Apollo-like neck. His was so perfect a type of elegance and vigour that the imagination could not depict him in life except as entirely exempt from all decadence, changeless for all eternity. DUX . EQUITUM . PRAESTANS . MALATESTA . NOVELLUS . CESENAE . DOMINUS . OPUS . PISANI . PICTORIS. And close to it lay another medal by the same hand, bearing the effigy of a virgin¹³ with narrow bosom, swan-like neck, and hair drawn back as if it were a heavy bag, with a high receding forehead that seemed already vowed to the halo of the blessed; a vessel of purity forever sealed, hard, precise, and clear as the diamond, an adamantyne pyx enshrining a soul that, like the Host, seemed consecrated to sacrifice . . . See . . . how Pisanello has gathered with an equally wonder-working hand the proudest flower of life and the purest flower of death. Here you have the image of profane desire and the image of sacred aspiration in the same metal, both fixed by the same idealism of style."¹⁴

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA PAPER MONEY: CLASSIFICATION AND LISTING

By P. H. CHASE, A. N. A. 4286, Philadelphia

(All rights reserved by the author)

Types and Varieties and Listing Methods

Identification of each type of note and its varieties is by numbers and letters, each indicative of certain characteristics of the note. A number is always used to identify the type. When a particular variety is to be identified, the proper identifying letters and numbers for one or more of the above four classes of varieties follow the type number, always in the order a-b-c-d.

For convenience and clarity, where paper and watermark varieties or plate letter-number varieties are referred to, the identification number, letter or symbol is always preceded by a mark. For paper and watermark varieties the mark is a diagonal (/); for plate letter-number varieties the mark is a colon (:).

Each type of note of a given issue and denomination, is identified by a number, related to a description of its major design and printing features, irrespective of the number and nature of detail differences classed as varieties. The use of the type number alone is employed either where there are no varieties, or whenever attention is directed only to the type of note, without specific reference to one of its varieties. This is particularly advantageous to the beginner and general collector who may not be interested in the varieties, or perhaps only in the variety that is most common.

Varieties of a type of note comprise the detail differences in engravers, series, printing and design, papers and watermarks, plate letters and numbers, signatures, etc. These differences may be substantial or minor. They may occur singly or in various combinations in a given type of note. Many identical variety characteristics occur in notes of different type, for example: certain papers and watermarks, plate letters and numbers, and signatures.

For the sake of simplification and convenience the following procedures are uniformly followed in classifying varieties:

(a) Design, engraver and printing detail differences, which because of their nature and combination are substantial or notable, are each identified by a variety letter (A, B, C, etc.). Each letter relates to the described characteristics of a particular variety. The variety letter always is associated with the type number (Examples: 137A or 214C).

Where there are combinations of two or more design, engraver and printing variety differences, digits (1, 2, 3, etc.) sometimes are used following the variety letter (Examples: 125A3, 125B1, 125C2). Generally such numerals refer to design, engraver, and printing characteristics which recur in several of the varieties of one type of note or are of lesser importance.

(b) Identical papers and watermarks appear in many types of notes, but often occur in combination with the much larger number of diverse design, engraver and printing varieties of these types. A uniform identification for each of the twelve kinds of paper and watermarks is most flexible and easily understood. Such identification (a number, or an abbreviation symbol) indicates a certain paper or watermark, and follows the letter designation (A, B, C, etc.), when used, that identifies the particular design, engraver or printing variety. Suitable identifying numbers and abbreviation symbols for papers and watermarks are given in Table II. Tracings of watermarks to approximately one-third scale, are illustrated in Fig. 1. Numbers have the advantage of brevity; however, the readily recognized abbreviation symbols are sometimes useful. The diagonal mark (/) always precedes this class of variety identification. Alternatively the hyphen (-) can be used for this purpose.

PAPERS WATERMARKED

Plain*	/1	plain*	"CSA" in block letters	/21 or 31*	bCSA
Bond	/2	bond	"CSA" in script letters	/22 or 32*	sCSA
Thin	/3	thin	"J Whatman 1862"	/23	JW62

* White, unless otherwise stated; for example, pink.

* With a wavy border line watermark about $\frac{1}{2}$ inch from the edges of the note.

Either the number, or the symbol, identifies the paper or watermark.

Note: The lines of the "NY" watermark are formed by thicker paper.

Fig. 1.

(c) Plate letters and plate numbers occur in great variety and with some types of notes in different shapes, locations, etc. Collector interest is considered to be generally less in plate letter-number varieties, as these often may constitute the only recognizable difference between the notes of one type or variety, particularly when printed in one sheet. The identification of this class of variety is the plate letter or number itself, always preceded by a colon (:) as the mark.* Location on the note, and other differences in plate letters and numbers, may require the use of numbers in parentheses [(1), (2), etc.], as supplemental identification for this purpose, following the plate letter or number itself. As plate letter-numbers are listed in the engraving class of variety, it may be thought that their identification should follow the variety letter designating the design, engraver or printing variety. However, the less frequent reference to plate letter-numbers, and their closer relationship to a particular note, tip the balance in favor of placement following the paper and watermark designation.

(d) Lastly, Signatures should be classified by direct mention, in the order: "for Register," then "for Treasurer." On account of the lack of general interest, listings of the many signatures appearing on notes will not be included in note descriptions to follow.

In case identification of a specific note is desired, the type and variety designation is followed by the serial number of that note, preceded by (#).

In brief, the above-described identification system or code utilizes the same basically simple method, which is apparent in many other fields. It consists of breaking down the characteristics of the items into various components, each with a letter, number or abbreviation for identification, which may be combined as desired to specify any particular item. Catalogue numbers of many commercial products are often combinations of numbers and letters which are keyed to basic types of articles and their varieties, which, with appropriate descriptions, identify them to seller and buyer. To designate a particular subscriber at a certain address, telephone directories often use letters for the exchange, followed by an exchange digit, then the subscriber's number, for example: BU-2-8765.

In applying the same methods in the Confederate currency field the first number refers to type, the letter following (sometimes with digit) identifies design, engraver and printing varieties, followed in turn by a number designating the paper or watermark variety, then plate letter-number is indicated and signature variety is identified.

This system is completely flexible in providing for identification of a note in a general way (type only), or in respect to every class of variety involved, or in respect to one particular class. No change of system or renumbering is necessary as the beginner or general collector broadens his interest from types alone to the varieties of any or all types. The system provides convenient components and a short-hand or code

* Each plate letter-number may consist of one or more letters or one or more number digits, or a letter and number in combination, generally appearing in two places on a note. Some notes occur where through error these two entries are not identical (for Example: A-E instead of A-A). In these cases the plate letter-number identification shows both, for example, "A-E" instead of merely "A". method of identifying notes and classifying his collection as simply or as much in detail as the individual collector may desire.

For example, consider one of the $10 notes of the September 2nd, 1861 issue, No. 123, which in the full listing will appear as follows, with the varieties of each class identified and described:—

A Engraved by "Leggett, Keatinge & Ball, Richmond, Va.": H to K

- / 1 Plain paper
- /21 Paper watermarked "CSA" in block letters
- /22 Paper watermarked "CSA" in script letters
- /23 Paper watermarked "J Whatman 1862"
- /26 Paper watermarked "TEN"

B Engraved by "Keatings & Ball, Richmond, Va.": H to K

- / 1 Plain paper
- /11 Fibre paper
- /21 Paper watermarked "CSA" in block letters
- /22 Paper watermarked "CSA" in script letters
- /23 Paper watermarked "J Whatman 1862"
- /26 Paper watermarked "TEN"
- /27 Paper watermarked "NY"

If the collector is not interested in varieties, the type number alone fully meets his needs. If design, engraver and printing varieties and also paper and watermark varieties are specified, the identification 123B/22, for example, indicates the variety engraved by Keatinge & Ball, and paper watermarked "CSA" in script letters. If interest is only in design, engraver or printing varieties or is only in papers or watermarks, the particular identification for that class of variety is used (Examples: 123B or 123/22, respectively). The full identification of the same note with plate letter H, would be 123B/22:H or 123B/sCSA:H.

NUMISMATIC RESEARCH

By PHARES O. SIGLER, Fort Belvoir, Virginia

The numerous works which have been published on numismatics sometimes discourage a prospective writer by conveying the impression that nothing new can be contributed at this late date. Even if a subject is found that has heretofore been neglected, it is soon discovered that the reason for the neglect was the dearth of any reliable information. The very fact that so much has already been written makes it imperative that additional contributions should not be made without a knowledge of what has gone before. The old tendency to repeat year after year certain fictitious legends about coins and coinage is not warranted in these days of improved methods of research and access to source materials.

To learn what has been written on a given subject, a comprehensive bibliography is necessary. If one is fortunate enough to be able to read several foreign languages, he will find some old bibliographies which are helpful. If limited to the examination of those printed in English, however, he will find little help except the list of books relating to numismatics published by the New York City Library in 1914. However, only a small percentage of all of the books on the subject were in the Library's collection, and since then many more have been printed. Some help may also be obtained from the Library List issued by the American Numismatic Association, but that library is as yet in its infancy.

Some years ago the writer's employment in the Government entailed extensive travel in the United States, and many otherwise lonely evenings were spent in libraries of the various cities visited. Upon finding some numismatic items in these which I had been unable to locate in the Library of Congress in Washington, I decided to build a working bibliography for my own use.

First all of the books, pamphlets and articles on numismatics listed in the index files of the Library of Congress were copied on 3" x 5" cards, listing the author's last name, first name and middle initial, title of the work, date published, number of pages and a notation as to whether the work was illustrated. Each card was then numbered consecutively in the upper right-hand corner. The cards were later expanded by adding like material located in other large libraries and from other sources, such as short bibliographies on specific phases of the subject and lists of books offered at numismatic auctions.

These cards are housed in two large filing cases, in the front part of the first of which is a subject index, made of cards of the same size. The index consists of a breakdown of all of the component parts of each general subject and reference is made to the appropriate card numbers, which enables one to easily collect all of the authorities on a given topic.

Subsequently discovered items are incorporated into the system by using the appropriate number followed by alphabetical letters. For example, if the new book or article fits between cards numbered 51 and 52, it is numbered 51a. The subject index is likewise amended to show the new addition.

The bibliography now numbers over 3000 cards, but the war has resulted in a failure to add the more current publications. Even though incomplete, it is of great assistance in research, and has more than paid for the many hours of work spent upon it. It provides a good starting point, after which the 50-year indexes to the American Journal of Numismatics and to THE NUMISMATIST are consulted.

After obtaining the available source material by the above method, a thorough search is made through ordinary library facilities for collateral material. This is an important part of any numismatic research job. Take, for example, a project covering the history of the money of the South Seas. Little has been written on this, most of which is either of a very general nature or treats of some specific type of money used in a certain island or group of islands. After obtaining the citations to all available numismatic material and to all collateral sources, such as travel books, the big task of gathering the pertinent excerpts begins. When this has been completed, the notes are studied and an outline drafted. The remainder of the job is the most interesting, because the completed story begins gradually to appear and enables each section to be drawn so as to contain as complete information as is possible.

Earlier we spoke of recently improved modern library facilities. The Library of Congress, as well as many other of the larger libraries, now has a photoduplication service and for a fee as low as 1 cent per page, will supply photographs of available work on 35mm. motion picture film. This may be easily read by an inexpensive magnifier or with the aid of an ordinary magnifying glass.

It is believed that the end of the war will bring additional leisure by reason of the necessity for adopting shorter hours of labor to avoid unemployment. This in turn should mean more coin collectors and more demand for, and interest in, numismatic literature. What better investment could be made of the surplus funds of our Association than the gradual accumulation of the rarer and better numismatic works, and someday, the publication of a bibliography comprehensive enough to cover numismatics publications in all languages?

LIBRARY NOTES

By TED R. HAMMER, Librarian and Curator, Burlington, Iowa

It's been a long while since we last wrote a Library sketch for THE NUMISMATIST, and several members of the Association have asked that they be resumed. We cannot promise one every month (even if Editor Saxton in his generosity could find space for it) due to the pressure of work. Since the new Library list came out, we have had the two biggest months since we took over the job as Librarian.

Unfortunately, the minds of numismatists seem to run too often in the same lines. In our back order file we now have requests for about twenty works, and in four or five instances have from two to four requests for a single book. We regret the delays in such cases.

We also would like to ask that members ordering books PRINT THEIR NAMES AND ADDRESSES unless requests are typewritten. The other day we got back a package of books because it had gone to the wrong state—due to the failure of the person writing to make his name and address clear. We have had similar experiences, and have had to write the General Secretary several times when we had nothing to go on but the member's A. N. A. number. Our most recent difficulty was encountered from a writer's failure to give us either a signature or an address! All we had was the postmark, Washington, D. C. We have written friends in Washington in an effort to get the information so the order can be filled. In the meantime, we fear this member is fuming at the slow service given by the Library.

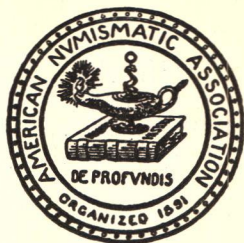

Among recent acquisitions is the A. Kosoff (Numismatic Gallery) catalogue of the Oscar J. Pearl Collection of Large Cents (priced). A well illustrated work, this is a big aid to the library because of the interest in this series. Members constantly are writing for additional books on this subject. Coin collectors also interested in photography will like the photographs in this work. The coins in some cases are photographed against a black background, and in virtually all plates there is a lack of glare so often resulting in photographing coins—especially where artificial light is used.

We found Early American Currency by George L. McKay of interest, and believe all Colonial collectors will enjoy this newest work from the American Numismatic Society (Numismatic Notes and Monographs, No. 104). Besides the excellent illustrations of Colonial notes, the book contains a foreword, preface, and an introduction. The latter, by W. A. Diggins, contains new slants on current paper money. The book was printed by the A. N. S. in conjunction with the Typophiles. It deals not only with paper money of the New England colonies, but discusses other features, including counterfeiting.

The Library has two new works from Wayte Raymond, Inc. First is the 1945 Standard Catalogue of United States Coins. But do not all ask for it at once. Mr. Raymond has sent the library No. 11 in his Coin Collector Series—a new title, Guide to Ancient Coins, well illustrated with types of Greek and Roman coins.

All collectors would do well to invest in these inexpensive works issued by Wayte Raymond, Inc.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

Auction Prices: United States Coins. Third edition. J. B. Johnson, Cincinnati. This publication is familiar to many readers, who will welcome the new edition just off the press. Its 140 pages contain the prices realized for U. S. coins at 57 mail auctions held during the summer of the present year, plus the average prices from 25 auctions listed in the 1943 edition, and from 30 in the first, or 1942, edition. In addition to these will be found similar results secured for numismatic books and journals at these same sales.

Virtually all denominations and dates, with condition quoted in each instance, are to be found, with major types illustrated in line engravings. The final pages are devoted to complete statistics of the gold, silver and minor coinage of the various U. S. Mints.

An enormous amount of painstaking work has been necessary to compile this book, and it should prove definitely useful to those collectors who are actively in the market for any series of U. S. coins, or who may merely wish to keep posted on price trends, regardless of purchases.

The Essay-Proof Journal. Vol. I, No. 4 (October). Quarterly. Julian Blanchard, Ph.D., writes interestingly of "Stamps and Paper Money," discussing the many instances in which the same subject was used in the engravings of stamps and early bank notes, with some historical data concerning the American Bank Note Company, and others.

Thomas F. Morris continues his well written and documented story of James Smillie, one of our earlier engravers on steel, and whose work on bank notes is recognized to this day as of superb quality. Collectors of paper money should feel a keen interest in the life history of this artist, whose career began about 1840; this instalment carries him up to the late 'sixties, including a brief account of his notable engravings after various paintings. Some of our older readers may recall having seen a large steel engraving of Bierstadt's "Rocky Mountains," the plate being 17 by 28 inches. This was Smillie's work, finished about 1865, an impressive and captivating scene, rated by experts as the finest steel engraved landscape of the century.

A FIVE FRANC PIECE OF LOUIS PHILIPPE I

By C. ALBERT JACOB, JR., Scarsdale, New York

(From a paper read before the Westchester County Coin Club)

The coin selected as the subject for this paper is the French silver 5 franc piece issued in 1831 during the reign of Louis Philippe I. I found right at the start that my lack of knowledge of the French language was a handicap in attempting research in connection with the coins of France as apparently all of the authoritative volumes on French coinage available at the Museum of the Numismatic Society are written in French. However, a little persistence enabled me finally to solve the significance of the coin's various inscriptions, symbols, etc., and perhaps hearing the results written in English will be helpful to anyone possessing the same coin and having similar difficulty adjusting an Anglo-Saxon mentality to a French text book. The obverse of this coin bears a profile head of Louis Philippe I, who was "King of the French" from 1830 to 1848. The design of the coin was done by Nicolas Pierre Tiolier, who was born in Paris in 1784, and died in 1843. Coins of his design were issued during the reigns of Louis XVIII, Charles X, and Louis Philippe I, and they may be distinguished by a series of symbols he used, differing for each of the reigning monarchs. During the reign of Louis XVIII he used a small head of a horse. During the reign of Charles X a rather fanciful T, and during that of Louis Philippe I, in whom we are interested, a small star. On the obverse of this coin, underneath the shoulder, his name appears in full with initials, N. P. Tiolier. The reverse of the coin has the denomination 5 FRANCS inside of a wreath, together with the date, 1831. At the left and above the date appears the letter A, indicating that this coin was struck at the Paris mint. Above the date at the right is a small anchor, with a smaller letter C superimposed over the shaft. This symbol was used by Jean Pierre Collot, who was Director of the Paris mint from 1821 to 1842. Below the date and directly above the ribbon fastening the wreath together appears the small star, the symbol used by Tiolier. Around the edge of the coin are inscribed the words Dieu Protege La France, with three stars separating the beginning and the end of this inscription, which translated means, "God Protect France."

By far the most conspicuous feature of this particular coin is the bust in profile of Louis Philippe on the obverse. Even allowing for the fact that most artists have a tendency somewhat to idealize their subject, there is no doubt that he was distinguished looking, and carried his kingly laurels in a most fitting manner.

Louis Philippe, though not as famous as many of his predecessors, was nevertheless at times a brilliant monarch. He was the eldest son of Louis Philippe Joseph, Duke of Orleans, and Louise Marie Adelaide de Bourbon, and was born on October 6th, 1773. (Those of you who saw the photo play "Marie Antoinette" will recognize his father as one of the prime villains in the plot who voted for the death penalty for Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette at their trial for treason.) There is a legend to the effect that Louis Philippe was a supposititious child and that his mother was really Maria Stella, Countess of Neuborough. Maria Stella, who apparently was somewhat of an adventuress, claimed to be a legitimate daughter of Philippe, Duke of Orleans, Louis Philippe's father, and according to her version of events, Louis Philippe was her child, his father being one Lorenzo Chiappiani, a village constable in Tuscany. Her story is that in April of 1773, a daughter was born to the Duke and Duchess of Orleans, but as the Duke desired a son in order to prevent a large inheritance from going to his wife's relatives, he bribed the Chiappianis to substitute their newly born son in place of the daughter. Maria Stella was afterwards married to Lord Neuborough, and later on to a Russian count, and she subsequently published a book giving out the story that Louis Philippe was a changeling. Of course her dates were all arranged to bear out her version of the affair, but it was generally regarded as the effort of an adventuress to gain notoriety, and little credence is given her story.

Though I'll continue to refer to him as Louis Philippe, he was known until 1785 as the Duke of Valois. His god-parents were the ill fated Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette. From 1785 on he had the title of Duc de Chartres, and at the age of 16 when the revolution broke out he, like his father, identified himself with the revolutionary faction. He joined the Jacobins and was a member of the National Assembly, and at the age of 18 years a Lieutenant General in the Dragoons. Though ostensibly a staunch Republican, he was implicated in a plot in 1793 to overthrow the Republic and had to leave France in a hurry. His father, who was mixed up in the same affair, contributed his head to the cause and in November, 1793, suffered the same fate that he had helped to bring upon Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette. His father's death made Louis Philippe Duke of Orleans and head of the Orleanists party, which was actively carrying on intrigues to establish him as head of the State in France. To use present day vernacular our hero was "cagey," to say the least, and felt that the best way to insure his getting somewhere with his aspirations was to keep away from "Madame Guillotine," so he decided to stay out of France.

After wandering around the Scandinavian countries for a few years, he finally agreed to go into voluntary exile in America, with the understanding that by doing this his mother and two brothers would be released by the French authorities who had kept them in prison since the Terror. This he did, and I thought it a particularly interesting point to know that a King of France lived in comparative seclusion in Philadelphia for practically three years. Two of his brothers joined him in his exile in Philadelphia, and returned with him to Europe in February of 1800. At that time Napoleon Bonaparte was in power and Louis Philippe, then Duke of Orleans, became reconciled with the exiled King, Louis XVIII, though he refused to join in any military venture to restore the monarchy. In 1809 he married Princess Marie Amelia, daughter of King Ferdinand IV, of Sicily. He remained in that country until Napoleon's abdication, at which time he came back to France and was welcomed by Louis XVIII. His military rank was restored and also the vast Orleans estates, which suddenly transformed him from a person in a somewhat precarious financial position into a nobleman of great wealth.

In his political contacts he adopted a consistently liberal attitude, which was somewhat frowned upon by the nobility and which eventually caused him another two years of exile in England. By the same token he became more and more popular with the middle classes, and in all of his actions he cultivated this following. An example of this is the fact that he insisted on his children being educated in the public schools. He really did little to make himself King beyond sowing the seeds that ultimately ripened into a following, ready to support his cause whenever the psychological moment arrived. This finally came on August 7, 1830, when the Chamber of Deputies by a large majority deposed Charles X, and proclaimed Louis Philippe "King of France by the grace of God and the will of the people."

After becoming King, Louis Philippe followed his original course of cultivating middle class support. He called himself a King of the people and the Royal Palace was declared open at all times for any citizen to come to him with his problems. For a considerable time he was probably the world's champion royal hand shaker. He cared little for the ordinary symbols of regal authority and had the royal coat of arms and the fleur de lis, symbol of French royalty, removed from all of his carriages, etc. The coin that inspired this paper is an excellent example of this particular phase of his nature, for you will notice that the customary crowned shield with the fleur de lis emblem is missing, the reverse having simply the wreath enclosing the date and denomination. His handling of all internal affairs was based on satisfying the numerical majority of his subjects, and his popularity constantly increased. When he felt his position secure, however, he began to tighten the reins, and insisted on his right to run things his own way. When he adopted this attitude he placed himself in a position where he had to accept the responsibility for things that went wrong. We say in this country "A man may be down, but he's never out;" but in France if he starts slipping they see to it that he is out before he knows what happened.

The French temperament, a very volatile characteristic at all times, becomes most enthusiastic at success, and at the same time is equally intolerant of failure. To remain popular with his subjects, Louis Philippe had to maintain a pretty high "batting average," and in the game of running the affairs of a nation there are many opportunities for an occasional strike out. There were internal affairs that irritated the public and lost him part of his following, but the end of Louis Philippe's popularity came through dissatisfaction over his repression of the Press, labor troubles, corruption within the Government, and his attempts at foreign alliances. Some met with public approval, but his arrangement of a marriage between his youngest son Antoine to the sister of Queen Isabella of Spain proved to be the spark that ignited the powder barrel on which his dynasty was unknowingly resting, and in 1848 he lost the support of his people, the monarchy collapsing on February 24th of that year. He and his queen had to leave the Royal Palace in the same precipitous manner that many of his predecessors had made their exit, and with the help of loyal friends they were smuggled out of the country in disguise. Through the assistance of the British Consul at Havre they finally reached England as Mr. and Mrs. Smith. It is said that their flight was made in such suddenness that they left with literally nothing but the clothes they wore. Queen Victoria of England placed a home at their disposal and they lived in England incognito as Count and Countess of Neuilly until, on August 26, 1850, Louis Philippe died.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Buffalo, New York

VIII. ITALY

H. Tuscany—Etruria

In the middle of the sixteenth century the title of Grand Duke of Tuscany was conferred upon a member of the Medici family and remained in the family until the death of the last childless Medici duke in 1737. Then by previous treaty the duchy passed to Francis, Duke of Lorraine, husband of the Habsburg heiress, Maria Theresa. From Francis the dukedom descended to younger sons of the House of Lorraine-Habsburg, coming to Ferdinand III in 1791. The French invaded in 1799, the Grand Duke fled, and a republican government was set up. A counter-revolution drove out the French, but after the Austrian defeat at Marengo, Florence was re-occupied in October of 1800. Tuscany was given to Spain and then in 1801 erected into the Kingdom of Etruria.

The new kingdom was turned over to the Spanish-Bourbon Duke of Parma, who became King Louis I. He died in 1803, leaving the realm to his infant son Charles Louis with his queen Marie Louise of Spain as Regent. In 1807 Napoleon demanded the cession of the dukedom to him, and the Spanish king Charles IV and the Queen Regent complied. From 1807 to 1814 Tuscany was nominally a part of France, ruled by Napoleon's sister Elisa Baciocchi as Grand Duchess of Tuscany.

Ferdinand III returned to his throne in 1814 and had his possessions confirmed with some additions by the Congress of Vienna. Many of the French reforms were retained and his rule proved benevolent. He was succeeded in 1824 by his son Leopold II. The revolutionary spirit of 1848 drove out the Grand Duke and set up a republic. But Leopold returned in 1849 under the protection of the Austrian army and so lost his previous popularity. The war between Piedmont and Austria in 1859 produced another crisis, and when Leopold refused the popular demand for aid to Piedmont, he was again expelled. Another provisional government was established, war declared, and in 1860 Tuscany became a part of the growing Kingdom of Italy.

Two types of shields are found on this series: one for the Lorraine-Habsburg family 1800-1801 and 1814-1859, and the other for the Spanish Bourbons 1801-1807. The first incorporates the arms of Hungary, Bohemia, and the Dukes of Bar on the larger shield with those of Lorraine, Habsburg, and Medici on the smaller. The shield of Louis and his son Charles Louis shows the arms of Anjou, Gonzaga, Lorraine, and Habsburg on the largest shield, Castile and Leon on the next, and Bourbon and Medici on the smallest.

FALL EXPOSITION OF CLUBS

(Report submitted to the New York Numismatic Club at their meeting held on November 10, 1944, on the Exposition held by the Numismatic Clubs and Societies of the Metropolitan Area of New York on the premises of the American Numismatic Society, Broadway and 156th Street, New York City, from October 14th to October 29th inclusive.)

The Exposition this year was by far the best that has been held, and the material exhibited covered practically all subjects in Numismatics. Over five hundred persons attended the exhibit. More than 40 individuals and three Numismatic Societies participated in this exposition. The numismatic material was shown in 37 flat cases and 20 wall cases.

I will mention only a few of the outstanding displays:

Mr. F. C. C. Boyd exhibited a selection from his collection of China, Japan, Siam, Ethiopia, Korea; Double Denomination notes; 1876 C C Mint 20c piece; 1823 quarter; 1827 original and restrike quarter; 1853 quarter without arrows; 1913 Liberty Head nickel and type United States dollars, including the Gobrechts.

Mr. James M. Wade made an extraordinary exhibition of United States paper money, perhaps the finest collection that has ever been exhibited.

The American Numismatic Society exhibited their wonderful collection of gold proof sets.

Mr. Joseph C. Rovensky exhibited an extraordinary collection of Czechoslovakian gold.

Dr. Ives, President of the American Numismatic Society, exhibited Medieval gold, and Mr. Henry Hines exhibited choice specimens of Greek and Roman coins.

Among the other exhibits: The United States gold, silver and copper coins; Pioneer coins; A collection of dollar size coins showing specimens of the United States, Siam, Japan, China, Korea, Ethiopia, Denmark and German Commemorative coins issued prior to the Hitler regime. For the benefit of the classical collectors there were fine specimens of Greek, Syrian, Roman and Palestine coins. Mr. Frederick Knobloch deserves special mention for his painstaking description of his exhibit of the Imperial Roman Alexandrian coinage.

Mr. Damon Douglas exhibited a very excellent collection of New Jersey Colonials.

I would also like to mention the exhibits of Danish coins; French and Medieval medals; English proof sets; an extraordinary collection of Condor tokens; Leper Colony money; recent issues; war casualties; a die of $5 and $10 Richmond, Virginia Notes; and a colorful case that comprised War Decorations and Orders of Chivalry.

Two of our exhibitors who are separated thousands of miles apart in the service of their country were represented at the Exposition. S/Sgt. David M. Bullowa located in Italy exhibited coins and medals collected in Africa and Italy, and Corporal William Steinberg located in Dutch New Guinea exhibited Japanese Invasion currency issued for use in the English and Dutch possessions.

Another very interesting exhibit was the complete set of Mormon Kirtland notes exhibited by Mr. William S. Dewey; a collection of Confederate, Railroad, Canadian, South and Central American, Occupational and Invasion money and Colonial paper money.

A very fine oil painting was exhibited from which the die was engraved of the 4 Sol Peruvian note. The note was exhibited with the painting.

Again the United States Secret Service exhibited a frame made up of counterfeit and raised United States Notes. The Chase Bank Society showed two frames of various counterfeit notes and two cases of numismatic material that pictured animals.

The Clubs and Societies participating were as follows:

The New York Numismatic Club.

The Bronx Coin Club.

The New Jersey Numismatic Society.

The Jersey City Coin Club.

The Brooklyn Coin Club.

The Westchester County Coin Club.

The Chase Bank Coin Society.

The American Numismatic Society.

Forty-two of the members of these organizations had exhibits at the Exposition.

Another attraction during the period of our Exposition was the annual dinner of the Bronx Coin Club held at the Concourse Plaza Hotel, 161st Street and the Concourse on October 24th. About one hundred attended this fine dinner.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

Beginning with the issue for January, 1943, I was given charge of THE NUMISMATIST as Editor and Business Manager, the understanding being that I should devote to it only such time as would not interfere with my regular work. The responsibility was by no means light under such circumstances, but it was fulfilled on the basis originally agreed upon.

As time went on, however, it became increasingly clear that the severe limitations under which the work must be done were unfair to the best interests of the magazine. In view of this fact, I informed the Executive Board at the time of the Chicago convention that I could not continue in this capacity indefinitely, but that I would carry on as usual until other arrangements could be perfected.

The matter has been under consideration since, and the following announcement can now be made:

A Division of Duties

Beginning with the January, 1945, issue, Mr. Stuart Mosher of 95 Fifth Avenue, New York 3, N. Y., will become Editor, and all matters pertaining to his office should be sent him direct. Such manuscripts as are now in my possession, with related correspondence, will be transferred to him at once, and full information given as to future contributions actually promised or under consideration. Reports of Club meetings and current changes in the Organization Directory should likewise be sent Mr. Mosher.

To Non-Member Subscribers

Another change effective at the same time will be the transfer of non-member new and renewal subscriptions to the General Secretary, Lewis M. Reagan, G. P. O. Box 103, Brooklyn 1, N. Y. All such remittances made on and after January 1st should be mailed to Mr. Reagan.

To Our Advertisers

I expect to remain in charge of the advertising section, and the pleasant relations that have been created and maintained during the past two years will, I trust, continue.

I am sure I express the sentiment of the membership in general in wishing Mr. Mosher abundant success in his new responsibility.

The growth of the Association in recent years has been unprecedented—a fact that must have been gratifying to those who have taken a genuine interest in our progress. Directly connected with this should be concern for a persistency of membership—that the ground gained should be held. It seems fully as important to retain those now with us as to secure additional members. THE NUMISMATIST is undeniably a vital factor in maintaining this principle.

Our present extremely small ratio of loss in this respect may fairly be considered as reflecting, in some degree at least, a general approval of our official magazine. Granting this, it by no means obscures the need—nor the possibility—of steady improvement in the future. Our more than four thousand members will welcome, and in varying degrees appreciate the growth in quality and breadth that the years should bring under wise and efficient direction.

BURTON H. SAXTON, A. N. A. No. 921.

A NEW POLICY OF THE ASSOCIATION

Under date of October 19th an important announcement was sent the secretaries of all member clubs over the signature of Damon G. Douglas, acting for the Committee on Papers, originally appointed for the Chicago Convention, but later continued for the remainder of the fiscal year.

The Executive Board, after investigation and discussion, has approved the following policy in connection with THE NUMISMATIST, under three points, quoted from the announcement referred to:

1. Beginning 1945, a silver and bronze medal will be awarded to the writers of the articles judged best and second best.

2. For the year 1944 (and it is intended to continue each year thereafter) a total of $300.00 will be paid in cash awards to the authors of the seven or eight articles judged most meritorious. Details of these awards are being worked out and will soon be announced in The Numismatist.

3. Commencing at once the Editor is authorized to arrange with prospective future contributors that they may receive, as a gift of the Association, a limited number of separately bound reprints of their articles, where the numismatic value in the Editor's opinion warrants. This will be most valuable for such studies as appear serially and thus would be run off separately after the last issue appears and bound with a paper cover with the author's name.

MILWAUKEE COIN CLUB CELEBRATES TENTH ANNIVERSARY

The Milwaukee Coin Club held its tenth anniversary banquet in a private dining room of the Hotel Plankinton on October 27. In addition to a large attendance of members and their wives several out of town guests were present. Among the guests were Glenn Ostrander, Secretary of the Chicago Coin Club; M. Vernon Sheldon, Member of the Board of Governors of the American Numismatic Association and its former General Secretary; Lewis M. Reagan, General Secretary of the American Numismatic Association; Richard S. Yeoman of Racine; and Harold Klein of Hinsdale, Ill.

The principal feature of the meeting was an address by Edward C. Gaulke, the founder of the Club, who told the story of the beginning of the Club and of its early history. Starting with only five members, meeting first in the homes of the members and later in the back room of the jewelry store of Hubert L. Polzer, the Club has now grown to more than 80 members with more than half of the membership present at most of the meetings.

The meeting closed with an auction sale of numerous choice lots.

FROM THE DESK OF THE GENERAL SECRETARY

This space is devoted each month to special announcements by the General Secretary, the answering of some mail that may be of general interest to the membership, and other comments or suggestions. Questions most frequently asked will be answered here from time to time. A few such questions, with their answers, are given below:

1. "Where can I get uncirculated coins at face value?" Coins are placed in circulation mostly by banks which receive them from Federal Reserve Banks. You may be able to get uncirculated coins from your local bank or from a Federal Reserve Bank (if you call for them in person). You may get two specimens of each denomination and mint from the Treasury Department in Washington, D. C. You have to state for what special purpose the coins are desired. A numismatic collection is an acceptable purpose. Cost is face value plus first class postage. You should first write for a list of coins available "for special purposes." There is no charge for the list.

2. "Where can I get proof coins?" Proof coins may be purchased from the United States Mint, Philadelphia, Pa. during the year in which they are made. No proof coins were made in 1943 or 1944 and none is likely to be made until after the war. When coinage is resumed notice to this effect will appear in The Numismatist, with prices and instructions for ordering.

3. "Why does my copy of The Numismatist always arrive late?" Maybe it doesn't. It depends on when you expect to get it. The Numismatist is off the press shortly after the first of each month. It is mailed according to a system intended to result in each member receiving it on the same day. With normal postal delivery it should arrive about the tenth of each month. Second class mail does not usually move as fast as first class mail. Mail service is not normal these days, so that delivery may be somewhat delayed. The inclusion of your postal zone number will help to speed delivery. Your correct and complete address is necessary. Second Class mail is not forwarded. Quite a few copies are returned each month. We can only wait until you inquire about them and send your new address. You should allow at least a month for a notice of a change of address to be effective. It takes some time to reach the master mailing list and for new stencils to be made. When you send in a change of address, give both old and new address and your membership number. Watch for the publication of the change in the second following issue of The Numismatist. Changes of address received in December will be published in the February issue.

4. (For members in the Armed Service). "What is the 'Inactive List?'" The Inactive List is the list of members who, because of their service in the army or navy, have temporarily discontinued their active regular membership in the Association but who expect to resume it upon return to civilian life. Those on this list may be reinstated without payment of dues for the time they were on the Inactive List and previous membership number is retained. While on this list, the privileges of membership are retained except that The Numismatist is not sent. A member must be in good standing at the time he requests that his name be placed on the Inactive List. When requesting reinstatement, please give branch of service, dates of entering and of discharge. Payment of following year's dues must be made at time of reinstatement.

Regarding Coin Clubs

5. "How can I start a coin club?" This is a question very frequently asked and one which I promised to discuss. It should be made clear at the outset that my opinions are personal ones and based mostly on my own experience. Local circumstances may very greatly affect the problem, and a general discussion cannot be expected to answer such special problems. The great increase in the number of coin clubs formed within the past few years is evidence that the answer has been found for those cases. That most of these clubs have continued to grow year after year is a tribute to their founders and indicates that the answer was determined correctly. Before attempting an answer to the question, perhaps a discussion of some other matters should come first.

An organization can grow and prosper only if it serves some purpose desirable to those who participate in it. Most men (and women) are too busy these days to join a club just for the sake of another membership card (and another dues payment to make). Also, size of membership does not mean much if attendance at the meetings is too small. It is the members who attend the meeting who make the club. Most numismatists are intensely interested in their collections. Most numismatists, I have found, like a pleasant social evening. They will attend a meeting, then, for either or both of two reasons: (1) to acquire information about coins, to acquire coins if auction sales are held or other opportunities for buying or selling present themselves; or (2) just to have a good time talking about coins (among other things), showing their new acquisitions or prize pieces, looking over the exhibits of their fellow collectors, and making plans for special events for the same purposes. A successful club must offer both of these inducements, or at least specialize in the one of greatest interest to their members.

A successful coin club must grow from within; it cannot be assembled. Must have competent leadership, changed frequently. A coin club needs a constitution, setting forth the procedures for election of officers and members, but otherwise kept in the background, preferably filed someplace. An overabundance of parliamentary wrangling will ruin most any meeting except possibly a session of Congress. Keep discussion of business matters to a minimum. Most of these things should be handled by committees.

What about auctions? Depends on how they are conducted. Clubs in metropolitan New York don't have them and don't want them. There are sufficient opportunities to attend auction sales conducted by dealers. In smaller places an auction sale after a meeting is probably desirable. It gives the members a chance to dispose of their unwanted duplicates and to acquire other more desirable pieces. Collectors should not be encouraged to buy "junk." Such pieces should be kept out of auction sales at clubs. Sales, consisting of a moderate number of desirable lots, conducted by members of the club, with material furnished only by members of the club, sold only to persons present at the meeting, and for cash, with a small profit to the club, have proved to be very stimulating to the success of the club and to attendance at the meeting.

It is my opinion that the auction sale, if there is one, should not be the principal feature of the meeting. The principal feature should be the exhibits. Each member should be encouraged to bring an exhibit and asked to discuss it. Gives each member a chance to have an active part in the meeting. Also gives each member a chance to see what others are collecting, and how they take care of it. No one can collect everything but every collector will like to see coins not in his own collection. Sometimes give an idea to a member who is wondering what to collect next. At annual conventions of the Association, there is some business, there is an auction sale, there is buying and selling—but more important than any of this are the exhibits. This feature is the one that attracts the most attention, and very rightly so. There is also the social aspects. Everyone has a good time, meeting friends, making new friends, talking about coins and collectors. These are the elements that make a successful coin club. Same thing on a smaller scale.

Now for the original question: "How can we have this in our own city?" Most coin clubs are started through the special efforts of one or two persons who assume the initiative. There is a meeting held in the home of the organizer. A social evening, usually, where the talk will quickly turn to numismatics if there is a numismatist present. A few collectors getting together and discussing the possibilities of a club. A second meeting arranged, with the group enlarged to include other collectors known to those attending the first meeting. More talk—and then the actual organization, with the meeting scheduled for some public place.

Many coin clubs have found that they operate most successfully when their meeting is preceded by a dinner. A private dining room in a restaurant where the meeting can be held afterward in the same room. The talk around the table during the dinner serves several purposes. Gives some members a chance to discuss informally matters which might otherwise be brought up during the meeting. Gives committees a chance to discuss their problems prior to the meeting. Furnishes the social aspect of the meeting, and this is very important. Gives the club a chance to entertain and introduce a visiting speaker. Gives some of the more impatient members a chance to do a little buying and selling privately—and it is most important that this be not done during the meeting itself—and makes it possible to start the meeting with the full attendance present. When a time is announced for a meeting some always come late. This isn't serious when they are merely late for dinner. They can catch up by eating faster (with some risk to their digestive system), and reach the dessert and coffee at the same time as those sitting down first. This plan serves another purpose. It can usually be arranged (in normal times at least) that the meeting room is provided without cost to the club by the restaurant in return for the extra patronage given by the dinner. Otherwise the club may have the expense of rental for a meeting place. When the meeting is preceded by a dinner it may be desirable to provide that those members who do not wish to eat there may come to the meeting after the dinner. If no great number take advantage of this the restaurant would probably not object.

The things that make for greatest success in a coin club can best be met if the club is not too large. There are some very successful large clubs but the problem is more difficult there. (The Chicago Coin Club may take exception to this. That Club is probably the largest in the country, with average attendance about 80, and it is very successful. They didn't get that way by accident. They have had competent leadership, and all of the elements mentioned above which are required for success.) I believe that a successful small club can grow into a successful large club, but it must be first successful as a small club and not grow too fast.

Whether or not you have in your own City the possibilities of a successful coin club, I don't know. If you have at least two or three collectors who like to associate with each other you have what it takes to make a start. Increase in membership to start with should be by personal invitation, and then enlarged. Invite prospective members to at least two meetings before electing them to membership. Most persons who have worthwhile hobbies have other desirable characteristics, and if your membership is properly guarded you will never need to use the procedure mentioned in your constitution for expelling a member.

This may or may not be the answer to the original question. At best it can be only a partial answer. Space does not permit a more lengthy discussion at this time. The General Secretary will be pleased to receive comments from those who either agree or disagree. Possibly with a sufficiently wide discussion of the problem the whole answer may be found. Comments received will be discussed in future issues of The Numismatist.

The General Secretary takes this means and this opportunity of sending the Season's Greetings to all of the membership. May each of you enjoy a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year!

LEWIS M. REAGAN, General Secretary.

Have you secured your copy of our 50-Year Index? ($1.00.)

A SWISS COMMEMORATIVE

The attractive silver 5 franc piece illustrated has just come to hand, and from Mr. Charles E. Rosset, New York, Vice Consul, in the Consulate General of Switzerland, we have the reason for its issue:

"The coin was struck in commemoration of the 500th anniversary of the Battle of St. Jakob an der Birs, which took place on August 26, 1444, and at which Swiss infantrymen numbering 1500 effectively withstood the onslaught of 16,000 Armagnac troops of the King of France. At sundown 1,300 Swiss lay dead on the battlefield. Impressed by the heroism and gallantry of the Swiss, the King of France withdrew his troops and concluded a military alliance with his erstwhile adversaries."

The inscriptions on the obverse and reverse are clearly shown; that on the edge is DOMINUS PROVIDEBIT.

FALL CONVENTION I. N. A.

The Iowa Numismatic Association met at Davenport on October 28 and 29 in its usual semi-annual session, with headquarters at the Hotel Blackhawk. There were 70 registrations, excellent exhibits, a banquet Saturday evening, with a very fine address following by Dr. J. Hewitt Judd of Omaha, member of the Board of Governors of the A. N. A., his subject being "U. S. Gold Patterns," illustrated generously with numerous specimens from his own collection.

Other members of the official family of the A. N. A. were Lewis M. Reagan of Brooklyn, General Secretary, M. Vernon Sheldon of Chicago and Loyd Gettys of Davenport, members of the Board. The last named is likewise President of the Iowa Association.

Among the exhibits were two very large frames secured by Mr. Gettys from the Secret Service, containing specimens (printed on one side only) of the large and small size U. S. bills, denominations running from $1 to $100,000.

At the business meeting Sunday morning a motion (by M. A. Radke of Des Moines) was adopted favoring the establishment by the Bureau of the Mint of a source of supply of coins direct from the various Mints to collectors and dealers, similar to the Philatelic Agency in Washington.

A number of dealers were present: Lu Riggs of Cincinnati, the Brandt brothers from Celina, F. K. Saab, St. Louis, A. E. Bebee, Chicago, Paul and Arthur Kagin, Des Moines, and J. B. Simon of Davenport.

WITH THE DEALERS

In Mr. Mehl's page advertisement in this issue are quoted some amazingly high prices for a few of the rarities in his Fred E. Olsen sale of November 7. The printed list of prices realized has not yet been received.

On October 6th and 7th the Numismatic Gallery sold the Charles Epstein Collection, especially strong in U. S. silver and minor coinage, with some gold, paper money and patterns, plus a number of foreign lots, silver and gold. There were in addition 127 lots of numismatic books and journals. A review of the prices realized would indicate a satisfactory total. Some examples follow:

A 1794 half dollar (ex. Col. Green Collection) unc., H. No. 1, $120. 1795, unc., H. No. 3, $30. Same, H. No. 7, $40. Same, H. No. 23, 3 leaves, $92.50. 1815, XF (chop mark below chin—used in China), $23.75; same VF, $21. 1821 proof, $48. 1889 over 8, unc., $62.50.

A proof Isabella quarter brought $8. A 1796 half cent pole to cap, F obv., $190. A 1796 dime, XF, $65; 1798, XF, $63. Among the quarters the 1878-S, unc., brought $170.

The rare 1820 half eagle, curled base 2, unc., was bid in at $300, and the 1799 eagle at $130.

Among the books, an original Doughty (cents) was secured for $37.50. Kosoff's Pearl catalogue brought $11; S. Hudson Chapman's "U. S. Cents of 1794," $17, and George H. Clapp's "U. S. Cents of 1798-99," $35, "Syrian Medallions," by Sir Arthur Evans, $30.

COMMUNICATION

Dallas, Texas, November 8, 1944.

To the Editor:

Please permit me to enter strong protests to three practices I consider unfair to collectors who purchase or sell coins, etc., at auction via sale catalogs. These practices are:

1. The selling of auction catalogs (by dealers);
2. Charging both the buyer and seller a commission;
3. Overgrading of coins.

The dealer under no condition should hope to conduct a mail auction without various expenses to himself. The practice of charging for auction catalogs started when a dealer felt he offered an unusually valuable collection that required a nice catalog. Certainly, catalogs cost money, but the more valuable the collection offered the more justified is the dealer in putting out a nice catalog; commissions will automatically offset the increased cost. The practice is fast bordering on a racket, I think, and personally I don't intend to buy catalogs for bidding on what is a "pig in a poke" practice at best. Dealers certainly now are charging for catalogs that are anything but works of art, and their distribution soon will be cut in half by this practice; then the seller will be hurt most of all.

When bidding for coins offered by dealers who charge the buyers small commissions, the bidder nearly always allows for the buying charge, and bids a little lower than he would if he were not being charged five per cent, or some such commission, for having the bid "executed" by the dealer. Again the seller is the principal loser. To my way of thinking only the seller should pay a commission.

Many dealers consistently overgrade coins by one full grade, apparently with the thought—and hope—that the purchaser will keep them anyway. Unless many dealers rave about a coin and call it "brilliant," the purchaser should expect an extremely fine coin, where merely "uncirculated" is used in the description. A coin either is uncirculated or it isn't, even if it isn't brilliant.

I do not believe that the present boom in coins should be abused.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

ATLANTA COIN CLUB—The 311th meeting of the Club was held Wednesday, November 1, at the Henry Grady Hotel. The meeting was called to order by the President, Paul S. Johnson, with 34 members and seven visitors present.

This was one of the most interesting meetings of the year. We had as featured visitors Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Morris of Homewood, Alabama, both life members of the A. N. A., and exhibitors at the recent A. N. A. convention. Mrs. Morris was known to everyone at the convention as "Miss Alabama."

They had consented to exhibit some of their collection at our meeting, and what an exhibit it was! Two long tables covered with COMPLETE SETS of all the minor coins in UNC. and PROOF, and COMPLETE SETS of all the bills in CHISP UNC. No person there, possibly, had time in one meeting to look at all the specimens on exhibit. Some of the finest specimens in existence were shown.

Mr. Morris, in a short talk, told how he started collecting coins as a kid of 15, and found later he had to buy over again to secure Unc. and proof coins.

Pierce H. James presented a "Ten Years Hence" paper, pertaining to coins moulded in plastic and showed samples of proof 5c, Unc. and corroded large cents, and 1943 zinc coated cts. It is predicted that collectors will protect any and all coins and bills in the future with a coating of plastic.

Mr. M. C. Kiser reported finding a 1927-S buffalo nickel, Indian with goat.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta recently put in circulation some 1921-P Morgan type silver dollars. Quite a number of them have die breaks on obverse or reserve, some have die breaks on both. A few of the new one dollar bills with the red S and the red R are beginning to show up in Atlanta, all nicely crumpled and folded.

Officers for 1945 for the Atlanta Coin Club will be elected at the next meeting.

—PIERCE H. JAMES, JR., Secretary.

ANDERSON, IND. COIN CLUB—The 46th meeting of the Anderson Coin Club occurred Nov. 2, with President Theo. Stewart in charge. Mr. Francis Dunn, a visitor from the Indianapolis Coin Club, displayed a set of Connecticut Tercentenary medals.

Mr. Harry Blackmore displayed a very rare and interesting coin mould of China from the Wang-Mang Dynasty: 9 to 23 A. D.

A letter from the A. N. A. Paper Committee in regard to prospective papers for submission to THE NUMISMATIST was read, and several members expressed interest in this project.

A quiz was held and appropriate prizes awarded.

—PERRY F. GORMAN, SECRETARY.

BAY CITIES COIN CLUB—The eighth regular meeting of the Club was held in the Santa Monica Commercial & Savings Bank, Fourth and Arizona, Wednesday, November 9, President Harry Canann, presiding. There were nine members and three visitors present. A very interesting collection of "hard to get" uncirculated coins was exhibited by W. L. Gunn. This consisted of coins from ½c to $1.00 inclusive. Some were very rare varieties, prior to 1800. Mr. Harry Einstein and Dr. O. K. Grier exhibited some fine specimens of gold coins.

Following a discussion by various members of their experiences with dealers, it was unanimously agreed that this be made a regular order of business at each meeting, so that members may exchange their experiences.

—H. A. DAVIDSON, Secretary.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular monthly meeting of the BNS was held at Burroughs Foundation on Monday Evening, October 30, President Chell-Frost in the chair and 12 members present.

Pamphlets from the Albany Numismatic Society: (Titles) U. S. Commemoratives (half dollars), Canadian Coppers, Albany Church Pennies, and Large U. S. Notes, were received by the Society and accepted with pleasure, and the Secretary was instructed to send a letter of thanks.

Mr. Pond gave a report on the progress made in assimilating the data required for the publication of a Society Manual. He had a draft with him and outlined his ideas on the printing and publishing details, suggesting about 300 copies be printed. On motion Mr. Pond was authorized to place the material in the printer's hands.

Mr. Tuttle, of Worcester, Mass., spoke briefly on Swedish silver coins, of which he had an admirable display. He followed the sequence of Swedish rulers as portrayed on the coins exhibited, giving historical facts about them. He was given a vote of thanks by the members.

Mr. Schuhmacher suggested that a complete list of numismatic material in the Society's possession be made, the curator offered to bring in a list.

Mr. Grant of Providence exhibited an 1871 proof set, an 1856 Flying Eagle cent in brilliant proof, and an 1877 proof cent, untouched for over 30 years. Mr. Chell-Frost showed 1937 1c and 5c reeded edge U. S. pieces.

After welcoming guests, members and officers of neighboring clubs, Mr. Deas introduced the three principal speakers of the evening; Mr. Farran Zerbe, Prof. Thomas O. Mabbott, and Mr. Sydney P. Noe. Their talks, which included interesting personal experiences and humorous anecdotes, were well received by the assembled guests. The meeting was then adjourned for the inspection of a large number of excellent exhibits covering a wide range of numismatic activities.

Upon report of the banquet committee it was voted to hold the annual banquet at the Ruth Clark Tea Room, and Mr. Jorgenson, Miss Charles and Mr. Mogi were appointed a committee to make the necessary arrangements. Meredith D. Gray was introduced as a guest and admitted to membership in the club.

Upon completion of business matters, the Club adjourned to the hearing room where Mr. Chrest Lazaro had arranged an exhibit which will go down in Club history as one of the most remarkable displays ever presented here. Mr. Lazaro's collection, which has been appraised at close to half a million dollars, has taken him some forty years to assemble, and proves that he is a born collector and hobbyist, not only in respect to numismatics but in many other lines. His display of gold alone was nothing less than remarkable, covering almost the entire field of coinage from the early Greek and Roman staters and aurei, down through Byzantine and medieval times to and including the present age, and representing all countries and periods. The collection of United States gold included the commemorative pieces, Clark Gruber, Pikes Peak, and many early and private issues rarely seen. Also on display were virtually complete collections of United States currency, silver and copper, including both common and rare types of every kind. Mr. Lazaro is also an ardent stamp collector and his exhibits in this field were noteworthy. In addition to all this there were interesting displays of watches, pipes, guns, medals, badges, miniature shoes and countless other objects. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Lazaro for his remarkable presentation.

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—President Hooper called the 113th meeting of the Club to order at 8:15 P. M. in The Benjamin Franklin Hotel, Phila., on Thursday evening November 9th, with 30 members and guests present.

It was suggested by Roscoe F. Ballard in motion form that a committee of three members be appointed to promote the reading of papers at our meetings, and that we extend an award for the best paper of the year. This was agreed upon unanimously.

R. F. Ballard, the editor of "The News Letter" which is sent monthly to the members in the service and to those who are sick asked for volunteers to draw an appropriate sketch for each issue, and received two.

The exhibits of the evening follow:

R. T. Hooper: The 1808-G 3-half cent. This is the only specimen known. Gilbert's photo is of this coin.

R. S. Maisson: The Sept. 26th issue of "Pick" magazine featuring "The History of Our Cent."

E. H. Moody: A restrike of the Confederate half dollar. This coin is one which was struck from the original dies by Scott & Co.

W. A. Schick, Jr.: A 1944 Lincoln cent twice the thickness of the regular coin.

A. Sipe: A Central Africa spear shaped coin from the Cameroon sections.

Each exhibitor explained briefly some interesting points about his item on display.

At our December meeting John M. Enburg will read us a paper on "U. S. Gold Coins."

The evenings auction was conducted by Wm. A. Schick, Jr.

—ARTHUR SIPE, Secretary.

RACINE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 80th monthly meeting of the Society was held Friday, Nov. 10, at the Y. M. C. A., with Joseph Martin presiding. Twelve members were present.

Mr. Richard Yeoman, chairman of the committee appointed to form an association of coin collectors in the North Shore District reported that the first meeting of the association will be held in Racine, the date to be announced later.

Mr. Joseph Martin had on exhibit some pioneer gold pieces, consisting of a $20 date 1853 Kellog & Co.; $5 date 1849 Moffat & Co.; $2½ date 1861 Pikes Peak.

—ALFRED GROSS, Secretary.

RICHMOND COIN CLUB—The forty fourth regular meeting of the Club was held on Wednesday, November 8, at the Byrd Park Club House with President Lewis in the chair. There were six members and two guests present.

We received an inquiry with regard to our meetings from one of our A. N. A. members who is in the service and stationed at a nearby camp. The Secretary was instructed to answer this letter and the Club heartily extends an invitation to all servicemen who are interested in collecting to attend any or all of our meetings.

Mr. Lewis then turned the program over to Mr. Mallory, who gave a very interesting talk on types and the best way for a new collector to begin his collection in order to keep within his financial means. He displayed his type sets of U. S. coins and paper money as well as Fractional Currency and proof sets. The talk was thoroughly enjoyed by all present and was followed by a discussion of comments and experiences by all present.

—MRS. HELEN G. LEWIS, Secretary.

SPRINGFIELD COIN CLUB—326th meeting, November 8th held at the Museum of Fine Arts, President Wheeler presiding, with ten members present.

It was decided to have an auction for the benefit of the Club at the December meeting.

A letter from the A. N. A. regarding the awarding of Medals to writers of articles judged best and second best. No action was taken.

A motion was made after much discussion that the dues be raised.

It was decided to have a dinner meeting in January.

The exhibit was made by Mr. MacIntosh and consisted of the following pieces: German paper money, Conn. Tercentenary Commemorative medals, a complete Panama Pacific Commemorative set, a complete set of Commemorative half dollars, gold Stella $4.00 and other gold coins, including some proofs.

—W. W. WILLARD, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 99th meeting of the Club was held Oct. 26, at Y. M. C. A. club rooms, with Pres. Worth presiding. Twenty-one members and six visitors were in attendance. The committee on the banquet commemorating the one-hundredth meeting of the club reported on their plans, and a large part of the meeting was taken up with discussions on how to make this occasion a great success. It will be held Nov. 29, at 7:00 P. M. in the New Washington Hotel banquet room. The program includes two speakers, fine large displays, entertainment and an auction.

Mr. Bibler spoke on his collection of "depression" money in use in Portland during the panic of 1907, and the clearing house script which was ready for use by the banks in 1933—if and when the banks closed.

Mr. Saemon: A fine collection of Greek coins, especially appropriate at this time as Greece is now in the process of liberation by the Allied Nations. The coins were all struck before the Christian era. Also, coins of Phillip II, Alexander the Great, Ptolemy, Darius, Antiochus, Syracuse, Corinth, Rhodes, Tarantum, Thebes and others. Mr. Seamon is an ardent collector of ancient coins, and his wide knowledge of them enables him to present an interesting study.

Mr. Fouts: An unusual collection of misstruck and freak coins. The most remarkable of these was a 1944S cent struck in silver. The Club previously has had the opportunity of viewing a cent struck in silver—1943S mint, and which closely resembled the steel cent of that year.

Mr. Talmadge exhibited a fifty peso gold coin of Mexico.

—HENRY H. ZECKSER, Secretary.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB—The November meeting of The Western Maryland Coin Club was held on the 15th in the Central Y. M. C. A., Cumberland, at 8:00 P. M. There were present at this meeting an attendance of 32 including eight guests. The meeting was called to order by President Hugh G. Funkhouser.

Mr. Joseph B. Stack of New York was present, and made a most instructive and inspiring talk. He stressed the point that collectors should specialize, and that they should know their coins. He also talked especially about the early American Colonial coins, and illustrated his talk with a most unusual selection of Colonial coins in perfect condition. Many of these coins had never been seen before by many of our members, and consequently were a real treat. Mr. Stack also displayed a most handsome set of three dollar gold, Pioneer and other gold.

—MARTIN L. JOHNSON, Secretary.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular meeting was held in the Carnegie Museum Nov. 7, with eight members and three visitors present.

A very interesting round table discussion was held on "Coin Collecting—Why?"

Exhibits:

W. W. Woodside: 33 counterstamped and cut coins and tokens in silver and copper.

Earl Coatsworth: About 50 freak Unc. U. S. coins, 1 to 50c.

Dr. Gillis: Spanish dollar with counterstamp of Geo. III; cent enclosed in plastic; counterfeit half dollar; crown of Leopold "The Hogmouth."

Sidney K. Eastwood: 5 Confederate notes, assorted counterstamped pieces.

John Kachmer: Fractional Currency.

T. W. Peters: 25 U. S. freak coins.

W. C. Piper: 8 French cathedral medals, Martin Luther medal, Gutenberg medal, Mercier medal 1914, Washington Cabinet of Medals US Mint, Massachusetts Bay Tercentenary 1630-1930.

—T. W. PETERS, Secretary.

WESTERN RESERVE NUMISMATIC CLUB—The 284th meeting of the Club was held at the Cartel Hotel, Wednesday, November 8th, with 34 members and guests present.

Exhibits were made by the following members, who briefly described them:

W. F. Beckwith: President McKinley, President Lincoln, and Hannibal Hanlin medals.

E. G. Bell: 15 various medals of copper, bronze and silver. All handsome and uncirculated.

Fred Hahlen: Pictures of Invasion money from Life Magazine. Wilkie, Roosevelt, Hoover, Dewey, NRA and Liberty Loan buttons. Two Jackson tokens 1837.

Joseph Simko: One Netherland Indies note, printed by the American Bank Note Co.

A. P. Spencer: Set of Roman bronze, showing the devaluation of coinage following the Punic Wars: As, Semis, Triens, Sextans, Unica.

—HARLEY L. FREEMAN, Secretary.

A COIN QUIZ ON THE AIR

On Thursday evening, November 9th, there occurred a battle of wits over Radio Stations KTRH (Houston) and WWL (New Orleans) in a Coin Quiz between the collectors of Houston and New Orleans.

The former group was represented by A. J. Mitula, Ralph Verson, G. D. Beard and Ben Feder, with C. D. Supple standing by as an alternate. The names of the New Orleans collectors have not been reported, beyond the fact that they were interested by Mrs. L. P. Niklaus, who organized the program.

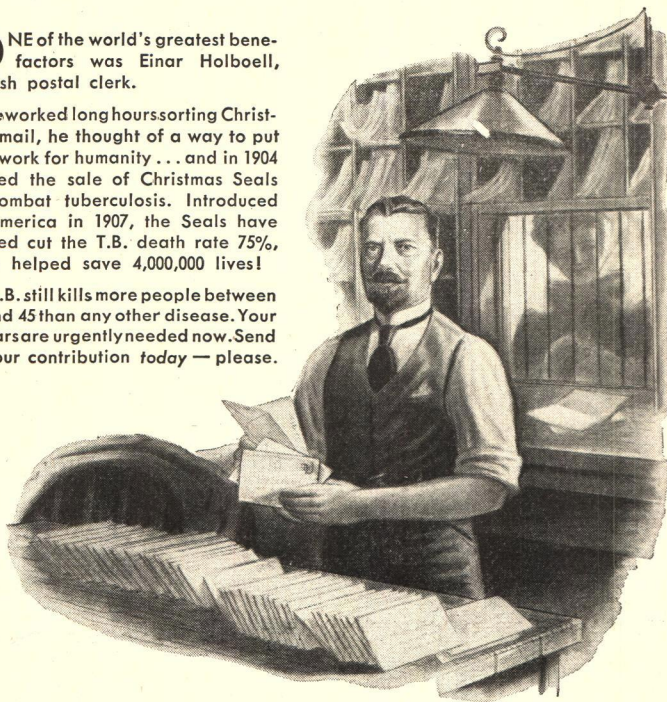

Houston won; and as a result of this novel publicity, a local coin club is being organized there.

AN OPEN LETTER

Dear Fellow Numismatists:

By the time you read this my new catalogue should have come to your hand, IF your name is on my mailing list. Incidentally, all those members of the A. N. A. are on my mailing list who earlier asked for my catalogues, or who were indicated in the Directory as being interested in ancient or earlier European coins or modern foreign gold coins.

My new catalogue of over 50 pages contains:

The Byzantine Empire

Barbaric Imitations

Artistic medals

Greek and Roman coins (new acquisitions only)

Modern gold coins (Latin America and Europe)

all reasonably priced and carefully described. There are many items for the beginner as well as highest rarities which would be the pride of the finest cabinets of the world.

My catalogues, altogether four, deal with all sections of Greek, Roman and Byzantine coins, medals of the Renaissance and later periods, and a vast variety of European mediaeval and later coins in gold, silver and copper. Owing to their completeness and careful description they are now used by a growing number of collectors and colleagues. They are yours—free of charge—merely for the asking, and I am sure they will render you a service and enable you to find material for which you have long been searching.

Numismatically yours,

NUMISMATIC FINE ARTS

EDWARD GANS

TO OUR ADVERTISERS

A number of comments have been received from collectors suggesting that when coins in rolls are offered, the number per roll be stated in every case. This would seem reasonable, especially since not all rolls contain the same number, and also because two different sizes of rolls are used in many banks for the same denomination.

Hereafter, will our advertisers please adopt this suggestion. New collectors especially will appreciate it.

COUNTERFEITING

by LAURENCE DWIGHT SMITH

THE Secret Service, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and the United States Mint have cooperated with the author to make possible this clear and complete exposition of the making and the counterfeiting of United States currency. An outstanding feature of the book is a genuine engraving shown together with a skilful "counterfeit" of it—comparison provides all the information essential to the detection of fake currency.
